EDITORIAL OPINIONS

Remember what the sacrifice gives us

As the gloom of winter withers under resplendent colors of flowering blooms, blue skies and green grass, we are reminded that Memorial Day will soon arrive. To me, Memorial Day always suggests manicured cemeteries, solemn devotion to tradition and picnics in parks.

It is a time of vivid contrasts - brighter red is the poppy against the white stone; and so too is "Taps" on a clear day. But it seems this crisp contrast exists even in our thoughts and deeds. How dare, we ask, can the skies be bright and blue when our feelings are dark and gray? Burdened by many responsibilities, we sometimes even chose to burden ourselves more with guilt as we wonder, how can we enjoy the picnic on green grass or the laughter of children on such a day as this?

Don't let solemn devotion to tradition enslave happiness. Chose to smile when recalling those who have died for freedom because they died to protect liberties that allow us to attend the church of our choice, gather with others in public places, vote for whomever we choose, speak our mind, and even have picnics in parks.

We urge you to remember to observe Memorial Day, and above all, enjoy all the liberties afforded by sacrifice.

LETTERS

To the Editor:

Memorial Day: what exactly is it? When asking the average American what they will be doing for Memorial Day, they respond, "heading to the lake," "going fishing," or "spending time catching up." These are great answers, yet, not the ones that we should be verbalizing.

Traditional observance of Memorial Day has diminished over the years. Many Americans have forgotten the meaning and traditions of Memorial Day. At many cemeteries, the graves of the fallen are increasingly forgotten or neglected. Most people no longer remember the proper flag etiquette for the day. Many people think the day is for honoring any and all dead; however, Memorial Day commemorates U.S. men and women who have died in military service to their country. It began first to honor soldiers who died during the American Civil War and after World War I, it expanded to include those who died in any war or military action.

To help re-educate and remind Americans of the true meaning of Memorial Day, the "National Moment of Remembrance" resolution was passed in December 2000 which asks that at 3 p.m. local time, for all Americans "to voluntarily and informally observe in their own way a moment of remembrance and respect, pausing from whatever they are doing for a moment of silence or listening to 'Taps.'"

While I would never ask you to give up your long weekend at the lake, or that special fishing trip with your friends, please take a moment at 3 p.m. and reflect on why we have the liberties and freedom that we do here in America. It is because all gave some and some gave all.

Prayer for Peace, Memorial Day, 2007

A Proclamation by the President of the United States of America

On Memorial Day, Americans pause with solemn gratitude and deep respect for all our fallen service men and women who have given their lives for our country and our freedom.

Through the generations, the courageous and selfless patriots of our Armed Forces have secured our liberty and borne its great and precious cost. When it has mattered most, patriots from every corner of our nation have taken up arms to uphold the ideals that make our country a beacon of hope and freedom for the entire world. By answering the call of duty with valor and unrelenting determination, they have set a standard of courage and idealism that inspires us all.

All Americans honor the memory of the lives that have been lost in defense of our freedom. Our nation mourns them, and their example of strength and perseverance gives us resolve. We are also thankful to those who have stood by our service men and women in times of war and times of peace.

Today, the members of our Armed Forces follow in a proud tradition handed down to them by the heroes that served before them. They are protecting our Nation, advancing the blessings of freedom, and laying the foundation for a more peaceful tomorrow through service that exemplifies the good and decent character of our nation. America is grateful to all those who have worn the uniform of the Armed Forces of the United States, and we will never forget their sacrifices for our liberty.

On Memorial Day, we honor all those who have fallen by remembering their noble sacrifice for freedom. We also pray for our troops, their families, and for the peace we all seek.

In respect for their devotion to America, the Congress, by a joint resolution approved on May 11, 1950, as amended (64 Stat. 158), has requested the president to issue a proclamation calling on the people of the United States to observe each Memorial Day as a day of prayer for permanent peace and designating a period on that day when the people of the United States might unite in prayer. The Congress, by Public Law 106-579, has also designated the minute beginning at 3 p.m. local time on that day as a time for all Americans to observe the National Moment of Remembrance.

NOW, THEREFORE, I, GEORGE W. BUSH, President of the United States of America, do hereby proclaim Memorial Day, May 28, 2007, as a day of prayer for permanent peace, and I designate the hour beginning in each locality at 11 a.m. of that day as a time to unite in prayer. I also ask all Americans to observe the National Moment of Remembrance beginning at 3 p.m., local time, on Memorial Day. I encourage the media to participate in these observances. I also request the governors of the United States and the Commonwealth of Puerto Rico, and the appropriate officials of all units of government, to direct that the flag be flown at half staff until noon on this Memorial Day on all buildings, grounds, and naval vessels throughout the United States, and in all areas under its jurisdiction and control. I also request the people of the United States to display the flag at half staff from their homes for the customary forenoon period.

IN WITNESS WHEREOF, I have hereunto set my hand this fifteenth day of May, in the year of our Lord two thousand seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America the two hundred and thirty-first.

GEORGE W. BUSH

Warroad Chamber to host Chili Cook-off

Fine-tune your chili recipe, and talk to your family, friends, guys from the deer camp, co-workers, church group, and get your team lined up for the Warroad Area Chamber of Commerce Chili Cook-off. The cook-off is set for Wednesday, July 4 at the beach in Warroad. Cooking will start at noon, and will be open to the public for chili tasting and judging at 4:45 p.m.

Why would anyone want to compete in a Chili Cook-off? Warroad Chili event organizer Keith Cumming answered, "I always thought I made some pretty good chili, and entering a Chili Cook-off would be one way to prove it. At my first competition, I finished seventh out of 23 teams, which I think was pretty respectable. But what confirms what you've known all along is when complete strangers sample your chili and tell you it's the best they've tasted as they drop their People's Choice vote in your cup."

Cumming has found that many people find the Showmanship competition the most fun part of a Chili Cook-off. Teams dress up and decorate their booths in a theme. He's seen pirates, hillbillies, deer hunters, Elvis lookalikes, chefs, and even tie dye guys. One team from Stephen wrote and performed its own theme song.

Some teams face off on a direct challenge. At the Chili Cook-off, the challenge is between the Warroad and Roseau fire departments. At last year's Cook-off, Roseau Fire Chief Craig McMillan said if his team won the People's Choice Award, he would shave his head at the 2007 Cook-off. Somebody forgot to tell McMillan to be careful what you wish for because the Roseau Fire Department team won the People's Choice Award and McMillan will get his head shaved before the start of this year's Cook-off.

To find out more and get your entry blank, call Keith at (218) 469-1489 or Kathie at the Warroad Chamber office at 1-800-328-4455, or go log onto www.warroad.org

Construction to begin on Hwy. 89

The Minnesota Department of Transportation asks motorists to slow down and be alert for construction on Highway 89. Construction will start Monday, June 4 from the northern limits of Wannaska to the junction with Highway 11 in Roseau. The project is expected to be complete by mid July depending upon weather conditions.

Shawn Groven, MnDOT project engineer, said the work consists of culvert replacements, turn lane construction and a bituminous overlay with bituminous milling within the city of Roseau.

Motorists will encounter intermittent delays with alternating use of a single traffic lane controlled by flagging operations.

Area runners compete in Fargo Marathon

Many athletes from throughout the region participated in the Fargo Marathon and related events Saturday, May 19. In all, over 8,000 athletes from throughout the United States participated in the event.

The overall winner of the marathon, a 26.2 mile race that wound its way past scenic neighborhoods and the Red River, was Chad Wallin of Tucson, Ariz. Wallin is originally from Minot, N.D. This is the second time he has won this race. Wallin completed the race in a time of 2:31:20.

The overall winner of the women's marathon was Valerie Gortmaker of Omaha, Neb., in 2:50. Gortmaker completed the event and even had enough energy to go back out on the course and jog the last mile of the half marathon with her mother.

The weather is always a factor in the Fargo Marathon. During the first Fargo Marathon, three years ago, it snowed. At the start of the second Marathon, last year, it rained and hailed. Friday, the day before this year's marathon, the daytime high temperature topped 85-degrees Fahrenheit. During the night, it rained and a cold front moved in. At the start of the race the next morning, runners experienced temperatures hovering around 45-degrees Fahrenheit, and 10 to 25 mile per hour winds blowing out of the northwest. The wind gave runners a boost as several miles at the beginning of the race took runners down scenic residential areas south of the Fargo Dome where the race started. But the wind added to the challenging distance on the way back to the finish.

Despite the withering weather, the race continues to grow. This year, over 8,000 runners participated in the events that make up the Fargo Marathon. Runners often say its success is due to it being a flat course, being a well organized event, the many race volunteers, and crowds lining the race route.

Participants in the Fargo Marathon from this region included: Thief River Falls - Pat Brickson, 38, 400 of 11881, 62 in division, 3:53:16; St. Hilaire - Greg Bulver, 53, 1116 of 1181, 79 in division, 5:41:04; Roseau - Russ Sortenson, 48, 118, 12th in division, 3:23:47; John Letexier, 38, 1076, 131, 5:25:01; Karlstad - Nick Amb, 38, 671, 110, 4:16:39; Newfolden - Kent Warne, 38, 211, 35th, 3:36:18; Lori Warne, 38, 462, 19th, 3:58:13; Brooks - Charlene Lee, 48, 609, 18th, 4:12:40.

Prowlers sweep in individuals

Singles and doubles titles were added to the team championship as Thief River Falls completed a sweep of 2007 Section 8A boys high school tennis honors.

Wednesday, a day after Thief River Falls breezed through the team portion of the tournament at Park Rapids, players returned to the same courts for individual competition, with the Prowlers' Jacob Engelstad taking the singles crown and Cody Bottem-Jordan Swanson forming a first place doubles team.

Joining Engelstad and Bottem-Swanson in the individual portion of the Class A state tournament will be a second Thief River Falls doubles team of Corey Horien-Chase Haviland, who lost to their teammates in the Section 8A finals and beat Crookston's Luke Biermaier-Cody Brekken in the state-qualifying true-second match.

Early lead nets 9-3 win in 8AAA debut

■ TRF softball team beats Otters

Three first inning Thief River Falls runs set the tempo of the game Tuesday as the Prowlers beat Fergus Falls 9-3 in the first round of the seven-team, double-elimination North Sub-Section 8AAA high school softball tournament.

High, sustained winds that blew across the open space housing the Multi-Events Center diamond made nearly every play a challenge, especially on balls hit in the air that caught the gusts roaring across the field.

"All-in-all, considering the weather conditions, we played all right," said Thief River Falls coach Corey Poole. "We hit the ball, we bunted when we had to, got pretty good pitching and for the most part made the plays on defense."

The early Thief River Falls offense began with a walk issued to Shawna Rogalla and a bunt single by Hailey Peterson, who put herself in scoring poisition with the Prowlers' second stolen base of the inning. Amanda Lara scored both runners by driving the ball down the third base line for a single. She took second on the throw and scored on a two-out bloop single into the short left field by Cassie Gunderson.

It became a 5-0 spread in the third inning when Johnson beat out a bunt single, and beat the throw to third on a bunt by Lara. A sacrifice fly by Joann Blom plated Johnson and a single up the middle by Jenna Hoglo scored Lara.

The teams traded fourth inning runs. Two walks and two errors put the Otters on the scoreboard, but the Prowlers answered with an RBI single by Lara.

Thief River Falls stretched the difference to 8-1 in the fifth when runs were scored on an error and a wild pitch, then tacked on a sixth inning score when Rogalla doubled down the left field line, advanced on a wild pitch and made it home on a fielder's choice play for an RBI by pinch-hitting Jodie Roy.

Three singles and a pair of errors produced a pair of Fergus Falls runs in the top of the seventh to compelte the scoring.

The Prowlers took an 18-2 record into the tournament's winner's bracket. The Otters headed into the loser-out bracket with a 6-13 record.

An 11-hit offense helped cover up a four-error game by the Thief River Falls defense. "That's the way it's been for this team all year," noted Poole. "Somebody is always

Shara Guidry of Thief River Falls, a junior at the University of St. Thomas in St. Paul, won a national title in the discus Thursday during the 2007 NCAA Division III Track and Field Championship at Oshkosh, Wis.

The ninth-seeded Guidry beat a field of 19 throwers with a toss of 145-feet, 11-inches.

Guidry, the Tommies' first-ever women's national champion in a throwing event, earned All-America honors with the win on Day 1 of the 48th NCAA meet.

The Minnesota Intercollegiate Athletic Conference discus champion as a freshman in 2005, Guidry placed second in the event at the MIAC meet the past two years. She qualified for the national meet with a 147-10 throw last week at the LaCrosse Last Chance meet.

Ten recruits sign with NCTC women

Northland Community and Technical College head women's basketball coach Guy Finstrom announced this week that he has signed 10 recruits for the 2007-08 season.

Signing letters of intent with the Pioneers were Stephanie Klamar, a 5-9 forward from Gatzke; Justyne Larson, a 5-10 center from Grygla; Kelsey Gust, a 5-0 point guard from Larmimore, N.D.; Brooke Conely, a 6-0 center from Warren; Alexandria Engelman and Anne Engelman, both 5-7 guards from Farmington; Tressta Ralston, a 5-5 point guard from Dahlen, N.D.; Sarah Passa, a 5-9 forward from Drayton N.D.; Nicole Korpi, a 5-8 point guard from Indus; and Amanada Beck, a 5-10 forward from Menahga.

"I am very excited about this group of basketball players," said Finstrom in a school release. "We have a few holes to fill from last season's team, but the players we have coming in are hard workers and are good baskeball players.

The Pioneers are coming off a season in which they won the National Junior College Athletic Association Division III title and participated in the NJCAA Division III national tournament in Utica, N.Y.

Memorial Day

I hope you are not working this weekend. I also hope that you know that this is Memorial Day weekend simply by the sights and sounds of the day; fresh cut grass, grilled polish sausage (the good kind with extra calories boiled in beer), the scent of the last thunderstorm after a couple inches of rain and the unmistakable smell of the possibilities of another summer. I hope you don't sleep in so late that you wake up to the sound of a 21-gun salute from the Memorial Day program. I hope the sights you see include that program along with sunshine, friends and family on Memorial Day; but there is more to this national holiday.

Before the hot dogs, national day-off and even placing wreaths on the graves of family members, Memorial Day was called Decoration Day. It was a national holiday to honor those who died in service to our country. Memorial Day is rooted in several different locations, but it's generally accepted that it began spontaneously during the Civil War by those who wanted to honor the war dead from both sides of the fight. Its official start was by proclamation of General John Logan, national commander of the Grand Army of the Republic, on May 5, 1868. All the northern states accepted the day by 1890, but the southern states of the Civil War took longer. Even today, there are a few states that observe the national date, but also celebrate a separate date which may surprise a few people.

Memorial Day has changed over time – from independent services honoring Civil War dead, to a national date to cover all wars and even a way to support survivors of those killed by war. World War I kind of sharpened the focus of Memorial Day through the words of poet John McCrae, who wrote "Flanders Field" and Moina Michael, who wrote a poem inspired by "Flanders Field." Most of us have read the McCrae poem from the perspective of a recently dead soldier, but the Michael poem seems almost a plea to remember the war dead. Both poems mention the poppy flower and Michael went on to sew poppies and sell them, with proceeds given to support servicemen in need. The Veterans of Foreign Wars picked up the program in 1922 and continue to make something good from the poems and efforts inspired by very sad times.

I think most people see Memorial Day as a time to honor ALL who have passed. The truth is that it is a time for remembrance of soldiers killed in war. I would not ask anyone to ignore the departed who did not fall in war, but rather to remember those who did by simply setting aside a moment of silence and consider the life their death has given you. The National Day of Remembrance is a resolution that requests all Americans observe a moment of silence at 3 p.m. on Memorial Day. Setting aside this minute or two may change how you view veterans, both living and dead, during the other minutes of your life.

Time enjoyed with friends and family is a good way to spend an extra day off. I think it would be silly not to enjoy another day of life, especially one unencumbered by work. However, while we're enjoying life expressed through lawn work, grilling and relaxation, let's remember those who gave us this day, by giving a little piece back. Have a nice Memorial Day.

and go to work as if nothing happened. I feared that people would find out and that I would have to tell people. I decided that the fear was mixed with shame and embarrassment.

I did not grow up in a small town so I did not know how to handle the gossip about me having 'cancer.' I made my family keep it a secret and didn't even tell my friends. I announced it at work and made them keep it a secret as well. It was in September that my surgery was scheduled, ironically on my second wedding anniversary. The surgery went well, I had a lumpectomy and I was then given the choice to have chemo or radiation or both. My doctor thought since I was so young that the latter would be best. I hoped and prayed that we would make the right decision. My doctor agreed that full treatment would prevent reoccurrence and the cancer shall never return.

I went through four cycles of chemo and six weeks of radiation. The chemo was harsh and I had to be cared for. On the good days I went to work hoping that the nausea would not keep me from being productive. I kept working and did not take any long- or short-term leave except for the days that the chemo weakened me.

I made it through all the treatments and went on with life and even went back to school to finish my degree. I had to quit school again in 2001 because we were blessed with our first child. The cancer was just a memory that I chose to black out. I never mentioned it to my friends and didn't allow my family to talk about it either. Not only did I want my cancer battle to be private but I wanted to lead a normal life through it.

My sister-in-law said that someday I would be ready to talk about it and she was right. After being blessed with a little boy named Connor, life was looking up. I forgot about the tragedies and kept living life in its abundancies but not really caring or stopping to enjoy the small things or focusing on our true purposes of life.

I was 32 and going to school full-time, working full-time, taking care of a one year old and staying up late nights without spending time with family and friends. I knew that if I kept pushing myself that someday the rewards would benefit us all.

It wasn't until December 2003 that the good Lord gave me reasoning with my fate once again. On Christmas Eve I received a call from the local doctor after going in for a checkup for pneumonia, he stated that there was something more serious than that, and I should go in for a further checkup. Getting a little worried, I asked him through the phone what he thought it was and he replied, "I think it is a lump and it looks like cancer." I asked him if he was sure and he said he thought about 99.98 percent sure...and wished me a Merry Christmas. I dropped the phone wishing it was a joke. But it wasn't. The cancer had returned and mestastisized into my right hilum near my lung wall. I couldn't believe it, that I had to fight this again.

It was my last semester at the University of North Dakota, and I was enrolled in my hardest classes with senior obligations to fulfill. I took my Christmas break with my family in San Diego, Calif., and it was the saddest vacation ever. I came back trying to decide if I was going to let my work know. I didn't have the courage. Instead I called in sick the day of my surgery thinking it would all be OK the next day. My doctor said that the estrogen receptors in my tumor were positive and that I may have had an extra surge of estrogen during my pregnancy that allowed the cancer to grow during the time I had the baby. My doctor recommended full chemo and I cried thinking about the last chemo and all the symptoms that went with it.

I remember saying after the first bout of cancer that I would rather die than have go through all that again. Be careful what you say. We went to Mayo Clinic for a second opinion, hoping to avoid having chemo treatments. After a few days of checkups and meeting with different doctors, they all came up with the same treatment options.

They all decided that since the cancer had metastasized and that no treatment options would be good enough. Five doctors came up with the same recommendation of just having radiation because the chemo would not help me. My family had joined me that day and our hopes of finding a good treatment for me was further then we expected.

We returned to Grand Forks and decided on full chemo and radiation treatment once again as suggested by my doctor. I was facing some uncertain decisions. My goals and dreams had been interrupted once again. Should I quit school? Should I quit work? Should I travel around the world? This time I needed the support of my friends and family.

I had recently joined Relay for Life and became a big supporter. It was through one of the survivor laps that I walked that year that I knew that I had to have courage and put the fear of dying out of my mind. I was determined to beat this and bring purpose to my life, fulfill my dreams and make a difference in other people's lives. It was like a revelation from God, a second chance at life. I was going to derive the most of every beautiful waking moment. I was resolute in finding my destiny and nothing was going to stop me.

Cancer became a very positive event in my life. It restored new energy to live, and suddenly the little things were not important. It didn't matter what people thought or what people said nor did I feel shamed. I felt good and I wanted to say sorry to God and for everything that I took for granted in my life. I had grown and my appreciation of life was magnified.

That spring of 2004 I graduated. I even studied for finals during my three-hour chemotherapy sessions and did radiation in between classes and work. Since 2004, I have been cancer free, but still considered having a chronic illness. A disease waiting for a cure. Until then, I am still finding purpose, fulfilling dreams, and spending more time with family and friends. I will never give up hope or prayers that someday the efforts of Relay for Life will bring another tomorrow for all survivors.

Being a cancer survivor allows you to have courage for all the things that you feared to do. I also live more positively and know that any challenge that comes my way will be little and that God gives us only what we can handle. I am blessed with so many gifts. It is because of the great strides of cancer research that the Relay for Life helps provide funds for all cancer patients - our love ones and friends. And it is with the grace of God and prayers, that I am still alive - more than I ever was.

With the help of his therapists and the light gait system, Grygla resident David Sparby, 16, walked in March. Sparby suffered a spinal cord injury and became a quadriplegic as a result of a farm accident in January 2006. His family is currently running a can drive to raise money to cover more physical therapy. Residents may place their aluminum cans in kennels at Hugo's and SuperOne Foods in Thief River Falls, and at Grygla Co-op. (Submitted photo) determined where parks were located in terms of the city's population. Since that time, the city has followed the consultant's recommendations regarding parkland. Barron then made a motion to leave the ordinance as it is. Planning Commission member John Johnson seconded the motion.

Parkland dedication ordinance remains on books

Nordhagen noted he didn't think the city's past practices were a good enough reason to keep the ordinance.

Most parks are not neighborhood parks anymore, said Planning Commission member Dick Sjoberg. He referred to Northrop Park, Ole Engelstad Park and Hartz Park as examples, indicating that the former two parks have outdoor hockey rinks and the latter park is a place where many people gather. Sjoberg said there was a basis for having the whole city pay for parkland, but the people who live in the neighborhood benefit most from each particular park.

A short time later, Barron's motion passed unanimously. That recommendation then went on to the Committee of the Whole, which met Tuesday. At that meeting, Nordhagen said he had the feeling that the issue would not be on the council's agenda for June 5.

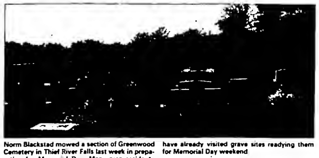
him to remain balanced while walking and sitting. Like he did at home, David also pedaled a bike with the help of stimulation pads, which contracted his muscles. He was also able to grab a ball with the assistance of the stimulation pads.

Once he returned home, David continued his therapy. His KKI therapists created a therapy regimen for him. David, who is homeschooled, undergoes therapy at home four hours a day, five days a week with a personal care attendant. Tami also helps David with his therapy.

Tami said David has much more mobility on his right side than he initially did after his accident. Even though he has regained some mobility, he isn't able to write right-handed like he did in the past. Now, he uses a brace to write and eat with his left hand. His right lung wasn't working properly, and it is believed that it may now be working properly.

David and his family hope he will regain more mobility. They believe they would realize that goal if David underwent more therapy at KKI. Yet, it's not without a cost. It costs several thousand dollars for someone to undergo outpatient therapy for two weeks. For this year, David's insurance only covered $700 for this physical therapy – not even one day



Two people injured after accident during dust storm Tuesday

Two people were injured after an accident during a severe dust storm Tuesday afternoon along Highway 2 in Polk County.

Bernice A. Solberg, 71, Gully, and Joshua J. Flower, 31, Fosston, both suffered non-life threatening injuries in the crash, according to the Minnesota State Patrol report. The report doesn't indicate whether they went to a hospital.

At the time of the accident, Solberg was driving a 1999 Chevy Metro westbound on Highway 2, one mile west of Marcoux. While in a severe dust storm, her vehicle then rear-ended a 1986 Ford farm truck driven by Jose L. Gonzalez, 23, Ardoch, N.D. Gonzalez wasn't injured in the crash. Flower was a passenger in Solberg's car.

The car sustained severe damage, and the truck sustained moderate damage. The State Patrol was dispatched to the scene at 5:42 p.m. Tuesday.

Norm Blackstad mowed a section of Greenwood Cemetery in Thief River Falls last week in preparation for Memorial Day. Many area residents have already visited grave sites readying them for Memorial Day weekend.

CHS fertilizer plant to be constructed

Warren - "A CHS Inc. agronomy services facility that will serve ag producers in an eight-county area of northwestern Minnesota will be constructed at Warren. Some preliminary site work has already begun, with the fertilizer storage facility expected to be up and running by the spring of 2008.

"The main building for the new facility will be constructed adjacent to the west side of a railroad loop constructed last fall at the CHS Northwest Grain elevator at Warren. The building will be located about where the entry road to the elevator is now situated, with the access road likely to be shifted somewhat to the west to accommodate the new structure." - Warren Sheaf, May 30, 2007

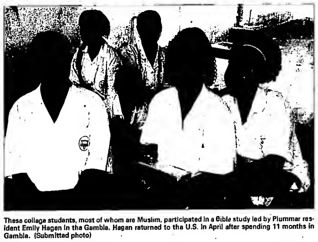
Man commended on 60 years of service

Erskine - "Bert Brown became a member of the Bailey-Throne American Legion Post in 1946 and has remained an active member since that time." Bert was recently presented with a plaque/certificate for his 60 years of continuous membership in the American Legion.

"He served a total of 4½ years in military service during World War II from 1941 to 1945 on the Atlantic side. He served 31 months in an active combat zone; most of his time was served under Geo. Patton's command, including three ship-to-shore invasions.

"Bert served as the sergeant in charge of receiving and evacuation in a front line surgical hospital. They moved along with the front line operations, moving over 50 times during his time of service. During this time in the war zone, the hospital served in excess of 70,000 soldiers on both the African and European continents. Over 50 surgeons operated on four different tables both night and day." - The Erskine Echo, May 31, 2007

NHS makes tribute to fallen soldiers



Red Lake Falls - "At a recent Lafayette National Honor Society meeting, after the death of Sgt. Corey Rystad, the students wanted something to be displayed to remember not just Rystad but all Red Lake County soldiers who have made the ultimate sacrifice in service to their country. A memorial plaque in honor of these soldiers, as a reminder to never forget the sacrifices they made, has been placed in Lafayette High School." - Red Lake Falls Gazette, May 30, 2007

Cleanup week is costly

Karlstad - "Karlstad City Maintenance Worker Sid Germundson gave a recap of cleanup week at the May 21 council meeting." Twenty-three tons had been hauled away.

Germundson said that amount included 13 tons hauled to the Hallock landfill, 8.38 tons of scrap metal hauled to Greenbush and 2 tons of wood. "Germundson said dumping fees at Hallock were $671 and the two dumpsters brought to Greenbush cost about $600. Other costs involved included fuel - $300 - and extra hired labor - $350."

He said about 100 TV sets and computer monitors were sitting at the shop, noting the cost to get rid of each item would be about $15 each at the landfill. - North Star News of Karlstad, May 31, 2007, by Ardis Hanson

These college students, most of whom are Muslim, participated in a Bible study led by Plummer resident Emily Hagen in the Gambia. Hagen returned to the U.S. in April after spending 11 months in Gambia. (Submitted photo)

Hagen takes a gamble on Gambia

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

Emily Hagen never really thought about becoming a missionary. She originally planned to send others on mission trips, but God had other plans for her.

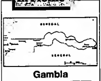
Emily Hagen

"He showed me you need to trust Him and you need to go [on mission trips]," said Hagen. "And then I went."

Hagen, a Plummer resident, recently returned from an 11-month mission trip to the Gambia in Africa. While there, she led women's Bible studies and women's meetings on college campuses. "Everyone was always seemingly open to discussion," Hagen said about Gambia, a country where 90 percent of the population is Muslim, 9 percent is Christian and 1 percent hold indigenous beliefs. Muslim college students also attended Bible studies, women's meetings and other Christian-based events.

Hagen traveled to Gambia as a missionary with WEC International, an organization that teaches people about Christ. Hagen learned about the program while she was a student at Minnesota State University, Moorhead. Given that Hagen wanted to work on college campuses and also that she preferred to work in an English-speaking country, WEC partnered with the Gambia Ministry International Fellowship of Evangelical Students to give her the opportunity she wanted. "It's exactly what I was looking for," Hagen said.

Even though it fit her to a T, she suffered some anxiety at first. As she made her way onto her departing flight, she worried that she would contract malaria, a common disease in that country. It probably didn't help that her mom, Connie, is a nurse who was also anxious about that possibility.



Hagen was also a little nervous when she began her work in Gambia. She eventually became accustomed to Gambia and her job. "I would love to go back there," said Hagen, who doesn't know when she will return.

While in Gambia, the 2001 Plummer High School graduate lived in Fajara. She said the city would be considered to be a developed city in that country. There are banks, grocery stores, shops and clothing stores. Streetlights and stoplights were erected during her stay in Fajara.

Despite the progress in Fajara, Hagen noticed Gambia's educational system isn't up to U.S. standards. For example, she said students first

Mowing with a smile

"This place looks like a golf course"

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Earl Melvie loves the outdoors. That's how the retired Soo Line Railroad brakeman explains his willingness to spend an average of two to three hours a day and four to five days a week maintaining the grounds of a club he rarely used.

Melvie, a 72-year-old, lifelong Thief River Falls resident, has been the unofficial grounds keeper of the Pennington County Sportsmen's Club for more than eight years. His maintenance of the club is always voluntary and he always refuses to be payed for his work.

In March, the Sportsmen's Club recognized Melvie's efforts with a plaque recognizing the countless hours he has spent maintaining the grounds.

"The place looks like a golf course," said Pennington County Sportsmen's Club president Jared Nelson. "I think he spends 15-20 hours a week out here."

"Without him the club wouldn't be much," added James Counter, club treasurer. "We make sure he's got the equipment needed to get the job done and he does a lot of work out there and keeps it clean."

The plaque bears a message to Melvie, the names of Sportsmen's Club officers who were active at the time of the presentation and the names of two branch managers who actually inspired Melvie's volunteer efforts.

Yellow lab "branch managers" Zek and Obe were both a little more than a year old when Melvie introduced them to the Sportsmen's Club. They belonged to his son Kjell and Melvie wanted a place for them to run. After some asking around, the Sportsmen's Club was mentioned as a suitable location by Counter.

Melvie said a portion of the club grounds, from the shooting stand west, had been maintained prior to his arrival as groundskeeper. Using

Harmoning sworn in as RLF mayor

Kevin Harmoning succeeds Robert Philion, who resigned in April

Vice Mayor Kevin Harmoning has been sworn in as the mayor of Red Lake Falls. The Red Lake Falls City Council appointed Harmoning as mayor at its meeting Tuesday.

Harmoning succeeds former Mayor Robert Philion, who resigned in April as a part of a plea agreement related to a charge of gross misdemeanor criminal damage to property. Harmoning will serve the remainder of Philion's term, which ends in 2008. Harmoning has served as vice mayor for the past six years, according to City Administrator Allen Ducharme. This is his ninth year on the council.

Harmoning's seat is also up for election in 2008. Ducharme expected that, at the next council meeting, the council will direct him to announce that the city is looking for candidates for Harmoning's vacant seat. Those candidates would then have to submit letters to the council about their intentions.

As for Philion, he pled guilty to the charge of criminal damage to property and was sentenced to one year in jail stayed for one year. That stayed sentence may be extended up to two years if necessary, Pennington County Attorney Al Rogalla said in an earlier interview. (Rogalla prosecuted the case.) As a condition of his sentence, Philion resigned as mayor, and was ordered to pay $10,122 in restitution to the city of Red Lake Falls.

The charge stemmed from $10,122 worth of damage to his former home, 109 Seventh St. S.E. That home was part of the city's program to buy out properties that were sliding into the Clearwater River. The damage estimate included replacement parts, materials and labor, according to the criminal complaint. Philion had also been accused of stealing approximately $3,428.18 worth of numerous fixtures from his former home. Robert and Julie Cudahack of Warroad had the highest bid for Philion's former home and plan to move the home to Warroad.

Young receives Hospice award

June Young of Middle River honored with prestigious award

The Minnesota Hospice Organization's annual End-of-Life conference was held May 16 and 17 at the St. Cloud State University campus. Each year, a volunteer is selected for a service award given by the MHO. Middle River resident June Young, a First Care Medical Services volunteer, was honored with this prestigious award for 2007.

June Young

June submitted her application to become a hospice volunteer in 1995. On her application, she placed a checkmark by almost every item under the heading "Where you feel you can be of service." For more than a dozen years, June has continued to be of service in every category, literally participating in all volunteer roles for First Care's hospice program.

June graciously shares her time and caring heart with the terminally ill, providing respite care to patient homes or companionship visits to nursing home residents. June has touched the lives of terminally ill people by walking beside them on the final part of their life's journey. She has cared for their physical bodies, soothed their emotions and touched their souls. She visits, holds hands, reads Scripture and even sings to patients.

June has also been an active part of grief care for families. She has held the hands and wiped the tears of the family members left behind, caring for them through their grief. June has worked with many bereaved family members individually or in a support group setting.

In 2004, June agreed to add spiritual care provider to her role in hospice. As a lay minister in her church and as an experienced hospice volunteer, June has been a perfect match to minister to patients and families. She has provided spiritual care and support to patients and families according to their own individual wishes. June also participates in First Care's annual Memorial Service and Light Up A Life events by delivering an incredible message of hope to all who attend.

In addition to the average 220 in-person patient care, bereavement, and spiritual care visits per year, June joins the hospice team for fundraising and community outreach activities. She serves spaghetti every year at hospice's Spaghetti Supper Benefit and volunteers at the Tree Walk for Hospice, greeting visitors and taking pictures of kids with Santa. She has done public speaking on hospice and routinely participates in new hospice volunteer training.

Although June was unable to attend the conference to receive her award, she graciously participated in making a video message that was shown at the conference during the award presentation. Seven members of First Care Medical Services' hospice patient care team attended the two day end-of-life conference. First Care's hospice team members got a chance to network with over

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere
email: lacours@mncable.net

Today's recipes are from the 1974 Cookbook of the Ladies Aids of Oak Park Lutheran Church, Oklee, and Nazareth Lutheran Church, Trail. The cookbook was dedicated to the pioneers of Clearwater Lutheran parish.

Serve this cake with whipped cream and you've got a light, summery dessert. The ariginal recipe did net include the zest, but I plan ta use the zest when I make it fer a bunch in a jelly roll pan:

LEMON GOLD CAKE
Borghild Bjornorao Lublow; El Cujon, CA

1 package yellow cake mix
1 package lemon gelatin
3/4 cup water
4 whole eggs
3/4 cup vegetable oil

Glaze

2 cups powdered sugar
Juice from 1 1/2 or 2 lemons (save zest)

Combine cake mix and gelatin. Add water, then eggs, then oil, beating well after each.

Grease and lightly flour a 9x13 inch cake pan. Pour batter inte pan and bake at 350 degrees for 30-35 minutes, until lightly browned and the cake tests done with toothpick or tester. As soon as cake is done, prick liberally with a fork, sending tines to bottom of cake.

Make glaze, adding zest if desired. Pour glaze over hot cake. Top with remaining zest. Let cool and serve.

Fishing season has started and here are some recipes for fixing that fish. Just think, you can have fish every day and it will never get boring:

COATING FOR FISH
Mrs. Sophie Arveson

Dip fish in seasoned flour, then in eggs slightly beaten with water and then in 1 cup of the following:

1. Mix 1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese and 1 cup cracker crumbs.
2. Mix 1 cup instant potato flakes and 1 envelope onion salad dressing mix.
3. Mix 3/4 cup corn meal, 1/2 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper. Use hot bacon drippings for extra flavor when frying.
4. Mix 1/3 cup flour, 1/2 teaspoon paprika, 1/4 teaspoon salt, dash of pepper. Use butter for frying.

Another fish coating recipe is for a batter type. I tried this recipe and it is very good - crunchy and light. Add mare salt, pepper a little paprika and season salt far a little pizzazz and eat right away for crispy caating:

FISH BATTER
Mrs. Merald Halverson

1 1/2 eggs
3/4 cup beer
3/4 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon sugar

Combine ingredients and dip rinsed and dried fish pieces in batter. Cook in deep fat until golden.

Make an easy three bean salad to have in the fridge as a tasty accompaniment ta the crispy fish:

THREE BEAN SALAD
Birdie Gunderson

1 can cut green beans
1 can yellow wax beans
1 can kidney beans, rinsed
1 large onion, sliced thin
Salad Dressing:
1/2 cup vinegar
1/2 cup sugar
1/2 cup cooking oil

Combine beans and onion. Mix salad dressing and pour over bean mixture. let stand overnight. Can use lima or French beans, if preferred.

Somebody wented a recipe fer rhubarb jam. This ene sounds easy and yummy:

FRESH RHUBARB JAM
Mrs. Glen Jensen

3 cups peeled rhubarb, diced
3 cups sugar
1 box strawberry gelatin
1 teaspoons butter

Cook rhubarb and sugar until tender in heavy kettle. Add gelatin and butter and stir until blended. Pour into jars, seal and store in refrigerator.

And here's a cherry-rhubarb recipe submitted by three ladies, se you knew it must be good:

RHUBARB JAM
Mrs. Jorgen Oftelie, Mrs. Thore Skomedal and Lottie Lundeen

5 cups rhubarb, cut up
3 cups sugar
Small amount of water
1 package cherry gelatin

Cook rhubarb, sugar and water until done. Beat with egg beater. Add gelatin into hot rhubarb and seal hot.

Pumping Rain

It was Disco in the '70s, "Miami Vice" in the '80s, excess in the '90s and now this decade seems to be about the environment. This isn't a political column, so I'm not taking sides about global warming, it's more about using the resources we were given in a reasonable, conservative way. I want to talk about a small effort that can save resources like water and energy; mainly how to build water barrel systems that allow you to pump rainwater for your plants.

I hate waste; waste of time, waste of effort and waste of resources. Everybody talks about oil, but I think the most precious resource is water. When you water your plants, you pump the water from deep in the ground and distribute it between the soil, towards the growth of the plant and the rest evaporates into the sky. I think it's better to simply capture rainfall, then put some into the ground, some towards plant growth and the rest can go back from where it originated. This can be accomplished simply with an open barrel under your downspout that you pail out; or, you can offer a bit more effort and make it more convenient and less hospitable to mosquitoes, in my case I chose the latter.

I chose a plastic barrel for my system, you can find wooden barrels but they are expensive and plastic lasts forever. I was fortunate to find one locally for free that was a solid color, which prevents algae from growing inside the barrel. Some of these barrels carry strong cleaning solvents, so wash out the barrel thoroughly. If you want to keep it simple, just set your barrel on something solid like patio blocks, cut the top off and run the downspout into the barrel. I prefer something that not only catches water but also catches your attention, plus this design eliminates the creation of a brothel for visiting mosquitoes. My barrel is turned upside down with the threaded opening pointed down through the top of a (overbuilt-really overbuilt) stand made with 2 x 6's then treated with deck stain. I cut a square opening in the opposite end of the barrel through which I ran the downspout from the eaves. I drilled an overflow hole on top, then ran threaded pipe though the bottom threaded opening into a plastic pipe, which is where I could have ended this project with a simple valve for releasing rainwater into a bucket.

The real fun in any project is first making it practical, then making it somewhat fantastic. This project needed some "awesome factor," which was supplied by an antique hand pump I found on eBay. I ran water pipe for 20 feet under our porch from the barrel, so my wife can hand pump the rainwater. The pump was mostly brass, so it was in good shape, but the leathers had long since gone down the drain. I almost scorched the earth in my efforts to find the correct leathers only to locate them at the General Store in Middle River. If you decide to use a hand pump, I would suggest installing a check valve so you don't have to prime the pump each time you use it. Valves and the pump were a little expensive, so start this project by finding a free barrel, so you have some money left over for extras - they really make a difference. You should also plan ahead, so all plumbing comes to a junction at the lowest point, where you can install a valve to release all of the water prior to winter.

This is a good project for someone who's watched a little too much HGTV and needs to work off some steam. It's also a project that is good for your plants and saves a little groundwater for the next generation to drink, after somewhere in the next decade, they've pumped their own rain.

Attend a Relay For Life in your community

Cancer has a devastating impact on patients, friends and families. But as we've learned from friends and family who have had cancer, it's not necessarily a death sentence anymore, nor is it something that has tu be endured alone.

Odds of surviving cancer seem to improve every year. People understand more about this disease and are discovering it and treating it earlier because of educational efforts and events like Relay For Life. Additionally, research is resulting in better ways to prevent, detect, and treat cancer. Nevertheless, about 1,444,920 new cancer cases are expected to be diagnosed in 2007. According to the National Cancer Institute, about 10.5 million Americans with a history of cancer were alive in January 2003. Some of these were cancer-free, while others still had evidence of cancer and may have been undergoing treatment.

Local American Cancer Society Relay For Life events are about to begin. In fact, for a region of its size, one of the nation's leading Relay For Life fundraising events for several years now has been the Relay For Life event in Red Lake County. That event will be on June 1 and 2 in Oklee. Marshall and Pennington County Relay For Life events will be June 7 and 8. Each of these events involves the efforts of hundreds of individuals all dedicated to raising funds for cancer research, support programs, education, and advocacy.

Perhaps more importantly, Relay For Life is about being a community. It brings people in our community together for a purpose - to help others. Individuals who have participated in Relay For Life events tell of an indescribable spirit that prevails at the track. That spirit serves as an inspiration to cancer patients, and empowers them to fight back. Incredibly, this takes place in community after community.

At events in 4,800 communities nationwide, teams of families, friends and coworkers will join together at Relay For Life events to celebrate the lives of those who have battled cancer, remember those lost and fight back against a disease that takes too much.

Each of the more than 4,800 Relays nationwide is a fun-filled, overnight event that mobilizes communities to celebrate survivors (anyone who has ever been diagnosed with cancer), remember loved ones and raise money for the fight against cancer. Teams of eight to 15 members gather with tents and sleeping bags with the goal of keeping one person on the track at all times. Relay For Life brings together friends, families, businesses, hospitals, schools, churches ... people from all walks of life. Teams seek sponsorship prior to the Relay, all with the goal of eliminating cancer.

The American Cancer Society explains that Relay For Life opens as cancer survivors take the first lap. This emotional time sets the stage for the importance of each participant's contribution. A festive atmosphere always develops as participants make new friends and spend time with old ones. Highlighting the evening is a luminaria Ceremony of Hope held after dark to honor cancer survivors and to remember loved ones lost to cancer. The luminaria candles line the track and are left burning throughout the night to remind participants of the incredible importance of their contributions.

Attend a Relay For Life event in your community and become a part of the Relay For Life phenomenon that supports cancer patients and survivors in your community.

It's a great time to visit Agassiz National Wildlife Refuge near Middle River. Goslings have hatched and can be seen from nearly every roadway at the refuge. An active eagle nest is located at Parker Pool, which is easily visible from Marshall County Road 7. Fawns will soon arrive, ducklings will hatch, and several bears have been spotted. During the month of June, the refuge office will be open from 1 to 5 p.m. on Sundays. Stop at the office and check out a key to climb the 100-foot fire tower or to explore the "back roads" of the refuge (weather permitting). The refuge will also be open on Sunday, July 1, from 8 a.m. to 6 p.m., to accommodate visitors to the All-School Reunion in Holt. Drive safely and watch out for wildlife as you travel through the refuge. (Submitted photo)

State Patrol releases names of people involved in accident

The Minnesota State Patrol has released the names of two people involved in a two-car accident Tuesday morning in Pennington County.

Donna M. Christianson, 48, Plummer, was treated and released from Northwest Medical Center, according to an ER staff member on Wednesday afternoon. The other driver, Marlin G. Farley, 46, Waubun, was held for observation at NWMC and then released from the hospital. The State Patrol hadn't released the names prior to The Times' press time on Tuesday.

At the time of the accident, Christianson was driving a 1994 Chevy Cavalier northbound on Highway 59, and Farley was driving a 1999 Buick Regal on State Aid 3. According to the State Patrol report, Farley didn't stop for a stop sign. Farley's car then broadsided Christianson's car. Initially, the State Patrol report indicated Farley was traveling eastbound. However, the State Patrol has since corrected that report to indicate Farley was traveling westbound.

Both cars were totalled. The State Patrol was dispatched to the scene at 7:42 a.m. Tuesday.

Section 8A champion Thief River Falls will be playing in the team portion of the Minnesota Class A boys state high school tennis tournament for the fourth streight year when the Prowlers step on the court Tuesday against Litchfield. Members of the Prowlers' tournamant roster are, front from left, Cody Bottem, Jordan Swanson; kneeling, Chase Havliand, Connor Hutton, Corey Horlan, Parker Nessen, Brendan Skima; standing, Tyler Peterson, Cody Reese, Jacob Engelsted, Lucas Dillon, Brian Kays and JD Robson. Four straight state tennis tournament appearances...

TRF making repeat visit

First goal for Thief River Falls in the team portion of the 2007 Minnesota Class A boys state high school tennis tournament is to reach the championship round semifinals. That would be a breakthrough for the four-time Section 8A title-winning Prowlers, who have been relegated to the consolation round with first round losses in all three previous trips.

That quest begins anew Tuesday when Thief River Falls draws Section 6A champion Litchfield as a 2 p.m. state tournament quarterfinal foe at Life Time Fitness in Burnsville.

The Prowlers and Dragons are in the same bracket as Section 1A winner St. Paul Academy and Summit School and Section 7A champion Pine City.

Day 1 matches in the other bracket feature Mounds Park Academy (4A) vs. Waseca (2A) and Montevideo (3A) vs. The Blake School (5A).

Mounds Park Academy of St. Paul, coached by Lincoln High School graduate Michelle Olson, is the two-time defending Class A state champion.

Six of last year's state tournament entries return. The newcomers are Montevideo (replacing Luverne) and Pine City (supplanting Marshall School of Duluth).

The Corey Thorson-coached Prowlers are 18-1 in duel meet competition this spring. The lone loss was an early-season 5-2 setback at the hands of Class AA Moorhead.

"This season, we had consistent play from our upperclassmen and we have had our younger players playing well," said Thorson. "This year, for the most part, we've been healthy – a pleasant change from last year. We avenged our only loss of the season to Moorhead with a (4-3) win in the Sports Boosters tournament. Any time you can beat a section finalist in Class AA, that's a good season."

Thief River Falls' Section 8A title-winning line-up featured three seniors, three juniors, two sophomores and a pair of eighth graders. In singles, it's junior Jacob Engelstad, No. 1; senior Cody Bottem, No. 2; eighth grader Connor Hutton, No. 3; and eighth grader Brenden Skime, No. 4. The doubles combinations are senior Jordan Swanson and junior Chase Haviland, No. 1; senior Corey Horien and junior Brian Kays, No. 2; sophomores Parker Nessen and Cody Reese, No. 3.

Class A semifinals and finals will be played Wednesday – the championship round at Life Time Fitness in Burnsville; the consolation matches at Reed-Sweatt Family Tennis Center in Minneapolis.

In 2004, the Prowlers lost state tournament matches to Waseca and Litchfield. In 2005, Thief River Falls bounced back from a quarterfinal loss to Mounds Park Academy with wins over Litchfield and Virginia to win the consolation title. In 2006, the Prowlers lost to The Blake School, beat Luverne and then fell to St. Paul Academy and Summit School in the consolation final.

"The seniors this year were freshmen when we first went (to state)," pointed out Thorson. "We've felt that were a match away from making a splash in the tournament. This year we feel that we have a favorable draw and the personnel that is tournament-tested to maybe go a round or two."

It will be double-duty for some of the Prowlers, who will compete in the individual portion of the state tournament scheduled Thursday and Friday. That group includes Engelstad, the Section 8A singles champion; Bottem-Swenson, the Section 8A doubles champion; and Horien-Haviland, the Section 8A doubles runner-up.

The individual competition will also take place at Life Time Fitness in Burnsville.

Class A Team Tournament

■ Quarterfinals Tuesday, June 5 - (Upper Bracket) Mounds Park Academy vs. Waseca, 8 a.m.; Montevideo vs. The Blake School, 10 a.m.; (Lower Bracket) St. Paul Academy and Summit School vs. Pine City, noon; Thief River Falls vs. Litchfield, 2 p.m.

■ Semifinals Wednesday, June 6 - (championship and consolation round) Upper Bracket, 8 a.m.; Lower Bracket, 10 a.m.

■ Finals Wednesday, June 6 - third place and consolation, noon; championship, 2 p.m.

Prowlers' season ends at 20-4

■ Softball team third in North Sub-Section 8AAA

A coaching change didn't cause Thief River Falls to lose a step during the 2007 high school softball season. In fact, the program put together its best record in history this spring with a 20-4 campaign that ended with a third place finish in the seven-team, double-elimination North Sub-Section 8AAA tournament.

Under Matt Okeson, the Prowlers went 17-6 and reached the North Sub-Section 8AAA finals for the first time in 2005. They followed that with an 18-7 record and a third place post-season showing in 2006.

Okeson then stepped down and was succeeded by Corey Poole, whose first year at the helm resulted in school records for most wins and fewest losses in a season.

Over the past three years, Okeson and Poole shared one thing: their seasons ended with two tournament losses at the hands of Brainerd.

Tuesday, it was a 9-0 setback that kept the Prowlers from reaching the North Sub-Section 8AAA finals.

Thief River Falls' post-season journey started with a 9-3 win over Fergus Falls that was followed by a second round 1-0 extra-inning loss to Brainerd.

The Prowlers stayed alive with Monday loser-out bracket wins over Moorhead 6-5 and Bemidji 4-2 before the rematch with Brainerd.

Five seniors who helped the Prowlers extend a string of seven straight winning seasons included Brittni Johnson, Shawna Rogalla, Lauren Dondelinger, Kelly Hanson and Joann Blom.

"This was a great season," said Poole. "They were all a great group of girls to coach. We are going to miss our Class of 2007 grads. They all stepped up to the plate and did a great job."

Thief River Falls, after building a 5-1 lead through five innings, needed a seventh inning run to beat Moorhead in the first of two Memorial Day games at Brainerd.

The Prowlers led off the seventh with three bunts to load the bases and set up a one-out, game-winning RBI single by Jenna Hoglo.

Blom hit her first home run of the season, a three-run shot, to highlight a four-run Thief River Falls fifth inning. Moorhead matched that with four seventh inning runs.

"We played well for six innings," said Poole.

Thief River Falls forced the play in Monday's second game and Bemidji wasn't able to handle it with a seven-error contest.

"We did the little things well," pointed out Poole. "Bemidji struggled throwing when we bunted. Any time you commit seven errors, you're probably going to lose."

Bemidji out-hit Thief River Falls 8-6, but the Prowlers had six fewer errors than the Lumberjacks.

"This was a great team effort, offense to defense" said Poole. "We did everything we needed to do to win."

A pitcher's duel the first time around, a second Thief River Falls vs. Brainerd match-up was decided early when the host team scored six first inning runs and coasted into the finals.

"Brainerd came out swinging," explained Poole. "We just had a hard time getting out of the first inning. I think we just ran out of gas after an emotional win over Bemidji the night before."

It took the Prowlers three pitchers before they could put a lid on the Brainerd offense, with Rogalla working four solid innings in relief.

"She (Rogalla) did a great job," mentioned Poole. "This was her best performance of the season. She pitched with a large amount of confidence."

Jordan Swanson to play for Cobbers

Jordan Swanson, a 2007 Lincoln High School graduate, will be playing tennis next year at Concordia College in Moorhead.

Cobbers coach Troy Hanestad, who coached the Prowlers before taking over the Concordia program, announced this week that Swanson had signed a letter of intent.

"I am obviously very excited to have the opportunity to coach Jordan again," said Hanestad. "I believe he is going to be a great college player that will have an impact on our program."

Swanson's versatility will be a big plus at the college level, according to Hanestad. "Jordan's success in both singles and doubles play is really a bonus," he said. "Players in college play both doubles and singles in every team match."

Brainerd wins rain-delay contest

It's unlikely the seven seniors on the 2007 Thief River Falls roster will ever forget their last high school baseball game. That their careers ended with a 6-5 Tuesday loss to Brainerd in a Round 3 loser-out North Sub-Section 8AAA tournament match-up won't be the topic of conversation in the future. It's how the game was completed that will create lasting memories.

Brainerd had erased a 4-1 deficit and taken a 6-5 lead in the bottom of the sixth when Trevor Thompson and Nick Jelacic hit back-to-back home runs that, with the help of a wind that had changed directions since the start of the game, just cleared the 320-foot sign in left field.

Thief River Falls wasn't going down easy, however, as Sean Sorteberg doubled to lead off the seventh.

That's when things got interesting. After a strike-out, a heavy rain prompted a quick stoppage of play.

The interruption lasted some three hours. Once the rain let up, coaches, players and groundskeepers took their shoes off, rolled up their pant legs and went to work scooping ankle-deep water and mud out of the base paths and around home plate, then filling in the holes with buckets of Quick Dry.

Through the delay, game officials were in contact with the Minnesota State High School League. The MSHSL office pointed to the rule that says if the umpire in chief determines a field is unplayable during a rain delay, the game reverts back to the last completed inning. In this case, a six-inning contest would have resulted in a 6-5 Brainerd win.

But nobody at Adamson Field – Brainerd and Thief River Falls coaches, and the umpires – wanted a playoff game to end in that manner. So they waited it out and went to work when the rain finally stopped.

Then, in a blink of an eye, it was done. A game that started at 4:30 p.m. was resumed at 9:45 p.m., and ended at 9:47 p.m. when relief pitcher Nick Anderson threw six straight strikes.

"We went toe-to-toe with the No. 3 team in the state and just about had them," said Thief River Falls coach Shane Zutz. "We didn't back down for a second, and it showed in how we played. We gave up a few too many bases with walks and errors, and that will hurt you against a team like that."

Thief River Falls' early success against Brainerd featured RBIs for Spencer Johnson (first inning), Michael Blix (second) and Eric Blix (fifth) for the 4-1 lead.

Brainerd pulled even in the bottom of the fifth. Johnson came up with a run-scoring single in the top of the sixth, but the Thompson-Jelacic home runs decided the winner.

Thief River Falls ended the year 13-8, but the seniors: Sean Sorteberg, Alex Yaggie, Michael Benedict, Ben Espeseth, Michael Blix, Eric Blix, Ben Carlson and Patrick Barry hung around as long as they could.

"The kids really battled the whole game, and we were just about able to finish the job," offered Zutz. "I couldn't be more proud of them."

Moorhead boys win 8AA golf title

Moorhead easily won the 2007 Section 8AA boys high school golf tournament with a 33-stroke victory margin over second place Fergus Falls.

The Spuds finished the Monday-Tuesday event at the Greystone Golf Club in Sauk Centre with a 597. The Otters came in at 630.

Thief River Falls did not make the cut after Day 1 that reduced the 14-team field to six for Day 2. Brainerd and Detroit Lakes made the cut by tying for sixth after Monday's round with scores of 330. The Prowlers were 11th at 348.

"As a team, we were unable to handle the strong winds on Memorial Day," reported Thief River Falls coach Dick Tyler.

Tournament medalist was Spencer Hidle of Moorhead with a 72-73–145.

The team champion, along with the top five individuals not members of the title squad, advanced to the Class AA state tournament June 5-7 at Bunker Hills in Coon Rapids.

Individually, Thief River Falls had a single golfer make the cut after Day 1 – sophomore Kent Peterson, who shot an 85-96–181.

"He (Peterson) played better than what his score would indicate," explained Tyler. "He had a couple of large numbers on two holes."

Thief River Falls shot a 461 Day 1 score to trail the 13-team field that was reduced to four teams, plus individual qualifiers, for the Tuesday finals. The Prowlers did not have any individual Day 2 qualifiers.

TRF spots Otters 3-0 lead, rally for win 8-3

Thief River Falls spotted Fergus Falls an early 3-0 lead before coming back to win an 8-3 Memorial Day North Sub-Section 8AAA high school baseball tournament game at the Multi-Events Center.

The winless Otters stunned the Prowlers at the outset of the Round 2 loser-out match-up in the seven-team double-elimination tournament when Erik Rohlfs hit a one-out three-run first inning home run.

But that was it for the Fergus Falls offense.

Bases-loaded walks issued to Sam Mattison and Michael Benedict pulled the Prowlers within 3-2 in the second inning, and they won it with a six-run fourth when a two-run single by Benedict was followed by a three-run home run by Spencer Johnson.

Thief River Falls pitcher Cody Conners got through the first inning to register a complete-game win.

"The first inning was rough," acknowledged Thief River Falls coach Shane Zutz. "We kept our composure and confidence and found our way through. Cody really settled down and pitched well. He is now 6-0. That's awesome for a sophomore."

Mattison and Conners both had a pair of hits for the Prowlers.

"We didn't have a ton of hits, but the ones we did have were big," noted Zutz. "We are happy with our performance."

100 other volunteers from around the state who attended the conference along with over 300 hospice employees, including two former First Care staff members, Kay Udey and Debbie Erls, who were key in starting the hospice program at First Care.

The conference featured key note addresses from Father Nick Mezacapa's program, Giving Until it Feels Good, as well as from Dr. Kenneth Doka's program Ethics, End-of-Life Decisions and Grief. "After the very first presentation by Father Mezacapa, one of the volunteers said the whole trip was worth it just hearing his message about the gift of being of service to others," according to Kelly Rogalla, hospice volunteer coordinator for First Care. Participants could choose from a variety of workshops on topics like caring for dementia patients; regulatory updates; Jewish traditions; life stories; spiritual aspects of palliative care; pain management, patients with AIDS; bereavement; music therapy; children and loss; volunteering for hospice; hospice in the nursing home; inheritance decision making, and more.

"The conference was an awesome learning experience that will directly benefit patients and families as staff and volunteers were very inspired, and will definitely apply what they've learned in their work. It was a wonderful highlight to see one of our own volunteers receive the service award this year," said Rogalla.

Hospice volunteers are an important part of First Care's patient care team. Last fiscal year, hospice volunteers provided over 1,200 hours in direct patient care, matching staff hours by 10 percent; along with 500 hours in fundraising and office support.

Hospice provides care and support to terminally ill patients and their family members. Most hospice patients are cared for in their own home, but hospice provides care in nursing homes as well. Hospice care includes visits from nurses, aides, social workers, spiritual care providers, and volunteers as well as on-call nurses 24/7, and all medications, equipment, and supplies related to their terminal illness. Across the U.S., hospice's cost of care is 10 to 20 percent more than Medicare reimbursement, according to the National Hospice and Palliative Care Organization.

First Care's hospice offices are located in Fosston, Fertile and Thief River Falls, and the hospice program cares for patients who live within 30 miles of any office. During its last fiscal year, an average of 28 patients were on hospice each day for an average of five months each.

Grief care is provided to family members for a year or longer after the death of their loved one. Over 200 people receive grief care each month which includes one-to-one support, group meetings, mailings of information on coping with loss, volunteer visits, and cards acknowledging difficult days such as the deceased person's birthday or wedding anniversary. Grief support groups are offered free of charge to the public.

If you are interested in learning more about hospice or scheduling a guest speaker, contact Kelly Rogalla at (218) 681-6189 or (218) 435-7670.

an old Craftsman riding lawn mower, Melvie began maintaining the grounds. "It started out kind of hairy, it was pretty wild," Melvie said, noting that the grass was waist high in spots.

As time went on, Melvie maintained more of the Sportsmen's Club property. Today virtually all of the property, from the entrance on the east side to the dike on the west side is cared for by Melvie.

"I usually try to get out here four times a week, sometimes five," Melvie said. "I can't mow the whole works at one time."

Melvie credits his son, Kjell and other club members for their occasional assistance. He said his wife is also helpful with raking leaves in the fall.

When Sportsmen's Club members presented Melvie with his service plaque, they also gave him a small cash donation that covered some of his previous fuel expenses. It will likely be the only time he accepts any money for doing something he enjoys.

"I've worked outdoors all my life," said Melvie, who used to shoot at the club on occasion. "I am not a hunter. I just enjoy the outdoors.

"I intend to do this as long as I'm physically able."

The Pennington County Sportsmen Club

The Pennington County Sportsmen's Club is a non-profit club that was organized in April 1959. The club's original 27-acre property was purchased in June 1965 and now includes 67 acres that are used by many organizations throughout the year.

Along with 200-yard and 50-yard firing ranges, the club includes a heated club house with indoor plumbing, a snowmobile warming house by the Thief River; two wood storage sheds; an equipment storage shed; four outhouse restrooms, and a self-guided cross country ski trail.

The Sportsmen's Club is the site of law enforcement training for the Thief River Falls Police Department, the Pennington County Sheriff's Department, the Minnesota State Highway Patrol, college law enforcement classes and Minnesota game warden training sessions. It is also used by Minnesota Department of Natural Resources for its youth firearm safety program; and for area Scouting events such as the Fall and Spring Camporees, the Winter Klondike Derby, Cub Day Camp, various Eagle Scout projects, Scout service projects, troop and den meetings and Scout training sessions.

Other activities such as business or family picnics; the Little Brother/Little Sister spring party; the Forkhorn picnic; and 4-H shooting sports are also held at the Pennington County Sportsmen's Club. Hagen also observed other differences between the U.S. and Gambia. In Gambia, sons and daughters typically live with their parents until marriage. Once they get married, they move out and live nearby.

Names are also important to Gambians. For Hagen, who has a hard time remembering people's names, it was an adjustment.

Although Hagen observed some differences between life in the U.S. and Gambia, she noticed some similarities, too. She said, "Everyone longs to be loved and accepted."

Essential Air Service approved for TRF

The U.S. Department of Transportation has decided to extend air service between the cities of Thief River Falls and Minneapolis-St. Paul.

As a result of the decision, Mesaba Aviation will continue to provide air service between the communities with subsidies provided through the Essential Air Service program. Mesaba will provide 12 one-stop round trips per week to Minneapolis-St. Paul from Thief River Falls from now through June 1, 2009.

Under this program, the Department of Transportation determines the minimum level of service required at each eligible community by specifying a hub through which the community is linked to the national network, a minimum number of round trips and available seats that must be provided to that hub, certain characteristics of the aircraft to be used, and the maximum permissible number of intermediate stops to the hub. The Department currently subsidizes commuter airlines to serve approximately 100 rural communities across the country as well as 35 in Alaska that otherwise would not receive any scheduled air service.

"From Arctic Cat to Digi-Key, Thief River Falls is one of our great regional hubs in terms of economic development," said Sen. Norm Coleman. "During my most recent visit to Thief River Falls, I heard firsthand about the critical need for continued essential air service to the Twin Cities. I committed to working on this issue at that meeting, and I am very excited that the Department of Transportation recognized the need for this continued service today."

Last week, Sen. Coleman sent a letter to Dennis J. DeVany, chief of Essential Air Service Division, U.S. Department of Transportation, requesting that the City of Thief River Falls receive "Essential Air Service" designation. Citing the dynamic community and businesses in Thief River Falls, Coleman wrote in support of Mayor Steve Nordhagen's request for additional air service between Thief River Falls Regional Airport and Minneapolis/St. Paul International Airport.

Service will be provided with a 34-seat Saab 340 aircraft. Mesaba Aviation has been providing service to the community of Thief River Falls since the 1980's. Mesaba has an agreement with Northwest Airlines that allows passengers from Thief River Falls to make on-line connections to the national air transportation system.

Mesaba had requested a two-year annual subsidy of $1,065,639 to cover 12 one-stop round trips each week to Minneapolis/St. Paul from Thief River Falls.

In the letter, the city asked for more seats than the 34 seats currently allocated to the Thief River Falls market. It also asked for 14 flights per week – two flights per day every day.

Ron Lindberg, public works director, explained that the request didn't mean they were requesting all 34 seats be allocated to Thief River Falls passengers. The "illusion" was that Thief River Falls was supposed to get 15 seats, but there have been times when there have been far fewer seats available to passengers boarding in Thief River Falls.

Demolition of hospital building to be finished

Karlstad - "With the planned demolition of the old hospital and clinic building in Karlstad getting closer to reality, the City Council decided to ask for quotes for the project, which is scheduled to happen this year. Dean Henney served in the Marines, but early 1992 was a turning point for him. His father, a World War II veteran, died.

"After reading an article concerning another Minnesotan's experiences on Iwo Jima, Henney decided to interview this veteran. He arranged to speak to Chuck Lindberg, one of the Marines who was part of the first group of soldiers to raise the flag on Mount Suribachi during the battle for Iwo Jima.

"This interview eventually spawned several others with veterans of the battle. These conversations eventually developed into a one-hour film documentary that Henney paid for with $10,000 of his own money. He titled it 'Iwo Jima: 50 Years of Memories.'

"Henney's film aired on PBS in 1995 and again in 1996. TLC broadcast the documentary in 1997 as well.

"Wal Mart in Bemidji has tentatively scheduled a special distribution day for the film on Saturday, July 7. Henney will be present." Currently, Henney is working on other film projects. - The 13 Towns of Fosston, June 5, 2007, by Don Kendall

Feedlot hearing set for June 20

An ordinance regulating livestock and poultry feedlots in Marshall County will have its final public hearing at 7 p.m. on Wednesday, June 20 at the Community Center in Newfolden. This public hearing was originally scheduled for June 6.

The public hearing comes after a public hearing held last November. At that time, the Marshall County Board of Commissioners decided to appoint a countywide feedlot committee to consider issues and develop a draft ordinance regulating feedlots within Marshall County.

The committee has completed a draft ordinance which will require conditional use permits for feedlots over 500 animal units (1,000 pounds = 1 animal unit). The ordinance will also create setback distances from liquid manure systems to existing homes and public facilities with additional restrictions for those lots over 500 animal units. These

For the past 10 years, Canadian Pacific Railway has provided children participating in the camp an opportunity to ride on a passenger car. "This is a great service provided by Canadian Pacific," said Tom Supar, Canadian Pacific. "Not many kids get to ride in a passenger car anymore."

This car was brought from Duluth to Thief River Falls. It was built in the 1960s.

A total of 115 children and 26 counselors participated in Safety Camp this year. This was the 13th year for the annual event, which involves demonstrations and presentations by safety experts with many departments in the city and county.

TRF looks at police staffing issues

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

Thief River Falls Police Chief Kim Murphy expects his department's budget will be $1,578,747 in 2008. At the Thief River Falls City Council meeting on Tuesday, he faced numerous questions about how his department could save money.

About 79 percent of the proposed budget, or $1,203,295, covers wages and benefits. In terms of benefits, that amount includes Public Employee Retirement Association contributions, FICA contributions, Medicare contributions, health insurance and life insurance.

At the council meeting, Murphy was asked to provide information at a later date on how much money other cities the size of Thief River Falls spend on their police departments and how much of those budgets are dedicated to wages and benefits.

Regarding the Thief River Falls Police Department's proposed budget for 2008, council member Odette Bendickson noted the city would pay about $80,000 for each of its current 15 police department employees. Bendickson, who recently observed one night of work at the police department, noted that she understood the city needs a certain number of police officers for safety. Yet, Bendickson said cost savings would have to come from employees' wages and benefits due to the percentage of the budget dedicated for those things.

Council member Glen Kajewski asked about the budget amounts for other cities about the size of Thief River Falls.

Murphy replied that Thief River Falls' police budget was about the same as budgets for police departments in cities about the same size as Thief River Falls. Murphy added that the department receives more calls for service than other communities about the same size as Thief River Falls. He doesn't know why his department receives more calls for service.

Bendickson raised concerns about the department's 11.7-hour shifts. "I don't personally think it's as safe as a shorter shift," she said.

Murphy replied that he worked an 11.7-hour shift the day before the council meeting. Murphy, who has worked for other law enforcement agencies with shifts around that length, indicated that he doesn't mind working an 11.7-hour shift. He noted he thinks officers and

Never give in to cancer

by David Hill
Editor

Keep at it. Don't give up. It just takes time. Those are the words of advice Jeff Vacura would share with anyone fighting cancer.

Vacura has been named one of Pennington County's honorary chairpersons of the Relay For Life, June 8 and 9, in Thief River Falls. To all cancer victims, Vacura says it takes a toll on your body and your family. But he also tells them not to give up.

In the second week of March 2006, Vacura went to the clinic for a pre-op exam. He was planning to have surgery done on one of his legs. But an x-ray taken during that pre-op visit revealed a tumor in his lung. His doctor immediately directed him to a specialist, and during that visit in Fargo, N.D., Vacura was told the lump was cancer and that the tumor had to come out.

On March 31, doctors removed the tumor. Vacura said he was in [illegible] for five days. Following surgery he went through four months of chemotherapy in Thief River Falls and nine weeks of radiation in Grand Forks, N.D. During this experience, he lost his hair and 50 pounds and didn't work for 10 weeks. And as he put it, "it took its toll upon my family."

Vacura said he had few side effects from the treatments. [illegible] went away. It was most difficult for his family – his wife Kathy, his daughters Jody Nelson and Jana Nelson. It changes everything, he said, and puts a lot of stress on the cancer patient and his or her family. It's not easy, he said, and "it's something you have to live with" but it changes everything – daily moods, job and job performance, interactions between members of the family, daily activities, and your financial situation.

Vacura is the sole owner and proprietor of Jeff's Barbershop in Thief River Falls. Stepping into the shop takes visitors back in time. There's no telephone; a handmade sign on the wall tells visitors how much [illegible]

Summer is well on the way and who has time to fuss with meals? Try some of today's recipes to make delicious meals your family will enjoy:

BEEF STROGANOFF SANDWICH
2 pounds ground beef
1/2 cup chopped onion
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1 loaf French bread
Softened butter or margarine
2 cups (16 ounces) sour cream
2 tomatoes, seeded and diced
1 large green pepper, diced
3 cups (12 ounces) shredded cheddar cheese

In skillet, brown ground beef and onion. Drain. Add salt, garlic powder and pepper. Cut bread lengthwise in half and butter both halves. Place on baking sheets.

Remove meat mixture from the heat. Stir in sour cream. Spoon onto the bread. Sprinkle with tomatoes, green pepper and cheese. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until the cheese is melted. Bake longer for crispier bread. Serves 8-10 people.

Serve this old favorite a different way as a side dish - use that fresh dill from your garden:

CREAMY DILLED CARROTS
4 cups thinly sliced carrots
3/4 cup water
1 tablespoon butter or margarine
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon sugar
Pinch white pepper
1 tablespoon all-purpose flour
1/2 cup light cream
2 teaspoons dried dill or 2 tablespoons fresh dill

In saucepan, combine carrots, water, butter, salt, sugar and pepper. Cover and simmer until carrots are crisp-tender, about 10 minutes. Drain liquid into a small saucepan; set carrots aside and keep warm.

Bring liquid to a boil. In a small bowl, combine flour and cream until smooth. Slowly add to liquid, stirring constantly. Simmer 10 minutes, stirring occasionally. Pour over carrots and stir in dill. Cover and let stand 15 minutes before serving. Serves 6-8 people.

Use your first fresh garden produce in this tasty salad that will be great with your fancy sandwich - fresh spinach is good too:

WILTED LETTUCE SALAD
1 bunch leaf lettuce, torn
6-8 radishes, thinly sliced
4-6 green onions with tops, thinly sliced
Dressing:
4-5 bacon strips
2 tablespoons red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon pepper

Toss lettuce, radishes and onions in a large salad bowl. Set aside. In skillet, cook bacon until crisp. Remove to paper towels to drain.

To hot drippings, add vinegar, lemon juice, sugar and pepper. Stir well. Immediately pour dressing over salad. Toss gently. Crumble bacon on top. Serves 6-8 people.

Have you ever wanted to make one of these special German baked treats? Here's a recipe for you - amounts for half of the recipe are in parentheses:

KUCHEN
(GERMAN COFFEE CAKE)
1/2 (1/4) cup water
2 (1) cups milk
1 (1/2) teaspoon salt
3/4 (1/3) cup sugar
1/2 (1/4) cup butter or margarine
2 (1) packages active dry yeast
6 (3) to 8 (4) cups flour (divided)
2 (1) eggs, beaten
Topping
2 (1) cups packed brown sugar
2 (1) cups cream
Ground cinnamon

Heat water, milk, salt, sugar and butter to 120-130 degrees.

In a large mixing bowl, combine yeast, 6 (3) cups flour, eggs and hot liquid. Beat with wooden spoon or electric mixer with dough hook until a soft dough forms, adding more flour as needed.

Knead smooth and elastic and place in greased bowl, cover and let rise until doubled, about 1 1/2 hours.

Divide dough and place in two greased 9x13 inch baking pans; cover and let rise until doubled, about 1 1/2 hours.

For topping, combine sugar and cream. Poke finger holes 1/2 inch apart over entire dough surface. Divide topping and pour over cakes. Sprinkle with cinnamon. Bake at 350 degrees for 20 minutes or until done. Makes 2 cakes, 15 servings each.

Muffin Goes Home

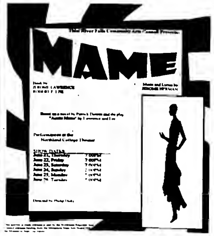
Six months ago, I noted to myself how our dog, Muffin, had gotten old but was still holding her own. A few weeks ago, I told you that Muffin was now sick but still comfortable and happy. Today, I want to tell you that my little daughter-dog (her favorite nickname) has gone home.

I adopted Muffin from the Humane Society of Grand Forks, N.D., in 1994. Muffin was "stuffed animal" cute as a pup. Muffin liked lots of play and measured amounts of affection; she would let me hug her for a little bit but would then push away by making her body curve away from me. She was such a good friend and saw me through bad times, such as the winter spent with frozen water pipes back in 1996, and the good times like when I went from single father to the married version.

When our other dog, Rudy, died it was unexpected and shocking. Muffin's death was telegraphed well ahead of time by her condition and was carried out at a scheduled time. She had quit eating and even worse had quit drinking, so I brought her to the veterinarian for a humane death. Any guilt I might have felt washed when I looked into her sunken eyes. I was tense that last day so I tried to keep busy with routine. I worked around the yard, and stopped to pet Muffin often and tell her things I needed her to know. When it came time to leave, I laid out a quilt in the pick-up and lifted her into the cab. Muffin settled in and relaxed, which surprised me, as lately she fidgeted whenever I took her for a ride. As we left the farm, she kept her nose above the windowsill to take in sights and smells. I kept my hand on her back and softly narrated the life she lived as it passed before her eyes: "See your dog house?" "There's where you used to swim," "Look at the cows." It was comforting to see her drink in the sights and sounds of the place that had been her home, and hearing my own voice kept me from falling apart. The things I said to her seemed like the things my own parents might have said to calm me when I needed to leave home as a youngster (I am a major homebody).

Muffin has always been stoic about life and she faced death the same way. She approached this visit to the veterinarian much more calmly than trips made for less serious reasons. The veterinarian was so kind and explained how Muffin would receive a shot to eliminate any pain, and a second to end her life. I held Muffin's head for several minutes after the first shot and rubbed her ears and talked to her.

These few minutes were so familiar and nice that it was quite lovely. My prayers prior to her death are private but no less fervent than what I'd offer for a human at death. If you ask me how I believe there is heaven for animals I would answer that God cares for everything he creates. I also have faith, which is nothing more than meeting God halfway.



Muffin joined her old buddy, Rudy, and new friend Cooper in our pet cemetery last Friday. Shakespeare spoke of death as sleep Many of his most famous lines reference sleep and death in the same thought. I buried Muffin in that old quilt which previously gave me many nights of good slumber. I know it will do the same for her.

Win-E-Mac runner Travis Planta was tagged out by Red Lake County third baseman Nolan Knott in the third inning of Tuesday's Section 8A high school baseball tournament semifinal game at the Multi-Events Center in Thief River Falls. Planta was trying to go from first to third on an errant pick-off throw.

Section 8A on TRF diamond

Red Lake County beat Win-E-Mac 6-1 and Badger/Greenbush-Middle River handled Cass Lake-Bena 11-1 Tuesday in the Northland Community and Technical College-hosted 2007 Section 8A high school baseball tournament semifinals at the Multi-Events Center in Thief River Falls.

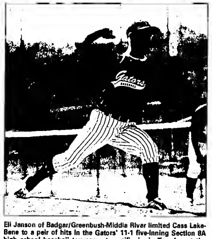
Results produced a fourth meeting of the year between the winners, this time with a state tournament berth on the line.

Red Lake County, a cooperative between Red Lake Falls, Oklee and Plummer, shattered a 1-1 tie with a five-run fifth inning fueled by Win-E-Mac mistakes.

Both sides scored second inning runs. Earl Moran drew a two-out, full-count bases-loaded walk to give the Patriots a 1-0 edge, but Aaron Deroiser drove a double into the right-center field gap on a hit-and-run for a game-tying RBI in the bottom of the frame.

The standoff continued until the fifth when, with no out and runners at first and third, a high Casey Cardinal fly ball to left field was dropped. That allowed the go-ahead run to cross the plate. Two more runs scored on the play when a throw to second sailed into right field, making it 4-1. A perfectly-placed suicide squeeze bunt by Patrick Johonneck and an error pushed the scoreboard spread to the 6-1 final.

Winning pitcher Jeff Weiss went the distance, giving up just two hits, striking out 10 and walking five.



Home runs by Dustin Lorenson and Allan Dostal supplied Badger/Greenbush-Middle River with an early-game advantage, and the Gators coasted into the title contest.

Lorenson hit a two-run shot over the left field fence in the second inning to open the scoring and Dostal's three-run blast the next frame landed in the same area for a 5-0 cushion.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River sealed it with a six-run fourth that ended the game early on the 10-run rule.

Lorenson, a junior catcher, also doubled as part of a 3-for-3 game at the plate.

It was a two-hit pitching performance for the Gators' Eli Jenson, who struck out two and walked five.

Eli Janson of Badger/Greenbush-Middle River limited Cass Lake-Bena to a pair of hits in the Gators' 11-1 five-inning Section 8A high school baseball tournament semifinal win Tuesday at the Multi-Events Center that produced a championship game appearance for the winner.

Mowers – cutting edge of motor sports racing

Four tentative dates have been announced for the 2007 Northwest Minnesota Lawn Mower Racing Series.

The Grasswhackers National will be held Wednesday, July 11, at the Pennington County Fair and the River City Mowdown Showdown will be Saturday, July 14, at the Grand Forks County Fair.

Sunday races will be held at Seven Clans Casino of Thief River Falls Sunday, Aug. 19 and Sept. 16.

Races will be held in two divisions – Stock and Outlaw – and three age groups.

Race promoter Terry BlackLance says the Stock Division will provide entry-level races for those with "little or no budget" to work with. "The intention," he said, "is allow riders to use mow-ready riding lawn mowers for competition with only minor safety changes.

The Outlaw Division, noted BlackLance, will allow for more modifications, with riders using the official United Lawn Mower Racing Association rules covering performance-enhanced machines.

For additional information or a set of official race rules, call 218-686-5020, or check available information online at www.midwest-dirtracing.com.

DNR enforcement staff is filled

For the first time since the early 1980s, Minnesota's 152-field conservation officer stations are staffed.

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources officials made the announcement May 1, when 18 conservation officers were sworn into duty after graduating from the 12-week Conservation Officer Academy at Camp Ripley.

DNR Enforcement Chief Conservation Officer Col. Mike Hamm praised the candidates on their successful completion of the Academy, calling them part of the DNR's vanguard of protection for Minnesota's outdoor heritage.

Hamm noted that 131 officers have graduated from the Academy since 1997. They have filled the ranks of officers hired in the 1970s and 1980s who have retired. He said reaching full staffing would not have been possible without the assistance of many people and organizations.

"With this class of graduates, the DNR has a full complement of field officers to uphold the laws and regulations that protect our natural resources," Hamm said. "This would not have been possible without the assistance of Gov. Pawlenty, all of our elected officials, outdoors stakeholder groups and individuals, the media and the people of Minnesota."

A typical conservation officer is responsible for an average patrol area of nearly 600 square miles of Minnesota's natural resources. That responsibility includes general natural resources law enforcement, investigations and education.

Although the DNR Enforcement Division is at full complement, Hamm noted it will be so for only a short time since more retirements are expected in the coming months. Another Academy is tentatively scheduled to begin in May 2008 to meet the shortfall.

In all, new conservation officers study 52 subjects while at the Academy before spending 16 weeks with their field training officer. The field training officer is a veteran conservation officer who will "show them how to do it, assist them in doing it and then evaluating how well they do it," Hamm said.

Upon completing field training, the new conservation officers will receive their initial assignments. These newest conservation officers and their assignments include: Aaron Kahre, Minnetonka; Brent Wiebusch, Spring Valley; Michael Martin, International Falls; Anthony Salzer, Ortonville; Daniel Thomasen, Two Harbors; Matthew Miller, Mora; Edward Picht, Madison; Troy Richards, Roseau; Brent Ihnen, Worthington; Brandon McGaw, unassigned at this time; Brian Dobbick, unassigned at this time; Paul Parthun, unassigned at this time: Jeffrey Denz, Montevideo; Gregory Salo, unassigned at this time; Shane Siltala, unassigned at this time; Troy TerMeer, Babbitt; Daniel McBroom, Silver Bay; and Robert Gorecki, unassigned at this time.

State land will be put up for public auction sale June 15

Minnesota Department of Natural Resources will offer 36 parcels of state land for sale to the public at oral auctions on June 11-15.

Included in the auctions will be lands from Aitkin, Beltrami, Cass, Cook, Crow Wing, Isanti, Lake, Marshall, Morrison, Otter Tail, Pine and St. Louis counties. Many of the parcels are 40-acre tracts with recreational or development opportunities.

Prospective bidders are urged to obtain full information on properties and sale conditions prior to the auction. No properties offered at oral auction will be sold for less than the minimum bid identified for each property on the property data sheet. The minimum bid consists of the value of the land and any improvements, the timber value and sale costs.

Property data sheets for all parcels are available from the DNR, and contain exact locations, minimum bids, date and location of auction for that property, site description and property condition.

For information about the properties, call the DNR land sale line at toll free at 1-888-MINNDNR (646-6367). Information about the land sale is also available on the DNR Web site at www.dnr.state.mn.us, or request information by e-mail at landsale@dnr.state.mn.us.

Aquatic hitchhikers looking for rides

With the 2007 boating and fishing season under way, the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources is asking boaters and anglers to keep up the good work in minimizing the spread of aquatic invasive species.

"The continuing spread of zebra mussels and the discovery of New Zealand mudsnails in Minnesota have us especially concerned," said Jay Rendall, DNR invasive species program coordinator. "The potential to spread aquatic invasive species increases each year and we need Minnesotans to continue with their high level of action."

Zebra mussels were discovered a few years ago in the Brainerd area and New Zealand mudsnails were recently found for the first time in the Duluth harbor.

By taking a few simple steps when leaving a lake or river, boaters and anglers can do their part to help stop the spread of aquatic hitchhikers such as Eurasian watermilfoil and zebra mussels in the state's water bodies. Those steps include removing all aquatic plants from boats and trailers and emptying water from live wells and bait containers.

Those who leave lakes and rivers the DNR has listed as infested waters need to be especially careful, Rendall said. Anglers who have live bait and want to keep it for another time should drain any infested water from the bait container and replace it with tap or spring water. Signs are posted at public access points to identify infested waters. A complete list of infested waters is available at www.dnr.state.mn.us/ecological_services/pubs_invasives.html

Rendall said boaters should also remember to dispose of unwanted live bait including worms and minnows in the trash rather than dumping them in the lakes and woods.

Lake of the Woods and Rainy River watercraft inspectors are needed

Department of Natural Resources is seeking watercraft inspector interns to help inform and educate the public about aquatic invasive species. During the boating season, these inspectors are stationed at public accesses on lakes and rivers infested with invasive species such as Eurasian watermilfoil and zebra mussels.

"We're looking for enthusiastic young adults interested in doing important environmental conservation work," said Heidi Wolf, DNR watercraft inspection program coordinator.

Other duties include assisting with access posting, conducting invasive species plant removal and other natural resource projects. These are full-time temporary internships that start in late April and run through the end of October, with flexibility for students still in school.

Positions are available in the Rainy River, Rainy Lake and Lake of the Woods areas. Applicants must have a valid Minnesota driver's license and be eligible to receive school credit for the position.

For more information, or to request an application, contact Heidi Wolf at 651-259-5152.

The buzz about town is just the mosquitoes

Recent wet weather is sure to benefit the production of mosquitoes - and the spread of West Nile virus. It's not too early to start being concerned. This past week, officials in South Dakota reported their first West Nile case of the season. According to a story in the Aberdeen News on Wednesday, a Hanson County resident in the 30-39 age group was the first confirmed case of 2007.

The story reported that most people who get the virus do not become ill, but West Nile virus can produce encephalitis or meningitis. Three percent to 15 percent of those with the most severe illness die, and death rates are highest among the elderly, according to the Health Department.

Local officials have already started monitoring the mosquito population, and spraying will probably begin in the near future. There are things you can do to protect yourself. In fact, the best protection from West Nile virus is to use insect repellent, wearing clothing that limits skin exposure, and by not going outside during times when mosquitoes are most active.

Area residents may also consider what they can do to limit the mosquito population. People should eliminate sources of standing water on their property, such as old tires, sagging gutters, empty plant trays, fountains or stagnant birdbaths.

West Nile virus is generally not a threat to most people. But, a combination of personal protection and mosquito control programs can go a long way to reducing your threat or exposure to mosquitoes and West Nile virus.

9th Annual Climax Small Town Saturday to be celebrated

by Anthony De La Garza
Climax Arts Council Writer

The 9th Annual Climax Small Town Saturday is back this year with more events and even with an extra night of fun. Mark your calendars for Saturday June 23.

The bread and butter of the festival, the Bike/Hike/Canoe from Frog Point to the Sand Hill Log Site, once again kicks off the day at 9 a.m. Registration is at the Sand Hill Log Site. Free t-shirts will be given out this year as well. Another annual event is the picnic lunch provided by the Climax Fire Department. The lunch will take place from 11 a.m. to 2 p.m. The crowd-pleasing Boxing Invitation returns once again to the Spokely Events Center in Climax, located behind the Climax Library. Fights begin at 2 p.m. The Boxing Invitational is sponsored by Golden Eagles and features fighters in a wide range of weight classes from the upper Midwest and Canada. The entrance fee is $5.

For kids, the swing ride, games and activities will take place from 1 to 4 p.m. Brand new to this year's festival will be Storytelling with Heidi Hoks. Hoks will also be featured at the pre-festival bonfire on Friday night at the Sand Hill Log Site from 7 to 9 p.m. Local fiddler Seth Mulder will also be there, leading a singalong of folk songs. The Friday Night Bonfire is a new event at the festival. Everyone is welcome to attend.

The Classic Car Show has become a festival staple. Local car enthusiasts work hard preparing their pride and joy, so be sure to get out to Hill Avenue and check them all out. The trophy presentation will follow the show. The Classic Car Show will be going on all afternoon. This year, a 6:30 p.m. parade will feature the classic cars and other vehicles.

On the menu for dinner will be the Grilled Pork Cookout. Running for many years now, it still has all the appeal that it did on its inaugural start. Keeping the mass' hunger in check will be master grill chef Keith Dale. Dinner starts at 5 p.m. The cookout is sponsored by the Sand Hill Settlement Historical Society and takes place at the Climax Community Center. Musical entertainment will be provided by The Auctioneers.

The Climax Small Town Saturday is very pleased to announce a first in the history of the Festival, an all-acoustic music festival, which will feature four local acoustic musicians. The outdoor music fest is called Sardana Fest. It will take place at the parking lot of the Spokely Events Center. The four performers are My Only Chance, which consists of Crookston duo Deborah Halstad and Gareth McNichol-Briggs. They have played at the Minnesota State Fair and bring a soothing harmonizing appeal to the music fest. Grand Forks, N.D., native Jonathan Tweet is the founding member of The Syds, a Grand Forks alternative rock band. Tweet brings superb guitar playing skills. Climax's own recording artist Anthony De La Garza has an acoustic/psychedelic rock style, and he plays original music. He is currently playing headlining gigs in the area. His debut album "Ninastasis" is available through MySpace at www.myspace.com/anthonydelagarzamusic. Sardana Fest headliner Jamie Mulligan of Grand Forks has a minimalist approach to songwriting and has a tremendous vocal capacity with trance-like arpeggios played through her Taylor guitar. Mulligan's music can be listened to on MySpace at myspace.com/jamiemulliganmusic. Music starts at 6 p.m. All ages are welcome to attend. Sardana Fest is an alcohol-free event.

In addition, The Auctioneers will play at the Climax Community Center starting at 7:30 p.m. The Auctioneers feature two members, accordion player Joe Gust and rhythm guitarist, drummer and singer Arvin Sundby. They have played together for 26 years and continue to entertain audiences with youthful enthusiasm. The Spanish Dance will run concurrently this year with The Auctioneers to promote variety amongst the audience. After the music has finished at the Community Center, the general public is once again invited to the Sand Hill Log Site for a nightcap of singalongs at the bonfire.

Car seat safety clinic in Roseau on June 18

Child passenger safety and the correct use of child passenger safety seats have become a leading cause of concern for traffic safety professionals, health care workers, safety advocates, and employers.

In Minnesota, incorrect usage of child safety seats and safety belts has been documented at over 80 percent. Parents, care givers, service providers and advocates are often amazed at the incompatibility problems that exist between safety belt systems, vehicle seats, and child safety seats. Yet, injuries can largely be prevented by correctly using the appropriate child safety seat. In fact, studies have shown that a correctly used safety seat reduces the risk of death or serious injury in a crash by up to 70 percent.

Motor vehicle crashes cost employers more than $50 billion dollars annually in medical care, legal expenses, property damage, and lost productivity. Crashes drive up the cost of health benefits such as Worker's Compensation, Social Security, and private health and disability insurance.

In response to the high rate of misuse, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration developed a child passenger safety curriculum and national certification process. Based on this new certification, the Minnesota Department of Public Safety has developed guidelines for child passenger safety education in Minnesota.

On Monday, June 18, there will be a Car Seat Clinic from 2 to 5 p.m. at the Messiah Lutheran Church, 502 9th Ave. N.E., Roseau. In case of inclement weather, the clinic will be moved to Roseau County Ford. At this clinic, certified passenger safety technicians will check car seats for installation errors, expired car seats/boosters, correct use of the car seat/booster and that children are in the appropriate seat. They will also educate the public that even though Minnesota law only requires children up to the age of 4 to be in car seats/boosters, it is best to keep your child in a car seat/booster until they are 4-feet, 9-inches tall. At that height, the seatbelt will lay properly on a child. Car seat safety is about saving lives.

Agassiz Swedish Heritage Society plans Midsommar celebration June 20

Agassiz Swedish Heritage Society will hold its annual Midsommar Festival Wednesday, June 20 at the Lancaster City Park. Activities begin with coffee and goodies provided by members at 2 p.m., followed by decorating the maypole with flowers and greens at 2:30 p.m.

Organizing the event is Lyndon Johnson of Hallock, who requests that people bring wildflowers and green leafy branches. The highlight of the event is raising the maypole, followed by dancing around the maypole to music provided by Stanley Visness, who plays guitar and his daughters, who play violins, from Karlstad. Everyone is invited to join in the ring-dances around the maypole. Johnson will also provide vocal numbers, accompanying himself on the mandolin.

Concluding the afternoon, everyone is invited to the Sion Lutheran Church in Lancaster for its annual Swedish smorgasbord, which begins at 4:30 p.m. In Sweden, Midsommar marks the longest day of the year and the first day of summer. Summer in Sweden is short. It starts in May and bursts into life in June. Nights are scarcely dark and in the north of Sweden, the sun never sets. Midsommar is an occasion of large gatherings and celebrations. This heritage will be remembered June 20 in Lancaster.

Rodnes Lutheran Church to host bake sale and rummage sale

Rodnes Lutheran Church of rural Erskine will host a bake sale and rummage sale on Saturday, June 23, from 8 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. Rummage sale items include household items, collectibles, books, clothing and other items.

Volunteers needed for rare orchid counts

The Minnesota Natural Heritage Program is seeking volunteers to spend one or more days, between July 6-9, helping count western prairie fringed orchids in the vicinity of Crookston, Fertile and Thief River Falls.

Assisting with monitoring crews provides a rare opportunity to see this spectacular native prairie orchid in places that are usually difficult to find on your own.

The western prairie fringed orchid (platanthera praeclara) is a federally threatened tallgrass prairie plant whose largest populations are in northwestern Minnesota, the Sheyenne delta of North Dakota, and southern Manitoba, Canada. The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has been keeping tabs on the state's populations of this plant for over 10 years.

Population sizes fluctuate from year to year, depending partly on precipitation during the previous fall. Flowering times typically begin just after the Fourth of July. Plants may flower for less than a week to nearly three weeks, depending on the weather. Volunteer help is crucial in counting a large number of populations in a short time.

The majority of volunteer work is on public lands that are not easily accessible. Volunteers must be over the age of 16, able to invest a full work day, and capable of walking on wet or uneven ground. They can anticipate working as part of a team led by DNR staff or experienced volunteers. Training is in the field at a pre-designated rendezvous site.

For more information or to register for this volunteer activity, contact derek.anderson@dnr.state.mn.us or call (651) 259-5071 by June 29. After that, call (651) 331-8291. Provide your full name, e-mail address if you have one, specific days on which you can commit to be available, and a call back number at which you can most easily be reached during evenings or weekends. Please pre-register for purposes of scheduling and safety. Once you are registered, you are being counted on to help.

For those with a more casual interest in the orchids, a prairie field trip, open to the public, will leave the intersection of Highway 2 and State Highway 32, approximately 16½ miles east of Crookston at 9 a.m. on Saturday, July 7.

This trip will go to a site where young people and senior citizens can observe the orchids without a long walk. This trip does not require pre-registration, but it is important to be on time since the site that will be visited is not the meeting place where the trip starts. Wear a hat, bring plenty of drinking water, and don't forget your camera.

investigators get more accomplished while working 11 -hour shifts.

After being questioned by Bendickson, Murphy said that some other police departments work 10 -hour shifts and some work 12-hour shifts. He indicated other departments work shifts between those amounts.

Police departments find there is a cost savings when they work a shift longer than eight hours, noted Murphy, who referred to the need for more employees if officers worked eight-hour shifts.

As for his department, Murphy said it saved close to $11,000 in overtime last year with a full staff working 11½-hour shifts. Currently, the department plans to hire two new police officers for vacant positions. (With those two additions, the department will have 10 police officers, two sergeants, a police chief, a deputy police chief, an adult investigator, a juvenile investigator/school liaison officer, a parking attendant/secretary, and a word processing technician.) Since their department is understaffed, officers have accrued overtime to cover shifts.

Bendickson wondered aloud whether shorter split shifts were an option for the department.

Sometimes police officers and investigators work split shifts for special events or during those times when they are only able to interview a person after the officer's normal work schedule, Murphy noted.

"I can't really imagine anyone wanting a split shift," said council member Ken Schmalz.

Bendickson agreed but said it was an option to cover shifts. She also questioned whether the police department could work more closely with the sheriff's department to cover law enforcement responsibilities in the city.

Murphy replied that one or two sheriff's deputies are on duty during the daytime. One of the those deputies may be in court and the other could be transporting inmates or serving civil papers. On a weekend that he worked, Murphy said, deputies weren't in the office but were on call in the event of an emergency. He went on to say that some deputies, such as dispatchers or jail staff, aren't law enforcement-licensed and wouldn't be available to the police department.

In addition to the police department budget, the council also looked at the fire department's proposed budget for 2008. Council members didn't question the amount of that budget or whether the department could save money in terms of labor. For 2008, the budget is expected to be $626,005. Of that amount, $531,650, or 85 percent of the budget, is expected to cover full-time, temporary and premium salaries; contributions to PERA and Medicare; health insurance and life insurance. The department has a staff of seven full-time employees, including the two co-fire chiefs; and 25 volunteer firefighters.

The council approved hiring three volunteer firefighters pending criminal background checks. The new firefighters are Nathan Larson, Wayne Nomeland and Paul Gonsorowski.

Hanson inducted into DFL Hall of Fame

associate chairperson to her current position of chairperson of Senate District 1.

Hanson founded the Marshall County DFL Women's Club to get more women involved in DFL politics, but her tireless advocacy goes well beyond the DFL extending to farmers and farm women. The first woman to serve as vice president of the Minnesota Farmers Union, Hanson today is vice president of the Marshall County Farmers Union. She was also instrumental in founding Minnesota Agri-Women and establishing the Minnesota Ag-in-the-Classroom program.

State Sen. LeRoy Stumpf and Doug Peterson, MFU president, had high praise for Hanson's contribution to grassroots politics. "Norma Hanson strongly represents the 'F' in DFL and has been a role model and leader for women in this state," they said.

Thank You All

So very much for your part in celebrating my 85th Birthday with cards, wishes, gifts and attendance at the Tuesday afternoon party at Viking Covenant Church.

May the Lord Bless You for this memorable day I will never forget, "keep looking up."

setbacks will vary depending upon the size of the feedlot, and will include setbacks as well for solid manure systems over 1,000 animal units. The ordinance will also create setback distances for all feedlots to cities and public water supplies within the county, and it will regulate a number of other issues dealing with feedlots. All currently operating feedlots in Marshall County are grandfathered in at their existing size and distance to other buildings.

The draft ordinance has been sent to all township officials, current registered feedlot owners and city mayors. The public hearing on June 20 will provide final input to the County Board from all interested parties. After all written and verbal input has been received, the County Board can decide to approve the existing draft, approve the draft with changes or abandon the draft ordinance altogether.

A copy of the draft ordinance is available upon request at the Marshall County Extension Office or the Marshall County Auditor's Office. Anyone wishing input on the proposed feedlot ordinance is strongly urged to attend the public hearing on June 20.

Lindberg said the city has never received a complete explanation as to why, so the letter they submitted stated that the city wanted more seats and more flights. Another concern, Lindberg said, is the timing of those flights. He said he believes that if there were more convenient flights and more flights, more people would fly from Thief River Falls. In fact, it's possible, he said, that it could become profitable, and the city would not need a subsidy.

Thief River Falls Regional Airport has completed a number of improvements to the airport in the past several years. This year, Lindberg said the city has decided to go ahead with the purchase of a high-speed broom, which will help clear the runway for use on a more regular basis.

cut costs, and a transistor radio plays country music. It's quiet and peaceful, and simple, and it's just the way Vacura likes it.

Vacura has been a barber for 36 years, and he likes it simple. He also likes straightforward answers. That's probably why he likes his doctor. "He laid it on the line," said Vacura.

Because he was so straightforward, Vacura said he relied on what his doctor told him, adding that his attitude and approach gave him a lot of confidence to face what needed to be done.

Is anybody ever able to answer why they have cancer? There is a history of cancer in Vacura's family; his mother had colon cancer, and his brother died of stomach cancer. Vacura said he only quit smoking about five and one-half years ago, but he doesn't dwell on what caused him to have cancer. He believes everyone has cancer in them, and that something just triggers it.

Vacura said he's very thankful doctors caught his cancer early. "We're all happy it worked out well," he said.

It was a big relief, he said, when they told him that he was cancer free. And while he's feeling better and his hair is growing back, regaining his strength has been a slow process. That's why he encourages people to keep at it and don't give up. Vacura and his family also thank the many people who have been supportive during this hardship.

Roseau cadet receives ROTC award

Army ROTC Cadet Josh A. Magnusson is one of 273 cadets who received the 2007 George C. Marshall ROTC (Reserve Officer Training Corps) Award at the George C. Marshall Foundation in Lexington, Va. The award is named in the honor and legacy of General of the Army George C. Marshall, who served in World War II, and in the post-war era outlined a program of economic assistance and recovery for war-torn Europe.

At the annual seminar, awards are presented to the most outstanding Army ROTC cadet senior students who attend colleges and universities that host ROTC detachments. The students are the best and brightest in the ROTC program who will serve as the Army's future leaders. The cadet is a student at St. Cloud State University. Upon graduation from the host college or university and completion of the ROTC program, the cadet will receive a bachelor's degree and a commission of second lieutenant in the Army.

During the four-day seminar, award winners explore a broad range of national security issues and have roundtable discussions on how these issues affect national security.

He is the son of Doug Magnusson of Roseau and is a 2003 graduate of Roseau High School.

Outstanding Senior Citizens being sought

Nominations from county residents are now being sought for the 2007 Outstanding Senior Citizens of Pennington County. The Outstanding Senior Citizens will be recognized and honored at the Pennington County Fair on Friday afternoon, July 13, during a special program in the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center.

A man and a woman will be selected for this award. Nominees must be 70 by August 1, and whose outstanding community involvement can serve as an example in the county.

The county winners will receive special certificates of commendation from the Governor, and their names will be submitted to the Minnesota Board on Aging for the state selection process for Minnesota's Outstanding Senior Citizens. The winners will be announced at the Minnesota State Fair on Senior Day, the second Thursday of the State Fair.

The deadline for nominations for Outstanding Senior Citizen in Pennington County is June 20. Official nomination blanks can be obtained from Cliff Larson at 681-1190, Norma Hanson, Goodridge, at 378-4380, or the Heritage Community Center in Thief River Falls.

Selection of Minnesota's Outstanding Senior Citizens is a joint effort of the Minnesota Board on Aging, the State Fair Board, and the Minnesota Federation of County Fair officers.

Richard and Donna Parnow of Goodridge discovered this fawn in their CRP field. Richard said he was out working a fire break when a doe stood up nearby and wouldn't leave. He suspected that she had a fawn nearby and soon discovered he was right. Doe and fawn were left alone and were seen together later.

City Council sets response time

Roseau - "It was late in the monthly meeting of the Roseau City Council on Monday when council members discussed the issue that resembled a political football. Just exactly what should be the response time for police personnel?

"The old ordinance had stipulated that police personnel had to live within three miles of the city of Roseau, but similar statutes have been challenged in court in other municipalities, resulting in those ordinances being declared void."

"At the conclusion of the discussion, the council approved a new city ordinance that established a 10-minute response time." - Roseau Times-Region, June 9, 2007, by Jeff Olsen

County zoning ordinance revised,

Hallock - "Stemming from a request from a district court judge, the Kittson County zoning ordinance was passed with revisions after a public hearing June 4.

"Last month, commissioners viewed the final draft of the ordinance, which has not seen any pencil marks since 1995." Holly Anderson, Kittson County zoning administrator with the Kittson County Soil and Water Conservation District, said that the judge requested that the conditional use permit language needed to be clearer. "The variance section is now listed separately, too, to hold up better in court, Anderson explained. Most pointedly, she said was the 'prior ordinance did not grant the Board of Adjustment the power to grant conditional use permits.'" - Kittson County Enterprise, June 13, 2007, by Louise Money

Plans for staffing third grade are discussed

Warren - "Plans for teaching the third grade with only one classroom teacher, instead of the two previously assigned, were presented by Warren/Alvarado/Oslo Elementary Principal Kirk Thorstenson at the W/A/O School Board meeting Monday night.

"The ensuing discussion was at times rancorous amid efforts by two board members, Russ Steer and Carole DeMars, to consider hiring a part-time teacher to help with the student load. Their suggestion was stymied by a majority consensus that the matter had already been settled a few months ago." - Warren Sheaf, June 13, 2007

Family asks people to read before they get in "over their heads"

Red Lake Falls - "The family of Vincent L. Noah, 49, Champlin, who drowned last July, decided to travel down the path less taken and embarked on a mission to help prevent further loss of life due to recreation on the local waterways.

"With the cooperation of Dick Brunwell, Voyageur's View owner Robert Noah, the victim's brother, led an effort to design and fabricate a warning sign that was installed at the tubing entrance to the Red Lake River." - Red Lake Falls Gazette, June 14, 2007

Smilin' Accordion Players

Gene Sadowsky (left) and Marty Steckler learned to play the accordion at young ages – Gene at about age 7 and Marty at 4 1/2. Now, the two North Dakota natives play accordion together with the Little Bohemian Band. They performed May 30 during Lincoln High School physical education classes.

The Waltzing Little Bohemian Band

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

Gene Sadowsky took accordion lessons – for one month. In those days, accordion lessons cost 75 cents a week, but Gene's mom couldn't afford them. Gene's dad died when Gene was 4, so there wasn't much money to spare for the extravagance of accordion lessons. But that didn't stop Gene from continuing to learn how to play the accordion.

About 60 years later, Gene was playing the accordion at Lincoln High School in Thief River Falls. He and his friend, Marty Steckler, were playing for physical education classes as the students danced the waltz and polka.

Like Gene, Marty taught himself how to play the accordion with the help of records. One day, when he was 4½, he just decided to pick up the family accordion and learn how to play it. Since that time, he has performed with many people, including polka king Frankie Yankovic. Marty currently plays a 39-year-old accordion that once belonged to Frankie.

Gene also performed publicly with a band. He met Marty while both men were performing with separate bands at a polka fest in Washington. Four years ago, they decided to form their own band, the Little Bohemian Band, named in part due to Gene's heritage. The bandmates continue to perform together even though Gene lives in Albany, Ore., and Marty lives in Renton, Wash., a distance of about four hours from one another.

They also continue to play the accordion even though neither man reads musical notes. As Marty said, "We play by heart."

Playing by heart has served them well. While performing in Medina, N.D., Marty and Gene met Cathy Erickson of Middle River. Cathy has her own band, the Cathy Erickson Band, and the two bands performed May 28 at the American Legion Club in Middle River. Two days later, Cathy and the Little Bohemian Band were at LHS. The Little Bohemian Band will be back in this area in July, when it performs at the Pennington County Fair in Thief River Falls.

Given the amount of time the two handmates spend together, they know each other fairly well, and they tease each other. Gene was quick to point out that he has no bad habits. Yet, Gene was quick to point out one of Marty's bad habits. "He chews." For Marty's part, he said he'd better not tell a reporter about Gene's bad habits. Gene replied that he doesn't drink or smoke, but he quipped that he might cheat on his wife.

One of Mame's wild parties features guests dressed in their finest. Cast members for the Thief River Falls Community Arts Council Production of "Mame" are completing final preparations for the June 21 through 26 performances.

"Mame" to dazzle audience

The Thief River Falls Community Arts Council is inviting guests to "Mame," the first show of the summer season. This delightful musical, directed by Philip Hoks, will be on stage at the Northland Community and Technical College Theater June 21-26 at 7 p.m., except on Sunday, June 24, when a 2 p.m. matinee will be offered.

"Mame" is a Broadway musical written by Robert Lee and Jerome Lawrence, with music and lyrics by Jerome Herman. It is a musical adaptation of the novel and subsequent film "Auntie Mame," which starred Rosalind Russell. Opening at the Winter Garden Theater on May 24, 1966, "Mame" ran for 1,508 performances.

The story revolves around a wealthy aunt (who is really a wild party animal) and her antics while given the responsibility of her only nephew who comes to live with her after his parents have died. Mame's life is in grand style until the stock market crashes and she loses her money, but Aunt Mame is not about to be broken. The audience will be entertained with all of this commotion. The costumes alone are something to behold, with Mame herself having 15 costume changes, and her best friend Vera having nine before the end of the first act.

Philip Hoks has returned to direct this lively musical. Along with the directing cast, Hoks is also acting as his own technical director. His able assistant with the building project, as well as backstage management and collecting props is Ed Mooney. Brianna Geer is the music director, along with the professional expertise of Vanessa Martell who is working with the soloists. The costumer this year is Andrea Thibert, and she has a big undertaking with the multiple costumes that this show requires.

MDH issues water use warnings

McIntosh and Warroad water systems exceed standard for arsenic

Water systems in the city of McIntosh and the city of Warroad are among 15 municipal water systems that exceeded the standard for arsenic in 2006, according to the Minnesota Department of Health.

This summer, the city of McIntosh will drill two new wells from a water main that doesn't exceed the standard for arsenic. "We should be done by the first of September," said McIntosh City Clerk Teresa Syverson.

In Warroad, the problem has been resolved. "We're fine for arsenic in our community," said Dana Klos, superintendent of utilities. A new arsenic standard took effect on Jan. 1. On that date, the city shut down the well that exceeded the arsenic standard.

Other affected systems included Albany, Blaine, Buffalo Lake, Callaway, Dalton, Darwin, Dilworth, Dumont, Elizabeth, Lake Lillian, Mound, New Auburn and Norcross. Three community water systems also exceeded the standard for arsenic.

A revision to the Arsenic Rule, which was finalized in January 2001, lowered the limit to 10 parts per

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

A Thief River Falls City Council member lectured the council about its relationship with city employees during the Committee of the Whole meeting Tuesday.

"The morale of the city employees is quite low. ... Let's start working together as a team," council member Floyd Erickson said to his fellow council members. Erickson indicated he had heard "uptown" about city employees' low morale.

In the past month, the council has discussed such things as employee breaks, summer hours for employees, and ways that the police department could save money. These issues, along with other matters, have led to some discord between the council and city employees. (In several past editions of The Times, a Planning Commission member, city residents and another person familiar with the city of Thief River Falls wrote letters to the editor in support of city employees.)

In addition to addressing the need for the council to work together with city employees, Erickson also addressed evaluations of city departments. As part of a budget discussion during the June 5 council

Wetland gets federal award

The Bob Jacobson Wetland Restoration Project honored

The Minnesota Department of Transportation, in partnership with the Minnesota Board of Water and Soil Resources and with cooperation from the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, recently won a 2007 Federal Highway Administration Environmental Excellence Award.

In the restoration category it was given the award for the Bob Jacobson Wetland Restoration Project, which is located in Winger and Garden townships in Polk County. The project, formerly called the Wingard Wetland and Grassland Restoration Project, was renamed in remembrance of Jacobson. He was a former wetlands program supervisor with the Mn/DOT Office of Environmental Services, who died suddenly in January.

"Not until now have government agencies in Minnesota undertaken a wetland restoration effort as large as the Bob Jacobson restoration site," said Frank Pafko, OES director. The wetland restoration project is to restore approximately 1,900 acres on a flat expanse of historic Lake Agassiz with one day resembling what the land looked like before it was farmed.

The project was also designated by the FHWA as Temporary travel flexibility being allowed at borders

The U.S. departments of State and Homeland Security announced June 7 that U.S. citizens traveling to Canada, Mexico, the Caribbean and Bermuda who have applied for but not yet received passports can nevertheless temporarily enter and depart from the U.S. by air. They can depart by air with a government-issued photo ID and Department of State official proof of application for a passport through Sept. 30, 2007. The federal government is making this accommodation for air travel due to longer than expected processing times for passport applications in the face of record breaking demand.

The Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative was mandated by Congress in the Intelligence Reform and Terrorism Prevention Act of 2004 to strengthen border security and facilitate entry into the U.S. for citizens and legitimate international visitors. WHTI requirements for air travel took effect on Jan. 23, 2007.

Easy, taste-tempting summer cooking are what today's recipes are all about:

It's hard to cook for just a couple of people, but here's a yummy dish that tastes just like the big pot roasts, but it's made from beef shanks:

BABY POT ROASTS
2 beef shanks (about 1-1/2 pounds)
3 tablespoons flour, divided
1-1/2 cups cold water, divided
1/2 cup beef broth
1 tablespoon onion soup mix
1 garlic clove, minced
1 teaspoon Worcestershire
1/4 teaspoon thyme
1 large potato, peeled and cut into eighths
2 carrots, cut into 2 inch lengths
6 tiny onions or to your taste
Salt and pepper

Sprinkle meat with 1 tablespoon flour. Place in shallow 2 quart baking dish.

Mix 1 cup water, broth, soup mix, garlic, Worcestershire sauce and thyme. Pour over meat. Cover and bake at 325 degrees for 1-1/2 hours. Turn meat, add potato, carrots and onion, cover and return to oven for 30-45 minutes until vegetables are tender. Remove meat and vegetables to platter and keep warm.

To prepare gravy, skim fat from pan juices. Measure 1 cup of juices and place in small saucepan. Combine remaining flour and cold water and stir into juices. Cook and stir until thickened and bubbling, then one minute more. Season with salt and pepper. (Recipe serves 2.)

Another cost-cutting recipe for a main dish - this pepper steak is great to start early in the day and have ready for a hearty supper - and you can use some of that great garden produce to make it:

SLOW COOKER PEPPER STEAK
1-1/2 to 2 pounds beef round steak
2 tablespoons oil
1/4 cup soy sauce
1 cup chopped onion
1 garlic clove, minced
1 teaspoon sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon ground ginger
4 tomatoes, cut into eighths (or a 16 ounce can tomatoes with liquid, cut up)
2 large green peppers, cut into strips
1/2 cup cold water
1 tablespoon cornstarch
Cooked noodles or rice

Cut beef into 3x1 inch strips. Brown in oil in skillet. Transfer to a slow cooker. Combine next 7 ingredients and pour over beef. Cover and cook on low for 5-6 hours or until meat is tender. Add tomatoes and green peppers and cook 1 hour longer on low.

Combine cold water and cornstarch to make a paste. Stir into slow cooker liquid and cook on high until thickened. Serve over noodles or rice. (Recipe serves 6-8 people.)

This tart and tasty salad will be perfect with your meal, and it has nutritional info too:

STRAWBERRY-RHUBARB MOLD
1 cup fresh or frozen rhubarb, chopped
3/4 cup water
1 (3 ounce) package strawberry gelatin
1/3 cup sugar
1 tablespoon strawberry jam
1 cup pineapple juice, unsweetened
1 medium tart apple, diced
1/2 cup chopped walnuts, if desired

In saucepan over medium heat, bring rhubarb and water to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer 8-10 minutes or until rhubarb is tender. Remove from heat and add gelatin, sugar and jam. Stir until dissolved. Add pineapple juice.

Chill until partially set and add apple and nuts. Pour into 1 quart bowl, mold or bundt pan that has been coated with nonstick spray. Chill until set and top with dollop of mayonnaise or mix mayonnaise with sweetened whipped cream or thawed topping.

Recipe makes 6 half cup servings. Each serving (with sugar-free strawberry gelatin and jam and no nuts or mayonnaise) equals 96 calories, 33 mg sodium, 0 chol, 24 gm carb, 1 gm protein, trace fat. Diabetic Exchange is 1-1/2 fruit.

A rich, fudgy cake will be the best finish to any meal:

HOT FUDGE CAKE
1 cup flour
3/4 cup sugar
6 tablespoons cocoa, divided
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 cup milk
2 tablespoons oil
1 teaspoon vanilla
1 cup packed brown sugar
1-3/4 cups hot water
Whipped cream or ice cream for topping, as desired

In medium bowl, combine flour, sugar, 2 tablespoons cocoa, baking powder and salt. Stir in milk, oil and vanilla until smooth. Spread in ungreased 9 inch square baking pan.

Combine brown sugar and remaining cocoa and sprinkle over batter. Pour hot water over all and bake at 350 degrees for 35-40 minutes. Serve warm, topped with whipped cream or ice cream (if served warm, don't use whipped topping - it will melt).

Minnesota Energy Resources seeks customer input

Minnesota Energy Resources Corporation is looking for help from its customers. By completing an online survey at www.minnesotaenergyresources.com/survey, customers will provide the company with valuable input to help design future energy efficiency programs. After completing the online survey, customers will be entered for a chance to win one of 10 free home energy audits (valued at $300). When starting the survey, customers should have their natural gas bills handy since their information is entered via account numbers.

The information gained from the surveys will be used to design energy efficiency offerings and programs that are better suited for MER customers, based on how they use energy.

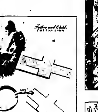
Woman killed after her pickup truck collides with a semi

A woman was killed Wednesday night after her pickup truck collided with a semi two miles south of Erskine.



Deborah L. Clark, 41, Gary, wasn't wearing a seat belt, and alcohol was detected in her system, according to the Minnesota State Patrol report. The report doesn't indicate whether the semi driver, Larry G. Monkman, 57, Salol, had been injured.

At the time of the accident, Clark was driving a 1997 Dodge Ram eastbound on Polk County Road 41. According to the report, she failed to stop for Monkman's 1995 Frue semi, which was northbound on Highway 59. Clark's pickup truck then struck the semi on the left side of the semi tractor. Both vehicles were totalled.

The State Patrol was dispatched to the scene at 10:05 p.m. Wednesday. The Polk County Sheriff's Department assisted at the scene.

CELEBRATE TAX FREEDOM DAY.
Did you know that prior to April 30, 2007, most Americans were actually working for Uncle Sam? It's true. On average, it took almost four months to earn enough to pay your 2007 income taxes.
If you'd like to pay yourself more and Uncle Sam less, consider:
• Federal income tax-free municipal bonds[1]
• Tax-deferred traditional IRA contributions
• Investments that pay qualified dividends (now taxed at a maximum of only 15%)[2]
May be subject to state, local and/or alternative minimum taxes
Dividends can be increased, decreased or totally eliminated at any point, with or without notice. An equity investment will fluctuate in price. When sold, you may receive more or less than your original investment amount. The tax advantages of dividends are set to expire on Dec. 31, 2010 unless extended by Congress.
To help make Tax Freedom Day come earlier for you, call your local Edward Jones financial advisor today.

9,300 unbelted motorists ticketed during seat belt enforcement campaign

A two-week "Click It or Ticket" statewide enforcement campaign generated 9,324 seat belt citations.

Last year in Minnesota, 373 vehicle occupants were killed in crashes and more than half – 194 – weren't buckled up. The Minnesota Department of Public Safety estimates half of those killed could have survived had they been wearing seat belts.

Preliminary reports have been filed by 327 law enforcement agencies. The final ticket tally will increase as more agencies submit reports. The Safe & Sober effort included participation from more than 440 law enforcement agencies. The Minnesota State Patrol issued 1,023 seat belt citations.

"A seat belt citation is the most effective tool to change motorist behavior," said Katherine Burke Moore, deputy director of the state's Office of Traffic Safety. "While a majority of Minnesotans do buckle up, unbelted motorists account for about 40 percent of all traffic deaths."

Minnesota's seat belt use rate is 83 percent. Belt use among young motorists – those over-represented in crashes – is 74 percent. Pickup truck drivers have the lowest belt use among all vehicle types at 76 percent compliance. Minnesota's 2007 seat belt use observational survey will be conducted in August.

Ongoing enforcement focusing on speeding and impaired driver behavior is planned throughout the state this summer – the deadliest period on Minnesota roads due to the combination of increased traffic driving at faster speeds and due to a spike in impaired driving.

Safe & Sober is an enforcement and education program funded by the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration and designed to reduce traffic deaths and serious injuries.

Funding for 2007 EQIP now available

The United States Department of Agriculture Natural Resources Conservation Service has announced funding for the 2007 Environmental Quality Incentives Program. EQIP provides cost share funding to install conservation practices and incentive payments for conservation management practices. Practices include crop residue management, conservation tillage, field borders, filter strips, and tree planting. Fences and livestock watering systems can be cost-shared for producers that have a qualifying rotational grazing system. Cost share is also available for the installation of wildlife practices and other conservation practices.

All applications for EQIP receive an environmental benefits score based on national, state and local scoring factors. This score determines which applications are selected for funding and provides the greatest environmental benefit for the dollars allocated. Local scoring factors for the 2007 applications were set at a meeting of the EQIP Local Work Group in October, 2006, convened by the Pennington Soil and Water Conservation District.

In 2007, 15 Pennington County residents received contracts totaling $471,745 in cost share and incentive payments. Pennington County originally received an allocation of $100,000 but obtained additional funding because of high program interest in this area and unused funds from other areas. Installation of the conservation practices from these contracts began this spring.

Producers interested in future EQIP signups are encouraged to contact the Pennington County NRCS field office. Contact Kathy Fillmore, district conservationist, at 218-681-1612 to discuss conservation practices that qualify and to start the application process.

Fee to become U.S. citizens increases July 30

Immigrants applying to become United States citizens will pay more than twice as much as they do now under a new plan that takes effect on July 30, 2007. The new fee structure is aimed at speeding up the processing of paperwork, but critics have suggested it could put citizenship beyond the realm of many immigrants. According to the U.S. Citizenship and Immigration Service, the application fee for citizenship will increase from $330 to $675.

To become a U.S. citizen, a legal immigrant must live in the United States for five years, or be married to a U.S. citizen for three years, after receiving a green card. In addition, an immigrant must be able to read, write and speak English, be of good moral character, and have a basic knowledge and understanding of U.S. history and government.

Free help with the citizenship process is available to qualifying immigrants through the local Adult Education program. For more information, please contact the Thief River Falls Adult Learning Center at 681-2542, or call 1-800-562-4053, ext. 117 for classroom locations.

Rural Reflections

The Pondless

I've gotten quite a bit of feedback since I wrote about not only collecting rain in a barrel, but employing a hand pump, to pump the rainwater and make the whole project look nice. It seems our number one summer activity is yard work, so I want to tell you about another project you may enjoy.

My latest project has been a pondless water feature. The term "water feature" is deliberately vague as you can use the pondless technique on many different projects. You may also wonder why you shouldn't simply use a standing pool of water as a reservoir for any garden water project. If you go pondless, you avoid creating the Las Vegas of breeding grounds for mosquitos, it's safer for kids as there's no open water in which to drown, less of the water evaporates and you avoid algae. Interested? Read on…

Now there is actually a reservoir with a pondless water feature. I suggest using a small plastic cattle tank or one of those vinyl totes, as they are fairly cheap and much more rugged than a pond liner. Dig a hole the size of your reservoir and make sure you cut out any tree roots as they could eventually wear a hole in your tank or tote. I layered a little wood mulch (you can use sand) at the bottom so making it level was easy. Now here's the magic part of a pondless; you need to find something to place inside your reservoir that can resist rock yet let water pass through it – I would suggest a large diameter, PVC drain field pipe. Set the reservoir/tote/cattle tank/whatever into the hole, then place a piece of drain field pipe, cut to the height of the tote, on end inside the reservoir. You can then dump (gently, please) some kind of clean rock into the reservoir, making sure it's large enough rock so it doesn't pass through the holes of the drain field pipe.

The hard work is done. You can either go rest on your laurels or persist and finish. That's a personal question of character. There is also the question of what kind of pump do you use to make this feature come to life. I chose a solar pump capable of moving one gallon per minute. When you fill your reservoir with rock, there will only be about 20 percent of the volume left for water, so you want a pump that strolls instead of sprints. I placed the pump in the bottom of the drain field pipe, then buried the cable through 15 feet of lawn to the solar panel, which I placed in full sun. I choose to use the pondless as a birdbath, so I placed it in a place where shade was prevalent. Drill a hole in the drain field cap to run a hose and power cord from the pump, place the cap on top of the drain field pipe, then cover everything with rock. In my case, I drilled a hole in the birdbath tub, ran the hose through it, then used some plumber's putty to seal it. I couldn't use the stand for the birdbath, as my little solar pump didn't have the horsepower to pump water that high.

After you fill the reservoir with a hose, you will need sunlight, which is someone "else's" department. As the pump is powered by solar rays, it will draw water from inside the drain field pipe and overfill the birdbath, the water will fall onto the rocks, then to the bottom of the reservoir where it will pass through the drain field pipe and start the whole process once again. The water stays cool due to the below-ground temperature, so it may take time for the birds to acclimate.

Forget safety, forget algae and forget reduced water evaporation. A pondless water feature is plain cool and just a little mysterious. Water rises and overflows apparently from nowhere, run by a pump with no visible means of propulsion, then overflows into a rock bed, which never becomes wet – kind of like a Rubik's Cube for your backyard.

Second audition for "Quilters" being offered

The Thief River Falls Community Arts Council announces a second audition for "Quilters," directed by Barb Geer. Auditions will begin at 7 p.m. Tuesday, June 19, in the Fireside Room of the United Methodist Church of Thief River Falls, located at 104 Horace Ave. N.

Seven female vocalists are needed for the production. Performances will be July 25-27 at the Northland Community and Technical College Theatre.

"Quilters" is the story of a pioneer woman and her six daughters. It blends a series of interrelated scenes into a rich mosaic that captures the sweep and beauty, the terror and joy, the harsh challenge and abiding rewards, of frontier life. Illuminating stories contained in various patches or "blocks" with music, dance and drama, the action depicts the lot of women on the frontier: girlhood, marriage, childbirth, spinsterhood, twisters, fire, illness and death. But, with this, there is also love, warmth, rich and lively humor, and the moving spectacle of simple human dignity and steadfastness in the face of adversity. In the end, when the various patches are assembled into one, glorious, brilliantly colorful quilt, the effect is both breathtaking and magical - and a theatrical masterstroke, which will linger in the mind and memory long after the house lights have dimmed.

"This is not the usual musical comedy," said Geer. "While it is very funny in much of the telling, the underlying drama of the phases of life is very moving. The music has an old-time country flair, but is at the same time challenging, with rich harmonies throughout. If there are women out there who are looking for a challenge, this is the musical for them! We will be working very hard for the next five weeks to bring this tale to fruition, and I'm very much looking forward to getting started."

If you would like more information, or cannot make the scheduled audition time and would still like to audition, call Barb at 218-222-3501.

Do you understand what a TIF is?

On Tuesday, June 19, the city of Thief River Falls will host a public hearing on a Tax Increment Financing district near Challenger Elementary School. Sixty-six acres of land in that area have already been annexed into the city limits. Initially, it was suggested that Midwest Minnesota Community Development Corporation would build 75 to 100 homes. The TIF proposal being considered on Monday in front of the Planning Commission and at 4:45 p.m. on Tuesday in front of the City Council, is a proposal for 31 owner-occupied housing for low to moderate income persons. The city believes that this development would not occur but for tax increment financing.

What does it mean and why is it important?

In a TIF, property taxes that would be generated by new development are used to pay for improvements on that property. In Minnesota, that period of time could be for as long as 26 years.

To opponents, that means property taxes that would support many services in the community are deferred for up to 26 years and other taxpayers are left footing the bill. Opponents estimate that if each new home generates about $2,500 in taxes per year, over $2 million in taxes would be deferred each year. Most often, opponents ask why they didn't get a break on the cost of infrastructure when they built or bought their home. It isn't fair to other taxpayers, they say. They also complain that the payback period, which could be as long as 26 years, is too long. Opponents also argue that only a large nonprofit corporation can take on projects like this and smaller developers are left out in the cold, and that hurts local business. Some of these opponents are arguing that a tax abatement, which would defer taxes for three years, would be a better solution because it would offer greater opportunities to more developers.

The city states that the project would not occur "but for" tax increment financing so the fiscal impact on other jurisdictions is $0 (because the homes wouldn't be there but for the TIF). The cost to buy the land, prepare the sites, install utilities, sidewalks and pay for financing is estimated at $3.2 million. The estimated fiscal impact of the TIF on taxing jurisdictions if the "but for" test was not met has been estimated at $80,046. It is estimated that the total amount of tax increment that will be generated over the life of the District is $2.2 million. An impact on police protection is anticipated, but the city does not expect that the proposed development will necessitate new capital investment in vehicles or other capital needs. They also anticipate that the impact on the fire protection will not be significant, and the impact on public infrastructure is expected to be minimal. It is estimated that the impact on the School District, over the life of the TIF, would be $359,736, and the impact on the county would be $1,012,258.

Not every jurisdiction handles TIF proposals the way they are handled in Minnesota. Last May in Aberdeen, S.D., taxpayers were asked to vote on a controversial TIF for downtown Aberdeen. Because the issue came before taxpayers, proponents and opponents had to argue their case to the public, and clearly this seemed to be in the best interest of a public that was being asked to pay for the taxes. It also had the benefit of forcing proponents and opponents to educate the public.

Encouraging Father's Day

In Topics by Norm A. Holen, a regular column located on the History page of The Times, Holen comments that "You may expect to see Dad sporting a new tie next Sunday: it's Father's Day.

It's obvious from the advertisements in local newspapers that people are trying to find that special something for their dad on Father's Day, and many stores have that "something special." Other items high on the list of ideal Father's Day gifts are hammer, wrenches and screwdrivers. Sporting goods is another suggestion.

Since Norm Holen's day, many things have changed. In the past, our homes and workplaces were structured around the idea that the man was in charge. Much has changed. I don't need to tell anyone that the workplace and family structure has changed significantly.

According to the Census Bureau, there were 26.5 million fathers who were part of married-couple families with children younger than 18 in 2006. Among these, 22 percent were raising three or more children younger than 18, and two percent live in someone else's home.

In 2006, there were also 2.5 million single fathers, up from 400,000 in 1970, and 159,000 stay-at-home dads.

Not too many years ago, it would have been easy to pick up a story bemoaning the increasing numbers of fathers who have been neglecting duties and responsiblities of fatherhood. Although still a problem, opinions and attitudes toward the importance of fatherhood seem to be shifting. In recent years, significant efforts have been exerted to impress upon young men the importance of fatherhood. We need to continue to emphasize the importance of fatherhood, and honoring Father's Day is an opportunity to continue that emphasis. Now, about that tie …

Two people injured in accident Wednesday

Two people suffered minor injuries after an accident Wednesday night west of Karlstad.

Mary P. Olson, 62, Roosevelt, and Raymond J. Palcisko, 76, Baudette, were both treated at the scene, according to the Minnesota State Patrol report.

At the time of the accident, Olson was driving a 1994 Ford Escort eastbound on Highway 11. According to the report, she fell asleep. Her car then swerved into the westbound lane, sideswiping a 2007 Toyota Prius driven by Palcisko. Both drivers were wearing their seat belts.

Olson's vehicle was totalled, and Palcisko's vehicle sustained moderate damage.

The State Patrol was dispatched to the scene at 7:01 p.m. Wednesday. The Kittson County Sheriff's Department assisted at the scene.

Mn/DOT implements new phone system; numbers changed

The Minnesota Department of Transportation has been in the process of implementing a new phone system called Voice over Internet Protocol. The new system uses data network lines rather than phone lines to transmit phone conversations. The change is being conducted under the state of Minnesota's Office of Enterprise Technology and is expected to result in significant savings for the department.

In Mn/DOT's Northwest District, new phone numbers have been assigned to all offices in Bemidji, Crookston and Thief River Falls. Phone numbers in the outlying maintenance buildings will remain the same.

The new main line numbers are:
• Bemidji Headquarters – 218-755-6500
• Crookston Office – 218-277-7950
• Thief River Falls Office – 218-683-8000

Right-of-Way Permits:
• Bemidji – 218-755-6553
• Crookston – 218-277-7964

Over-the-road Permits:
• St. Paul Office – 651-296-6000

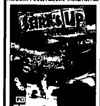
St. Bernard's Catholic Church to host blood drive

Thief River Falls' next blood drive will be held Wednesday, June 27 from 12:30 to 6:30 p.m. and Thursday, June 28 from 7:30 a.m. to 12:30 p.m. at St. Bernard's Catholic Church.

Generally, most healthy people who are age 17 or older and weigh at least 110 pounds may donate. There are quite a few people who don't realize they are qualified to donate. People who are taking vitamins, hormones, birth control pills, diet pills or antibiotics for acne may donate. Insulin-dependent diabetics are also able to donate. There is no longer an upper age limit on who may donate.

Every donor must bring an ID to the blood drive. The ID must include the person's legal name plus one of these: date of birth, Social Security number or United Blood Services blood donor card.

People are ineligible to donate due to the following circumstances:
• Blood transfusion within the past 12 months
• If they took antibiotics within the last three days for an infection
• Colds and flu, must be symptom-free on the "day of donation"
• Ear piercing not done at a licensed establishment and tattoos defer a donor for 12 months
• Most cancers within the past year



"These qualifications may have some effect on persons who plan on donating blood at the next blood drive in Thief River Falls," said Blood Drive Coordinator Sylvia Jensen. "We encourage other citizens to take the place of donors unable to give at this time."

People who have additional questions on donor qualifications or who wish to schedule appointments, may call Sylvia Jensen at (218) 681-4512.

Special recognition went to five members of Thief River Falls' 2007 high school baseball team during the Prowlers' recent post-season picnic-style banquet. Thief River Falls baseball streak extended...

Prowlers continue to win

Consistently competitive might best describe Thief River Falls' high school baseball team over the past three seasons.

After finishing above .500 just once over the previous 11 years, the Prowlers have now put together three straight winning records. They were 13-8 in 2005; 16-8 in 2006; and 13-8 again this spring.

That's the best stretch – record-wise – for Thief River Falls baseball since the Prowlers had five consecutive winning seasons from 1982 through 1986. There were four 10-win campaigns and a 12-victory spring during that run.

Part of the Prowlers' recent success can be attributed to a group of eight players who completed their high school athletic careers in 2007: Ben Carlson, Michael Blix, Michael Benedict, Eric Blix, Patrick Barry, Alex Yaggie, Ben Espeseth and Sean Sorteberg.

"Another absolutely tremendous group of seniors," pointed out Shane Zutz, the Prowlers' coach since 2000. "All of our athletic and academic programs have benefitted from having great kids like this in our program."

Thief River Falls went 12-6 during the regular season. The Prowlers' performance in the double-elimination North Sub-Section 8AAA tournament included a 3-1 loss to Moorhead, an 8-3 win over Fergus Falls and a memorable rain-delayed 6-5 defeat at the hands of Brainerd when a flooded diamond needed to be drained and repaired before the final inning could be completed.

"We won some big games, and we let a couple slip away that maybe we should have gotten," mentioned Zutz, "but those things happen in baseball."

The Prowlers hit a below-average .257 as a team. Among the regulars, Benedict led the way with a .356 batting average (21-for-59), followed by junior Sam Mattison at .344 (11/32), Sorteberg .328 (21/64) and junior Spencer Johnson .317 (20/63).

"We saw most teams' best pitchers all year, which shows the respect these guys have earned," explained Zutz. "Offensively we never really hit our rhythm, and that hurt us a bit. Pitching and defense can't always be perfect."

Sophomore Cody Conners was 6-0 with a 2.75 earned run average in 35 2/3 innings of work this spring. Johnson was 4-3 with a 2.90 ERA and 78 strike-outs in 50 2/3 innings.

"Pitching was excellent, and we look forward to more of the same next year," said Zutz.

Benedict was named the Prowlers' most valuable player; Johnson was selected Pitcher of the Year; Conners was chosen Rookie of the Year; and Carlson received the Charlie Cornell Prowler Award.

Earning All-Great North Conference honors were Barry, Benedict, Sorteberg and Johnson, with Conners receiving honorable mention status. The Prowlers were presented with the conference Team Sportsmanship Award.

"The Team Sportsmanship Award is a sense of pride for us," said Zutz. "We feel it reflects on our program and kids. We want to always play and act the right way."

Zutz will continue to work with the younger players this summer as coach of the Thief River Falls VFW 16-year-olds. Courtney Skjerven, the Prowlers' junior varsity coach, is back at the helm of the Legion program.

"Big summer for our juniors and sophomores to improve and work hard to get us ready for next year," mentioned Zutz.

Eighty-seven players and 14 coaches representing 81 schools will be involved in the game, operated by the Minnesota High School Football Coaches Association.

EGF sweeps VFW twinbill from TRF

A low-scoring opener and a high-scoring nightcap both resulted in one-run East Grand Forks wins over visiting Thief River Falls Monday in VFW baseball, 2-1 and 11-10.

It was the 2007 season opener for the Phantoms, the Thief River Falls Baseball Association program for 16-year-olds.

Cody Conners, who was 6-0 as a sophomore starter on the Lincoln High School pitching staff this spring, was a tough-luck loser in the opener, allowing just two hits while striking out 13 and walking only two in six innings.

The Phantoms had just two hits themselves, scoring a single run in the fourth when Zach Sorenson drew a walk, advanced on a passed ball and scored on a single by Derek Lunde.

"Cody picked up right where he left off this spring," said Thief River Falls VFW coach Shane Zutz, who is also the Prowlers' head coach. "We need to improve offensively to be successful."

In Game 2, East Grand Forks scored seven times in the first inning, then overcame a Thief River Falls comeback by scoring twice in the bottom of the seventh to complete the sweep. The game featured 20 walks – 11 issued by East Grand Forks pitching and nine by the Phantoms' staff.

Thief River Falls' game-long rally was capped by a bases-loaded triple into the right-center field gap by Jordan Anderson that put the Phantoms up 10-9 in the sixth inning.

But four walks and a single produced East Grand Forks' tying and winning runs in the seventh.

"Not a pretty game by any means," reported Zutz. "We expect a lot of improvement by Friday," he said, referring to a scheduled doubleheader against Perham that was moved to Red Lake Falls due to the Thief River Falls Elks Invitational.

The Phantoms will also have a twinbill in Fergus Falls Monday and will play in the Grand Forks Montgomery Invitational June 22-24.

U of M to hold plot tours in this area

A series of five plot tours to review the University of Minnesota's Red River On-Farm Yield Trials and Wheat Fungicide Research will be held July 9-16 at locations throughout Minnesota's wheat-growing region. These tours/workshops are free.

Locally, plot tours will be held at the following locations:

• July 9 at 9 a.m. at the Ray Swenson Farm Plot, four miles south of Oklee along Highway 92. The plot is west of the curve.

• July 10 at 9 a.m. at the Gerold Olsonawski Farm Plot near Hallock. Travel four miles north of Hallock on Highway 75, then travel west for four miles on County Road 65. The plot is on the north side of the road.

• July 10 at 1 p.m. at the Jim Kukowski Farm Plot near Strathcona. Travel one mile north of Strathcona on Highway 32 and then travel three miles west on County Road 6. The plot is on the north side of the road.

Jochum Wiersma, University of Minnesota Extension small grains specialist, will review the small grain variety performance evaluations conducted at local farm plots. "The plots include side-by-side comparisons of the most common wheat and barley varieties, in addition to the newest varieties available to growers. The 2007 trials have a record number of entries of both private and public breeding programs," Wiersma said.

Charla Hollingsworth, University of Minnesota Extension small grains plant pathologist, will also be on hand in Oklee and Fergus Falls to discuss her latest research on fungicide use and timing. Hollingsworth's research focuses on whether fungicide applications can be selectively tailored to optimize yield and quality using popularly grown wheat varieties based on their disease management.

Finally, Ian MacRae, University of Minnesota Extension entomologist, will provide an update on insects to watch for in your crops and how to control them if they become a problem.

These tours/workshops are sponsored by the Minnesota Extension Service with support from the Minnesota Wheat Research and Promotion Council's wheat check-off program.

Fosston designated a 'Governor's Fit City'

Fosston has been designated a "Governor's Fit City." The city earned the recognition by making a commitment to support and encourage its residents to be more physically active and to improve the overall health of the community.

"The leaders of Fosston have made a strong commitment to provide physical activity opportunities for people in their city," Gov. Tim Pawlenty said. "This commitment will help keep Fosston citizens healthy for years to come."

Fosston achieved its designation by completing an application with the Minnesota Department of Health. The application asks cities to indicate their commitment to promoting physical activity, according to several criteria. Those criteria include whether a city has created inviting places to walk; whether a city has adopted a value statement affirming the importance of fitness; whether a city has sponsored at least one fitness activity; and whether a city has developed recreation areas that encourage fitness.

Fosston is committed to implementing a number of strategies for promoting physical activity, including:

• Developing and maintaining a cohesive system of parks and trails, incorporating accessible neighborhood parks

• Supporting recreation programs that encourage active living

• Ensuring that physical activity facilities (youth/senior centers, trails, etc.) are accessible and affordable.

• Introducing active living issues, such as walkable communities, into public dialogue.

• Increasing measures for pedestrian and bicyclist safety.

"Physical activity improves nearly every aspect of a person's health and contributes to better health overall for communities," said Dianne Mandernach, Minnesota commissioner of health. "We encourage all cities to become Governor's Fit Cities."

Fosston will receive a plaque from Pawlenty, and Mandernach and may also choose to have "Governor's Fit City" signs placed on roadways entering the city.

The "Governor's Fit City" initiative is part of an overall push by Pawlenty to encourage fitness. The governor declared 2005 "The Year of Fitness" in Minnesota and created the "Governor's Fitness Challenge." More information about the Governor's Fit City program can be found at www.health.state.mn.us/fitcity.

MDH issues water use warnings

Although water supplies are generally in very good condition, the aforementioned systems and other systems in Minnesota are exceeding newly revised standards for naturally occurring contaminants. Those are among the findings in the 2006 annual report on the status of drinking water in the state released Tuesday by MDH.

Minnesota's public water supply systems are tested on a regular basis for bacteria, nitrate and other inorganic chemicals, radiological elements, and up to 118 different industrial chemicals and pesticides. The MDH annual report is based on the results of monitoring under the federal Safe Drinking Water Act for the past year.

The water supply systems that are exceeding the new standards have developed compliance agreements with MDH as they remedy the situation and have been in regular contact with their residents regarding the situation.

"People who get their drinking water from a public water source can be assured that it is tested more thoroughly and regulated more closely than water from any other source," said Minnesota Health Commissioner Dianne Mandernach. "On those occasions when a problem is detected, the Health Department works with the water system to make sure corrective actions are taken. These actions always include notification of the residents affected by the problem."

In addition to contaminants regulated by the federal Safe Drinking Water Act, MDH performs sampling of water for other substances that may be of concern. One issue that has arisen, as also noted in the annual report released in 2006, is the discovery of perfluorochemicals in several municipal wells in the eastern Twin Cities. The 3M Company produced PFCs at its Cottage Grove facility from the late 1940s until 2002.

MDH has been reviewing ongoing research on PFCs to determine health-based values to ensure that its guidelines reduce exposures and protect public health. Health-based values reflect levels of a chemical that MDH considers safe for human consumption over a long period of time up to a lifetime.

In addition to its research on the health effects of PFCs, MDH has been working with the affected communities and their residents, as well as 3M Company, the Minnesota Pollution Control Agency, and the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency, to find remedies for the situation.

The drinking water annual report includes test results for 726 city water systems throughout the state. Also included were 237 non-municipal systems that provide drinking water to people in their place of residence—in locations such as manufactured home parks, apartment buildings, housing subdivisions, colleges, hospitals, prisons, and child care facilities.

Among the other findings in the report:

• Only one of the systems exceeded current federal or state standards for pesticides or industrial contaminants. Water samples from those systems were subjected to more than 19,000 separate tests for more than 100 potential contaminants. The city, Bayport, is building a new water treatment plant that will remedy the problem and has been issuing public notices to its citizens regarding the situation.

• Detectable levels of coliform bacteria were found in 14 community water systems, including nine municipal systems. While not all coliform bacteria cause illness, they provide an indicator of possible contamination in the system. Systems with coliform problems are routinely disinfected, flushed, and retested to ensure that the contamination is gone before being returned to normal service. The process typically takes less than a week. All but one of the affected systems served fewer than 1,000 people. The municipal systems that tested positive for bacterial contamination were De Graff, Dumont, Gibbon, Holloway, Marble, New Munich, St. Augusta, St. Cloud, and Watson.

• Two community non-municipal water systems exceeded the standards for nitrate or nitrite in 2006.

• Thirteen municipal systems exceeded standards for naturally occurring radiological contaminants in 2006. The affected municipal systems are Andover, Anoka, Brook Park, East Bethel, Glenville, Goodview, Harris, Isanti, La Crescent, Medford, New Brighton, New Market and Norwood Young America.%

Wetland gets federal award

Two other Minnesota Department of Transportation/public partnership initiatives also received FHWA Environmental Excellence Awards. They included:

• The Minneapolis Park and Recreation Board, in partnership with Mn/DOT, won an award in the scenic byways category for the Minneapolis Grand Rounds Wayfinding Program. The initiative is an interpretive program that provides residents and visitors to the Minneapolis Grand Rounds National Scenic Byway with the tools to understand and use the byway.

• Mn/DOT's biomound process for reuse of petroleum-contaminated soil won in the recycling category. The process is a low-cost, low-maintenance composting technique that makes it possible to reuse contaminated soil rather than send it to a landfill.

Thirteen projects and initiatives in 12 separate categories were chosen from 174 entries submitted from around the nation to win 2007 FHWA Environmental Excellence Awards. For more information, go to www.fhwa.dot.gov/environment/eea2007/index.htm.

In this scene, Patrick is sending Peter with Mame to India. Kari Mooney, Mame, shares a moment with Alex Conwell, as Matt Smith and Kristen Underdahl look on. In the background, Cole Bylander, carries a heavy load of baggage. Cast members for the Thief River Falls Community Arts Council Production of "Mame" are completing final preparations for the June 21 through 26 performances. Reserved seating tickets are now on sale at Kezar Music. The box office will be open at the theater before each performance, but seating is limited, so it is advisable to buy tickets early.

meeting, council member Ddette Bendickson raised several questions related to cutting costs within the Thief River Falls Police Department. She indicated cost savings would have to come from employees' wages and benefits due to the percentage of the budget dedicated for those things. (Wages and benefits are set by labor contracts negotiated by the Law Enforcement Labor Services bargaining unit and the council's Ad Hoc Labor Committee, which includes two council members.)

At that council meeting, Police Chief Kim Murphy was informally asked to provide information at a later date on how much money other cities the size of Thief River Falls spend on their police departments and how much of those budgets are dedicated to wages and benefits.

During the Committee of the Whole meeting Tuesday, Erickson told his fellow council members that if the council evaluated the police department's budget in this way, then it needed to do the same thing for all department budgets – from Administration and down to the other city departments. "If there are any red flags out there, we can deal with those issues at that time," he said.

Three council members will work on clarifying the recent resolution regarding summer hours for city employees. Mayor Steve "Beaver" Nordhagen, and council members Emery Lee and Ken Schmalz will work on clarifying the resolution, which the council approved at its May 15 meeting. At that meeting, Lee presented the resolution that states " ... all departments will remain open during core work hours of 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. ... and that the City Council authorizes division directors to set work schedules" within several parameters. The resolution passed by a vote of 5 to 2, with Erickson and council member Elvera Cullen voting in opposition. Council member Glen Kajewski was absent from that meeting. While the resolution was being discussed, Utilities Director Arlo Rude indicated his dissatisfaction.

Nordhagen said the intent of the resolution will stay the same; however, clarification was needed. He went on to say that "talking with some departments" Tuesday led to that realization. (At least two council members – Nordhagen and Schmalz – met with Rude about summer hours on Tuesday.)

Nordhagen, Lee and Schmalz will present their clarification at the next council meeting, which is scheduled Tuesday, June 19 at 5 p.m. at City Hall.

The cast of over 20 has been rehearsing for some time and the elaborate set on stage is taking shape. Hoks reports that rehearsals are going well and he expects this show to be a "smash hit." Everybody, he said, loves a light musical such as this, which is set in the wonderful era of the Roarin' 20s.

Cast members include: Alex Conwell, Kristin Redd, Jean Larson, Kari Mooney, Matt Smith, Cody Knutson, Scott Pream, Cole Bylander, Eva Bruggeman, Kayla Redd, Caitlin Browning, Dane Jenson, Kristen Underdahl, Alice Conwell, Matt Smith, Rob Conwell, Courtney Bruggeman, Shanielle Peterson, Meghan O'Connell.

Reserved seating tickets are on sale now at Kezar Music in Thief River Falls. All tickets are $10. The box office will be open at the theater before each performance, but seating is limited, so it is advisable to buy tickets early.

The second musical performance in the Arts Council's schedule is "Quilters," a musical drama that will take stage at the NCTC Theater on July 25-27.

Minnesota WWII veterans recognized

Warroad - "The long-awaited Minnesota World War II Veterans Memorial was dedicated June 9 at the Capitol Mall in downtown St. Paul. An estimated 22,000 people gathered on the lawns to honor those who served and remember those who lost their lives. Attending the ceremonies and receiving medallions of recognition were Warroad residents Eugene Battles, Vic Dumais, Don Hanson, Beno Kofstad and Dean Thompson. Roseau County Veterans Service Officer Jeff Parker, who also attended, was impressed with the well-organized event.

"The names of the 6,462 Minnesotan World War II casualties were read one-by-one during a roll call throughout the day." - The Pioneer of Warroad, June 20, 2007, by Nancy Heppner

Civil War exhibit visits area

Erskine - "Docents Tad and Rachelle (Bursheim) Campbell, representing The Sons of Union Veterans of the Civil War and its Auxiliary, presented an exhibit of artifacts and clothing, along with the history of their organization at the home of Dean and Cheryl Bursheim on Friday and Saturday.

"The SUVCW is the descendant group of the Grand Army of the Republic, which was the first organized group of veterans. This group was the precursor to the current VFW.

"The GAR held national conventions, or encampments, every year from the forming of the group, in 1866 until 1949. In August 1949, there were only six of these veterans at the final meeting, and it was decided to disband the group. In 1956, the last surviving Union Army veteran, Albert Woolson of Duluth, died at the age of 109." - McIntosh Times, June 20, 2007

Breakfast on the Farm goes organic

McIntosh - "An event that has become a summer hallmark is returning this year to its original hosts. Mark and Joan Lee of rural McIntosh have hosted Breakfast on the Farm for 12 of the last 13 years."

"Breakfast on the Farm will be held this Saturday, June 23 (today) from 8 to 11 a.m. at the Lee Farm north of McIntosh. However, things will be a little different for 2007. Event goers will get the opportunity to see a certified organic farm in operation. The Lees' operation received the designation officially on May 24 and shipped their first load of organic milk June 7." - The 13 Towns of Fosston, June 19, 2007, by Dan Kindall

North Star News featured on "The Tonight Show"

Karlstad - "North Star News and Kittson County were in the national spotlight, if only for a moment, last week."

"'The Tonight Show with Jay Leno' featured an item from the Kittson County Sheriff's Report during the June 11 'Headlines' segment.

"The featured item was printed in the May 17 edition of the North Star News on page 6. Leno read the following on the air, 'On April 11 at 9:18 p.m. received a complaint from an individual in Lake Bronson that a neighbor is continually hollering at him 'Get a job.'" - North Star News of Karlstad, June 21, 2007

Hospital Association to vote on affiliation with MeritCare

by David Hill
Editor

The board of directors for Northwest Medical Center has called a special meeting of the Northwest Medical Center Association membership for Wednesday, June 27. During that meeting, members of the Association will be asked to vote on a measure that amends the hospitals articles of incorporation and bylaws, which effectively affiliates the hospital with MeritCare Health System.

The special meeting begins at 6 p.m. on Wednesday, June 27, in the Northwest MeritCare Clinic waiting area, which is located on the first floor of the hospital. Hospital board of directors and staff along with representatives from the MeritCare Health System will be in attendance to present the changes to the membership.

Wally Sparby, chairperson of the board is expected to present the board's recommendation, and Roger Gilbertson, president and CEO for MeritCare Health System will present "MeritCare's vision for the future." Following a period during which members can ask questions, members will be asked to vote on the question being presented to them.

The question being presented to voting members of the association is whether to accept or reject the resolution along with the amended and restated articles of incorporation, and the amended and restated bylaws of Northwest Medical Center.

The amended and restated articles of incorporation of Northwest Medical Center, indicate that the name of the corporation will remain Northwest Medical Center, and that it will be operated exclusively for charitable, educational and scientific purposes.

Chris Harff, chief executive officer at Northwest Medical Center, said meetings with employees had been conducted during the past week. If approved, the official date of transition would be November 1, 2007, although Harff doubts that anyone will notice the difference between Nov. 1 and Nov. 2. The hospital will remain under local management and employees will not have to go through the hiring process.

The most significant change becomes apparent in Article VII, which states that "MeritCare Health System, a North Dakota nonprofit corporation, shall be the sole voting member of this corporation."

Under section 2.1 (Membership) of the bylaws, MeritCare is identified as being the sole member of this corporation. However, the next section states that it will not have any right, title or interest in the real or personal property of this corporation. Because, however, there is only one member of the corporation, there shall not be any requirement to hold an annual or any other membership meetings.

Harff noted that the Northwest Medical Association Foundation will remain intact and independent. The Pathfinders group home and Northern Lights Book Store will be incorporated into the new affiliation.

Harff said the overall goal of the affiliation with MeritCare is to stabilize the hospital. This is not a buyout and no currency has been exchanged, but Northwest Medical Center hopes to benefit from the relationship. Northwest Medical Center will remain a Critical Access Hospital.

Harff said physicians with Dakota Clinic in Thief River Falls have been included in the discussions, and are aware of what is taking place.

Northwest Medical Center has undergone some tremendous changes in an attempt to return the hospital to profitability. As a result of the many changes that have taken place, Harff said she anticipates finishing the fiscal year with a balance of over $2 million. So, she said, the hospital is really entering this affiliation in a strong position. That said, Northwest Medical Center is facing some difficult challenges - primarily a failing physical plant. Harff said MeritCare has agreed to capitalize a new hospital or significant upgrades within seven years. All of the options of where it could be built, are still available to the hospital.

Doug Vang, senior executive of regional health services for MeritCare, said that in discussions with the board of directors, Northwest Medical Center is seen as a regional center of care - a hub, just as it is a hub for industry and commerce.

He said MeritCare appreciates that Northwest Medical Center has made great strides in establishing its current position. The question MeritCare is asking is how can it achieve stability at Northwest Medical Center, and how can MeritCare make it stronger.

He said MeritCare does not have any intention of closing Northwest

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

It's fitting that the Woolson/Sorenson family farm will be honored with the Century Farm plaque and certificate at the Pennington County Fair. After all, its founder, Harry C. Woolson, was a member of the Pennington County Fair Board. His daughter Natalie was married at the fair, and his granddaughter Sherry Sorenson is a current member of the Pennington County Fair Board.

The Woolson/Sorenson family will receive the award Sunday, July 15 at 1:30 p.m. at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center in Thief River Falls. The presentation will be held after the 4-H Fashion Revue during the Pennington County Fair.

The farm

Harry Woolson homesteaded the farm property on June 24, 1904. The 22-year-old Ohio native rode horseback from Texas and Oklahoma to Thief River Falls. He found land that he wanted about four miles east of what is now the city of Thief River Falls. He bought 160 acres for $7.60 an acre.

Harry built a "log claim shack" to qualify for his property. For extended periods of time, he left his property to work in Thief River Falls. He worked as a night clerk at the "Ogahmah" Hotel and also served as a guide and photographer for hunting parties that stayed at the hotel. While working there, he met Julia Nelson, who worked as a cook at the hotel. The two married on June 30, 1909. That same year, the couple moved to Baudette with a team of horses. They logged timber on their property, earning $2,000 to build a barn and outbuildings on their Pennington County property.

In March 1910, Harry and Julia moved back to their Silverton Township property, where they raised their four daughters, Natalie Thomson, Bernice Sorenson, Raca Howard and Dorothy Chapman.

Harry was instrumental in encouraging his children's hobbies. Harry and Pennington County Agricultural Agent J. McCann started the first 4-H club in Pennington County, the Silverton 4-H Club. His daughter Natalie and Lawrence

Pennington County denies Kick'n Up Kountry request

by Scott DCamp

Ardell Larson was seeking a contribution from the Pennington County Board of Commissioners that she would use toward the security budget of her annual country music festival Kick'n up Kountry, when she came before the Pennington County Board of Commissioners Wednesday. The fourth Annual Kick'n up Kountry music festival has been scheduled for Aug. 31-Sept. 2, and Larson was hoping commissioners would approve a similar working arrangement that she says Kittson County used during the three years the country music festival was based in Hallock.

Larson told commissioners that security was provided by the Roseau County Mounted Posse, and costs were defrayed by contributions from the city of Hallock ($5,000) with the remaining subsidy, approximately $10,000, being covered by Kittson County. Kittson County Auditor-Treasurer Marilyn Gustafson was unavailable for comment Thursday or Friday to substantiate Larson's claim.

Larson gave a brief presentation about Kick'n up Kountry and the economic benefits to Thief River Falls retail businesses, hotels and restaurants. She said the [illegible]

Feedlot feedback heard at hearing

Marshall County Board may consider feedlot ordinance at July 3 meeting

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

The final public hearing for a proposed Marshall County feedlot ordinance was held Wednesday at the Newfolden Community Center. Given the number of meetings held about the proposed ordinance, the half-hour meeting wasn't as contentious or as long as the first meeting held in September about an ordinance to regulate feedlots. The Marshall County Board may take action on the proposed ordinance at its July 3 meeting.

The board will take a little feedback from Warren Mayor Bob Kliner back to its meeting. Kliner raised a question regarding the registration requirements for feedlots. Currently, the proposed ordinance indicates that registration is required if a feedlot has more than 50 animal units, or it has more than 10 animal units and it is within 1,000 feet of a lake or 300 feet of a river. (One animal unit equals 1,000 pounds.) All new feedlots or current feedlots that plan to expand are required to obtain a conditional use permit if they are located within one mile of a city.

Kliner asked, "I wonder if the 50 animal units could be reduced, so a conditional use permit could be required for less than that?" Referring specifically to the distance between feedlots and cities, he wondered if it would be possible to decrease that amount to 10 animal units.

"I think we can make it more restrictive," replied County Attorney Mike Williams.

Other highlights of the proposed ordinance include:

- Current feedlots are grandfathered in at their current size and distance from other buildings. "You can't make any feedlots shrink or go away with this ordinance," said Marshall County Feedlot Officer Howard Person. However, existing feedlots are required to obtain a conditional use permit if the owners expand their operations and/or if they change the species of animals

Roseau Area Hospitals & Homes joins Choices by Medica

Medica members in the Roseau area now have a new opportunity to improve their health and save money. Effective June 1, 2007, Lake Therapies – A Department of Roseau Area Hospitals & Homes, Inc. has joined Medica's Fit Choices by Medica network.

The program is designed to help members improve their health and save membership and health care dollars. Fit Choices by Medica members get a $20 monthly membership credit just for exercising at a participating health club eight or more days per month.

"We are delighted to partner with Lake Therapies," said Dr. Ted Loftness, M.D., Medica's vice president of regional health services. "This is an important addition to the Fit Choices by Medica program because it provides easy access to our members in the Roseau area. Lake Therapies is very supportive of our mission to engage our members in greater amounts of physical activity and fitness programs."

"We're thrilled with the partnership and the opportunity this program provides our members to increase their level of fitness and improve their health. The program has proven to be a great motivator to get people started on a fitness routine and keep them active," said Jessico Kuznia, director of Lake Therapies – A Department of Roseau Area Hospitals & Homes, Inc.

Studies show that helping people stay healthy not only saves lives, it controls health care costs. An estimated 70 percent of all illnesses are due to lifestyle-related causes such as obesity and physical inactivity, and one-half of all medical costs are attributable to illnesses that could be prevented. Fit Choices by Medica is now a standard component of Medica's offerings to fully insured employers and is being offered as an option for self-insured groups.

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere

Hungry for chocolate? Try one of the following recipes - or try them all.

Make this delicious cake for special occasions. It's really easy, but don't tell anybody - they'll think you slaved for hours:

FUDGEY PECAN CAKE

3/4 cup butter or margarine, melted
1-1/2 cups sugar
1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla
3 egg yolks
1/2 cup plus 1 tablespoon cocoa
1/2 cup flour
3 tablespoons oil
3 tablespoons water
3/4 cup finely chopped pecans
3 egg whites, at room temperature
1/8 teaspoon cream of tartar
1/8 teaspoon salt

Royal Glaze

8 ounces (blocks) semi sweet baking chocolate, broken into pieces (or 1-1/3 cups semi sweet chocolate chips)
1/2 cup heavy or whipping cream

To make cake, line bottom of 9 inch spring form pan with foil. Butter foil and side of pan. Set aside.

Combine 3/4 cup melted butter, sugar and vanilla in large mixing bowl. Beat well. Add egg yolks, one at a time, beating well after each.

Blend in cocoa, flour, oil and water and beat well. Stir in chopped pecans.

Beat egg whites, cream of tartar and salt in small mixer bowl until stiff peaks form. Carefully fold into chocolate mixture. Pour into prepared pan.

Bake at 350 degrees for 45 minutes or until top begins to crack slightly. Cake will NOT test done in center. Cool 1 hour, cover and chill until firm. Remove side of pan.

To prepare glaze, combine chocolate and cream in small saucepan. Cook over very low heat, stirring constantly, until chocolate is melted and mixture is smooth. Do not boil! Remove from heat and cool, stirring occasionally, until mixture begins to thicken, 10-15 minutes. Makes 1 cup of glaze.

Pour glaze over cake, allowing it to run down sides. With narrow metal spatula, spread glaze evenly on top and sides. Allow to harden and garnish with extra pecan halves, if desired.

These cookies are some of the best ever - great for Christmas - but good for a special treat anytime. And these are made easy in the microwave:

CHOCOLATE CRACKLES

10 tablespoons butter or margarine
6 tablespoons cocoa
1 cup sugar
2 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 eggs
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 cups flour
1/2 cup chopped nuts
Confectioner's sugar

Microwave butter until melted. Add cocoa and blend well. Beat in sugar, baking powder, salt, eggs and vanilla. Stir in flour and nuts. Refrigerate at least 8 hours or until firm.

Shape dough into 1 inch balls and roll in confectioner's sugar. Cover micro-proof plate with waxed paper and place 8 balls 2 inches apart in circular shape on waxed paper. Microwave on medium for 1-1/2 to 2 minutes or until surface is dry but cookies are soft when touched. Cool completely on waxed paper on countertop.

Repeat with remaining dough. Before serving, sprinkle with additional confectioner's sugar.

What's better than a chocolate pie? Make this one in minutes with a prepared crumb crust, or make your own delicious chocolate crumb crust. I make this pie often for holidays and every female in my family loves it - of course we are all chocoholics, wouldn't you know:

MICROWAVE CHOCOLATE BAR PIE

1 (8 ounce) milk chocolate candy bar, broken into pieces
1/3 cup milk
1-1/2 cups miniature marshmallows
1 cup whipping cream, whipped

Chocolate Crumb Crust:
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1-1/2 cups graham cracker crumbs
6 tablespoons cocoa
1/3 cup confectioner's sugar

To make crust, grease micro-safe 9 inch pie pan. In small bowl, microwave butter for 1 minute or until melted. Stir in graham cracker crumbs, cocoa and confectioner's sugar until well blended.

Press on bottom and up sides of prepared pie pan. Micro an additional 1 to 1-1/2 minutes until bubbly. Do not overcook! Cool completely before filling.

To make filling, combine chocolate bar pieces, milk and marshmallows. Micro on high for 1-1/2 to 2-1/2 minutes, or until chocolate is softened and mixture is melted and smooth when stirred. Cool completely.

Whip cream stiff and fold into cooled chocolate mixture. Spoon into crust. Cover and chill several hours or until firm. Garnish with sweetened whipped cream.

CHOCOLATE CHIP PANCAKES

2 cups buttermilk baking mix (Bisquick)
1 cup milk
2 eggs
1/2 cup mini, semi sweet chocolate chips

Combine baking mix, milk and eggs in medium bowl. Beat with wooden spoon until smooth. Stir in chips.

For each pancake, pour 2 tablespoons batter onto hot lightly greased griddle. Cook until bubbles appear, turn and cook other side until lightly browned. For thinner pancakes, add 1 tablespoon milk to batter. Pancakes should be at least 1/4 inch thick. Serve warm with butter or margarine. Sprinkle with confectioner's sugar or top with syrop. (How about topping with chocolate syrup? Decadent!)

Fourtown-Grygla Sportsman's receives grant

Polaris Industries has announced the third round of TRAILS grant recipients, with grants totaling $105,320 for a grand total of $500,458 granted to national, state and local all-terrain vehicle clubs since the program was launched in 2006. In this latest round, Polaris issued grants to 12 organizations in 12 states. One local ATV club, the Fourtown-Grygla Sportsman's Club, was among the grant recipients. To date, Polaris has assisted 59 ATV organizations in 35 states.

The grants ranged from $3,000 to the maximum $10,000, and will be applied toward land acquisition, trail mapping, marking and maintenance; trail development, stabilization and reforestation; bridge building; and Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service and state forest ride area enhancements and trail mapping projects.

"We continue to be overwhelmed with the response we've had from ATV clubs and organizations," said Mike Dougherty, general manager of the ATV division at Polaris. "Our continuing dedication to this program sets Polaris apart in the industry, showcasing our commitment to living the ride experience and working tirelessly to make it better."

The TRAILS program makes funds available to not-for-profit national, state and local organizations in the U.S. to ensure the future of ATV riding. TRAILS stands for trail development, responsible riding, access, initiatives, lobbying, safety.

For more information on the TRAILS grant program or an application form, visit the Polaris Web site (www.polarisindustries.com) and click on "Riders" and then select "Right to Ride."

Grant applications are reviewed two times per year – in March and in October, with corresponding submission deadlines of March 1 and Oct. 1. Organizations may apply for a maximum of two grants per year, and all organizations must have 501(c)3 501(c)7 or nonprofit organization status. Project funding or matching funding are important when TRAILS grants are being considered.

Medical Center, and it will not become a suburb of Fargo, N.D.

Harff and Vang believe that Northwest Medical Center will be able to benefit from its relationship with MeritCare, and MeritCare will be able to benefit from its relationship with Northwest Medical Center.

Vang said MeritCare is interested in the affiliation with Northwest Medical Center because MeritCare has a huge infrastructure. Secondly, an evolution of networking or integration has taken over in the healthcare industry. He explained that earlier in its nearly 100-year history, MeritCare was built around specialization. Today, with technology, more can be done in a safe environment because of technology. So, with a larger, integrated system, the healthcare system is able to leverage its size for the benefit of the patient. Affiliation also eliminates barriers to caregiving and makes MeritCare more competitive.

If approved, the new bylaws establishes the makeup of the board of directors to not less than eight, nor more than 13 persons. Up to two of the directors shall be "MeritCare directors," and up to two of the directors shall be "physician directors." Up to nine of the directors shall be "community directors."

Harff noted that the size and makeup of the board of directors ensures that the hospital remains committed to patient healthcare and service in Thief River Falls.

Harff said that after meeting with employees, people are excited about it as a whole.

that they have at their feedlots. If the owners decide to sell their feedlots, the new owner is not required to obtain a conditional use permit unless the feedlot expands or the species change.

• Odor management plans are required for liquid manure storage systems at new or expanding feedlots that have or will have 500 or more animal units.

• As part of the conditional use permit application, manure management plans are required for new or expanding feedlots that have or will have 500 or more animal units.

• Setbacks are required for feedlots that have or will have 500 or more animal units. Those feedlots with 1,000 or more animal units will be required to follow federal guidelines. As a result, the county is only asking that the feedlots notify the county if they plan to expand or build in the county.

• Documentation is required if a nearby landowner allows a feedlot owner to build a liquid manure storage facility closer to the neighbor than the setback requirements. That documentation must be filed with Person. The Marshall County Board will work on creating that form. If a person wishes to build a new home closer than the setback requirements allow, the feedlot owner will be able to approve or disapprove of that construction.

• "Setbacks for liquid manure apply to all liquid systems regardless of size," according to a handout Person provided to the 24 people who attended the public hearing. There are also setbacks for solid manure application; however, there are no setback requirements for solid manure surface spreading near schools, parks, churches, public roads, residences or subdivisions.

• Setbacks are also "required for new and existing manure stockpiles." In addition, according to the proposed ordinance, "Manure may not be applied at any rate greater than the maximum recommended agronomic rate for the crop to be planted and the time of application."

• Manure from feedlots with 500 or more animal units that is transported into Marshall County must have a manure management plan approved.

The proposed ordinance resulted from a special meeting in September after some neighbors voiced their opposition to the reopening of Excel Dairy in Excel Township. (Excel Dairy has since reopened.) At that time, the board voted against an interim law that would have regulated feedlots. Instead, it appointed a committee to study whether the county should have a permanent ordinance to regulate feedlots.

County denies security request

posse can control an event very well, because it has a strong presence. During the previous three years with the mounted posse providing security, the show has seen very little trouble.

Larson told commissioners that she had met with Pennington County Sheriff Mike Hruby about using deputies for security in addition to the mounted posse. She said that the Sheriff's Department would charge $25 per hour, per deputy on site.

Larson detailed other expenses, like a large stage, stage set-up, the cost of various licenses, utility costs and paying the performers. She said paying the performers has already cost her $150,000 in guaranteed payments. She added that ticket sales do not cover all of the operating costs.

Pennington County Attorney Alan Rogalla asked Larson why a for-profit corporation would enter something like this at a loss.

Larson responded, " I believe in this – I have my retirement [invested] in this." She added that she's been to WE Fest since day one and has seen how long it took for that country music festival to become profitable.

Commissioner Don Jensen asked Larson if she opens her books to businesses she seeks contributions from. Larson responded that she does not, but all contributing parties are repeatedly mentioned between performances throughout the weekend.

Commissioner Bob Carlson asked, "So you've taken a kickin' up in Hallock?"

"We've moved on to a bigger area – the people who've been there, loved it," Larson replied. She added that Hallock is her home and that is why it was chosen in the first place, but the city is too small to accommodate the type of festival she wants to create.

Commissioner Charles Naplin was the first commissioner to express doubt as to the ethicality of the county board contributing money to a for-profit organization. "I don't know if we can use taxpayer dollars to contribute money toward a for-profit organization," he said.

Board Chairman Oliver "Skip" Swanson told Larson the board would consider her request and discuss it with the sheriff. He said there may be some options that could be worked out, one of which could be a fair board contribution (the Pennington County Fair Board receives some of its funding from Pennington County) for security.

Larson said that any contribution would be appreciated. WE Fest took seven years to become profitable, she said. No action had been taken when Larson left the meeting. Discussion continued later in the meeting with Hruby.

Hruby said that hiring security is Larson's responsibility. He said the sheriff's department doesn't hire security, though the mounted posse has been pleasant to work with in the past.

Hruby explained that it was his understanding that Larson is able to use the grandstand and restrooms without a rental fee, in exchange for the profits from heer gardens operated by the Pennington County Fair Board. He said, whether the board gives a contribution directly or through the Pennington County Fair Board, it would be perceived as county government giving tax payer dollars to help a for-profit organization.

Carlson asked for his fellow commissioners' wishes regarding Larson's request.

Naplin again responded that the county board is not legally allowed to give money to a for-profit organization.

Hruby's response was that his department would back up the Thief River Falls Police Department. He said Larson would be allowed to hire sheriff deputies at $25 per hour, but the Sheriff's Department would not be staffing the event with deputies.

"If you get a riot situation out there, we're going to respond," Hruby said. "Then it's not a security question, it's a crime in progress. We will provide public safety functions – we will not provide security."

A motion denying Larson's request was unanimously approved. The motion also called for a letter to be sent to Larson, explaining the board's decision.

Larson also met with city of Thief River Falls representatives in November 2006, in what was then the Administrative Service Committee, where she presented a formal request for a $15,000 or in-kind service contribution. That request was tabled and is still awaiting action.

Letnes were the first two members of the club. Natalie and Lawrence both showed cattle at the fair.

Natalie wasn't the only Woolson family member to show animals. Julia showed her chickens and produce at the fair. The family's cattle herd was shown at county fairs throughout Minnesota and Iowa in the 1920s. Dorothy recalled showing her lamb during a Thief River Falls stock show parade in the 1920s. Not more than 8 years old at the time, she led the stock show parade with her bell-toting lamb. A bull walked behind them. Harry told Dorothy that if the bull became angry, she was to hide in a nearby parked car.

Dorothy and her sisters grew up on a farm with 30 purebred Guernsey heifers, hogs, some purebred Shropshire sheep and hundreds of chickens. In October 1918, the family's barn was destroyed. The cattle were saved, but the family's calves and hogs died in the fire. All of Harry's tools were destroyed. The family rebuilt the barn.

For her part, Julia raised hundreds of chickens. Some of her chickens would end up in the family's stew on Sundays. Harry would give Julia a day off and prepare the stew with his daughters every Sunday.

In addition to parting with some of her chickens, Julia sold eggs to Thief River Falls residents. Julia also sold cream, butter and buttermilk. One Thief River Falls woman bought buttermilk by the gallon since she bathed in it.

Julia was also industrious when it came to canning. That hobby began after her daughters encouraged her to get out of the house. "We girls ganged up on her and sent her to Crookston," said Dorothy, who noted they sent Julia to what is now the University of Minnesota, Crookston. "She never would leave home. She thought we girls had to have her there. She was a homebody." Julia learned how to can fruit in Crookston. She later taught canning to other women as part of what would later become the Silverton Learning Circle.

While Julia canned fruit and sold farm products, Harry raised his cattle and other animals. He also grew experimental plots of grains and legumes for the University of Minnesota. "I'm very proud of that," Dorothy said. Harry also tried growing various types of fruit, finding success with plums.

Plums weren't the only types of produce that Harry raised. During the Depression, his family was able to keep the farm by raising 60 acres of White Rose or Burbank potatoes. The cash crop was sent to Zuckerman Brothers of California.

While Harry may have been ahead of the times in many regards, there was one thing he never purchased – a tractor. He didn't like tractors, so he did his farm work with Percheron horses. Harry also didn't believe in chemical fertilizers. Instead, he used manure.

Even though much of their time was spent working on their farm, Harry and Julia still found time to relax and enjoy their family. In 1932, their eldest daughter, Natalie, was married at the Pennington County Fair. At the time, the Pennington County Fair Board held a contest to entice more people to the fair. The contest prize: A free wedding with free gifts. The winning couple withdrew from the contest. Harry, who served on the Fair Board, was asked if Natalie wanted to get married at the fair. Natalie, who was planning to marry her first husband around that time, agreed. Natalie and Frank Johnson were married Aug. 6, 1932, during a revue at the fair. Her sisters weren't able to be bridesmaids. Instead, revue participants were in the wedding party.

Besides weddings and other special events, the family also found time to spend together at its annual summer reunion. "In summer, my dad would take our old Ford and get our grandma and grandpa and our aunt and uncle," recalled Dorothy, who noted Harry would make five trips to Thief River Falls to pick up assorted relatives. Her family continued that tradition for many years – even after Harry's death in 1952.

After Harry's death, his daughter Bernice and her husband, Vernon Sorenson, moved to the farm. They lived with Julia and Julia's sister Carrie at the farm. Vernon and Bernice's daughters, Sherry and Marie, were born while the family lived there.

Bernice's sister Dorothy and her family lived across the road from the farm where Bernice and Dorothy grew up. Sherry and Marie would hop on their bicycles and ride to their cousin Iris' house every chance they got.

Their grandmother Julia passed away in 1963, and Carrie passed away a year later. After Julia's death, Bernice and Vernon purchased the farm, buying out shares of the farm belonging to Bernice's sisters.

Like Bernice's parents before them, Bernice and Vernon operated the farm. They raised 50 purebred Shropshire sheep, one Guernsey cow and 30 chickens. Vernon also worked as a beekeeper. He constructed a storage warehouse for his bees, siding the structure with tin plates from The Thief River Falls Times. He sold his honey to Sioux Bee.

Over the years, some changes have occurred at the farm. Bernice and Vernon eventually tore down the house where Bernice grew up. But first they moved it 40 feet off of its foundation. The family continued living in the older home – without running water – until the new home was constructed. At that time, in 1973, Sherry and Marie were teenagers, and Sherry was about to graduate from high school. Given that their new home wasn't ready, Sherry's high school graduation party was held at her cousins' home in the city of Thief River Falls. In October 1974, her family moved into its new home. Along with their old home, their barn was torn down.

Thirteen years later, in 1987, Bernice died from cancer. Vernon passed away from cancer in 1999. Their daughters Sherry Sorenson of Thief River Falls and Marie Bregier of Fargo, N.D., now own the farm. The sisters rent the farmland and house to other people.

While she may no longer live at the farm, Sherry keeps close to her roots. She serves on the Fair Board, just like her grandpa did many years ago.

Harry C. and Julia Woolson were married after Harry purchased 160 acres of land about four miles east of what is now the city of Thief River Falls. Their family's farm will be honored with the Century Farm plaque and certificate on Sunday, July 15 at 1:30 p.m. at the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center in Thief River Falls. The presentation will be held as part of the Pennington County Fair. (Submitted photo)

Letter to my brother Dave

This correspondence starts out with a conundrum as my letters to you are normally much better when I have been busy, but lately I have been too busy to write you a letter. I'm sure this concept has something to do with the philosophical question of whether a falling tree makes noise when there is no one present to hear it or if the light stays on when you close the refrigerator door, but I would quickly get in over my head if I tried to answer either question.

First let's talk a little about farming. Most farmers around here are smiling when they're not too busy paddling. We needed rain, but in some cases, we received a little too much. I feel bad for farmers when I can see muddy tire tracks in fields of green, as they try to spray before the next rain. I think the inconvenience is well worth it when you consider our former lack of subsoil moisture. There has been little moisture in the air this week, which makes for cool nights and warm days. That plays right into that whole "corn should be thigh high by the 4th of July" gem from the Farmer's Almanac.

OK, you now have a window into the conversation currently served at local cafés. Let's move onto something with a bit more weight. I know we rarely talk about this subject, but I think I must make a point of bringing this topic to your attention - adhesives, particularly their use in duct tape. Lisa brought home something from work that delighted me, with its practicality - duct tape bandages. I have often been frustrated at the performance of band aids when I work outside and have used duct tape to splint my finger so duct tape bandages made by Nexcare made perfect sense; I just wish I'd thought of it. I haven't had any recent cuts or injury to my fingers so I itched a mosquito bite until I could justify covering it with a duct tape bandage. It was an experience greater than any I have ever had with an adhesive coupled with cloth and gauze.

I understand you guys had a good time at the Marshall County Relay For Life. I saw the pictures of our family and I can't believe what a good looking bunch we are when I am not included in the picture. I had to work that night, but maybe next year I will be able to spare some vacation time for the event. I heard our sister (sweet, insane) Deb brought her walking sticks (kind of like ski poles) along. She told me that they make walking more enjoyable, and also give her upper body a good workout. Considering this is our sister, I would guess there is a placebo effect going on here, but if it makes her happy, who am I to say otherwise? At least it's not one of those electric belts people wrap around their middles to allegedly tone their abdominal muscles.

Philosophy, agriculture, a creative use for duct tape and all the family news that's fit to print, this has been a sort of one-stop, convenience store type of letter. I hope you enjoyed it, and you find yourself well in Carrington, N.D. Say hi to the wife and kinder.

Roseau Area Community Fund welcomes new member

At its June monthly meeting, the Advisory Committee of the Roseau Area Community Fund (RACF) welcomed new member Elizabeth Kvien. Out-going committee member Rob Larson has served since 2005. RACF is a component fund of Northwest Minnesota Foundation.

RACF's objective is to raise money in an endowment fund so that the earnings can be given to various Roseau-area nonprofit groups and public entities, both city and rural. These groups can use the money given to them for a purpose they've identified and that meets specific criteria.

No injuries reported after accident Wednesday

No injuries were reported after a one-vehicle accident two miles south of Lancaster on Wednesday night.

Georgine M. Irving, 68, Seattle, was driving a 2007 Chevy Coupe northbound on a curve on Highway 59, according to the Minnesota State Patrol report. Her car then hit the shoulder, and Irving over-corrected. Her car then went into a sideways skid off of the road and rolled. Irving was wearing her seat belt. Her car was totalled.

The State Patrol was dispatched to the scene at 9:29 p.m. Wednesday. The Kittson County Sheriff's Office assisted at the scene.

Area athletes compete in Grandma's Marathon

Several area athletes competed in the 31st Annual Grandma's Marathon in Duluth on June 16. Over 9,000 people registered for the event and nearly 7,000 completed the event.

Spectators descibed the weather for the event as pleasant, but for runners the black flag was out. Hot and humid conditions warranted the black flag for runners. For this particular race, such a designation served as a warning to runners that conditions were difficult and that they needed to remain well hydrated while out on the course.

This year's overall winner was Wesly Ngetich, 29, Kenya, who finished in a time of 2:15:54, and Mary Akor, 30, Gradena, Calif., who finished in a time of 2:35:40.

Area participants included the following:

Newfolden: Kent Warne, 38, 3:57:21, and Lori Warne, 38, 4:07:59.

Roseau: Russsell Sorenson, 48, 3:25:52, and Kristi Glassmann, 25, 3:27:17.

Mentor: Carmen Fore, 47, 4:35:38, and Zachary Fore, 46, 4:35:38.

Continue to support Dairy Day

Years ago, Dairy Day was a huge event encompassing more than 100 cows and many more young exhibitors. During the intervening years, changes in farming and the dairy industry resulted in fewer cows and exhibitors. A dozen years ago or so, there was some serious talk about whether or not to continue Northwest Dairy Day. The response of those involved in the industry was an immediate and unequivocal ... nothing doing. Dairy Day will continue!

Northwest Dairy Day should continue and here's why. Northwest Dairy Day Judge Conrad Kvamme was impressed by the quality of abilities of the young exhibitors at the show in Thief River Falls June 16. His comments at the event sum up what many other judges have said about the event. Kvamme stated, "Northwest Dairy Day set the mark in '49 and has continued to be a 'first rate' Dairy Day with its top quality cattle and youth. What a great accomplishment and role model that northwest Minnesota can be proud of."

Kvamme also said he would place the cattle and exhibitors from northwest Minnesota up against any in the United States.

I'm sure the young exhibitors would be good ambassadors for northwest Minnesota. During the show in Thief River Falls on Saturday, their attitude, hard work and dedication were obvious and speak volumes about northwest Minnesota.

In spite of the difficult changes that were thrust upon dairy producers, it may also be said it had a positive impact on the industry. The quality of the cattle found in northwest Minnesota could be the result of changes in the industry. Unable to compete against large farms, surviving producers focused on doing what the big farms can't - quality stock.

Many others have contributed their efforts to the success of Northwest Minnesota Dairy Day and the surviving dairy industry. Continued support by its committee - Lew Wallace, Dale Rupprecht, Norma Hanson, Sherri Rupprecht, Mike Phillips, Mark Lehmann, Sue Cloose, and many other committee volunteers - and the many local and area businesses that provide financial assistance, continues to provide dairy producers an opportunity to share information, skills and focus. Being a dairy producer during significant change in the industry has not been easy. But what remains of the industry in northwest Minnesota is the cream of the crop.

One organizer added that efforts like this could have unknown and far-reaching impacts on the rest of our community and economy.

We extend our congratulations to all the young exhibitors, parents, and supporters within our community. You represent your industry and northwest Minnesota well.

Huge oak, spruce and other trees were twisted and snapped near their bases by a storm that swept through northwestern Minnesota early Monday, June 18. On the Nancy Jensen farmstead six miles north of Plummer, over 20 trees were damaged. There also was some damage to their house and a shed.

It was so loud you could feel it in your chest

After last Sunday's storm, reports from rural residents are filtering in. Carrie Jensen, who lives on the Nancy Jensen farmstead six miles north of Plummer near the Hazel elevator, reported that over 20 trees on their property had been damaged by the storm.

Jensen said the family was asleep Sunday evening when her mother woke them up and told them to take their three children, ages 9, 7 and 6, to the basement. "It was so black outside you couldn't see a thing," said Jensen.

Although they couldn't see anything, they could hear what Jensen described as freight trains come down their driveway. "The sound was so loud, you felt it in your chest," she said.

The next morning they went outside and surveyed the damage. Jensen said there were about 20 trees on the ground facing many different directions. There was a little damage to the house and a shed also was damaged.

Jensen said many of her neighbors also reported damage. One, she said, reported that over 30 trees on their property had been damaged by the storm.

Jensen said an insurance adjuster surveyed the damage and said the damage could not have been caused by straight-line winds.

Brandi Jensen, 9, surveys damage to a tree on the Nancy Jensen farmstead, six miles north of Plummer. Early Monday, June 18, a severe storm swept through the area causing extensive property damage.

Marv Jorde receives award

■ TRF native honored at USA Hockey banquet

Thief River Falls native Marv Jorde received the Ironman Award from USA Hockey during a June 6 awards banquet in Colorado Springs.

Jorde was one of several individuals receiving special recognition during the USA Hockey 2007 convention, a five-day event that provides the group's various committees, districts and employees the opportunity to come together for a series of forums, workshops and award ceremonies intended to improve the organization and honor those who have contributed to its success.

Award winners included Jorde, who now lives in Woodbury, USAdult Ironman of the Year; Julie Chu (Fairfield, Conn.), Bob Allen Women's Player of the Year; Jeff Petry (Farmington Hills, Mich.), Junior Player of the Year; Jeremy Smith (Brownstown, Mich.), Dave Peterson Goalie of the Year; Jeff Lerg (Livonia, Mich.), College Player of the Year, and Erica Mitchell (Chicago), Disabled Athlete of the Year.

The 71-year-old Jorde has been associated with hockey as a player, coach, general manager, team owner, trainer, referee and USA Hockey Adult Council member for over five decades.

After missing his sophomore and junior seasons of high school hockey due to a knee problem, Jorde was on the ice as a senior and helped lead Thief River Falls to a 20-0 state championship 1953-54 campaign when he led the Prowlers in scoring with 18 goals and 14 assists to earn all-state honors.

A two-goal performance in the Prowlers' 4-1 state championship game win over Eveleth helped secure a scholarship offer from University of Minnesota coach John Mariucci.

He also played for the U.S. national team.

After playing semipro hockey for more than 10 years, a 35-year-old Jorde became the player/coach/general manager of the St. Paul Parkers, an amateur team that would win 12 state championships and seven national titles. He played more than 900 games over 25 seasons with the Parkers and never missed a game despite a long list of injuries.

Jorde began working as an off-ice official for the Minnesota North Stars in 1967 and remained with the club for 26 years until the team left the Twin Cities for Dallas.

During his long hockey career, Jorde played with teammates like Herb Brooks, John Mayasich, Jack McCartan, Reed Larson and Bob Johnson, and played against Gordie Howe.

Now, Jorde's physical activity and competitive nature is nurtured by golf, although he still skates in non-checking hockey games.

Bandits split twinbill against Fergus Falls

Second outing of the 2007 season for the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team produced another doubleheader split for the Bandits during a Tuesday trip to Fergus Falls.

Thief River Falls lost the opener 2-1 when Fergus Falls broke a 1-1 tie in the bottom of the seventh. The Bandits bounced back to win a 9-8 eight-inning nightcap.

Results mirrored a June 11 twinbill at East Grand Forks, where Thief River Falls lost an 8-7 eight-inning opener before winning Game 2 by a 2-1 margin.

With Game 1 tied at 1-1, Fergus Falls started the home half of the seventh with two singles. An intentional walk loaded the bases, then Erik Rohlfs singled for the win.

Section 8A champions honored

Thief River Falls' Section 8A champion boys high school tennis team capped its 2007 season with a June 14 banquet.

Senior Corey Horien received the Prowler Award; sophomore Lucas Dillon was named Rookie of the Year; and freshman Alex Thomas was selected as the most improved player.

Based upon 2007 season statistics, special recognition also went to eighth grader Brenden Skime, most singles wins; Horien, most doubles wins; and senior Cody Bottem, most combined singles/doubles wins.

Bottem and senior Jordan Swanson both joined the program's 100-Win Club this year. Bottem completed his high school tennis career with 104 wins (76 singles, 28 doubles), while Swanson wound up with 103 wins (17 singles, 86 doubles).

Horien, Swanson and Bottem served as the Prowlers' captains this spring and received plaques. The captain's role will be handled in 2008 by the three juniors on this year's squad: Jacob Engelstad, Brian Kays and Chase Haviland.

Joining Swanson, Horien, Bottem, Engelstad, Kays, Haviland, Dillon and Skime as athletic letter winners this year were sophomores Parker Nessen, JD Robson, Cody Reese and Tyler Peterson, along with eighth grader Connor Hutton.

The Corey Thorson-coached Prowlers went 19-3 in dual meet competition this spring. They won 19 of their first 20 decisions before losing to St. Paul Academy and Summit School in the Class A state tournament semifinals. The campaign ended with a loss to Mounds Park Academy in the state tournament third place match.

Thief River Falls has won four straight Section 8A team titles – the first two with Troy Hanestad as head coach and the last two under Thorson. The Prowlers are 63-14 in dual meet competition the past four years, with eight of those losses coming in the state tournament.

Downed trees blocked the driveway to the Selmer Holen farmstead near Grygla after last weekend's storm knocked down 15 to 20 trees. A chainsaw and tractor were used to clear the road.

Storm damages rural Grygla farmstead

After Richard called, Selmer Holen and his wife, Helen, decided they had better drive home from the Bible camp where they were working and check out the damage their son had told them about.

Thankfully, the home they had occupied together since 1969 was intact. Many of the trees around the rural Grygla farmstead, however, were laying on the ground.

That morning Richard Holen's morning routine changed. When he came out of his house to go to work, he stopped. His truck was under a tree.

"He slept right through the storm," said Selmer. When he woke up in the morning, he discovered his pickup, undamaged, but under the branches of a tree. He also had to use a chainsaw to cut up downed trees that lay across their road to County Road 28, and then a tractor to push them off the road so that he could go to work.

Selmer is now putting that chainsaw to good use. He estimated that 15 to 20 trees on his property had been taken down by the storm. He hadn't heard anything from his neighbors, so he doesn't know if they had similar problems.

Most of the trees will probably end up as firewood, but Selmer had his eyes on a couple of large trees that he just might take to a lumber mill. Who knows, it might give him an excuse to make something in his wood shop.

Selmer Holen takes a chainsaw to a large poplar tree on his farmstead near Grygla. Between 15 and 20 trees were knocked down by last weekend's storm. There was also some damage to a shed and some smaller trees.

Foundation adds its support for Minnesota Thrive Initiative

When Minnesotans concerned about early childhood education and health issues get together, big things begin to happen. The Minnesota Early Childhood Initiative is encouraging action in the area of early childhood mental health; many are now taking note and joining in with Greater Minnesota coalitions.

The Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi LLP Foundation for Education, Public Health and Social Justice has added its support for the Minnesota Thrive Initiative with a grant of $100,000.

The overarching goal of the Thrive Initiative is to create seamless systems or networks of local services that support the healthy social and emotional development of Minnesota's youngest children ages 0-5, with a special emphasis on the 0-3 population.

The foundation grant will advance the implementation of the strategic action plans of the six pilot communities. Resources from the foundation will be used for local activities focused on the social and emotional development of young children and their families. The MTI is a project of the Minnesota Initiative Foundation.

"We are pleased to be able to offer support to the Minnesota Thrive Initiative. The Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi L.L.P. Foundation for Education, Public Health and Social Justice places a strong emphasis on education and health issues and we recognize that we need to do what we can to make a difference. These children are our future," said Michael V. Ciresi, board president and chairman of the foundation and chairman of the executive board for the law firm.

An urgent and compelling need has emerged through data collected over the past four years by coalitions in the Minnesota Early Childhood Initiative, also funded in part by Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi L.L.P. Communities across Greater Minnesota voiced a need for stronger resources in support of early childhood mental health, which is synonymous with the social and emotional well-being of infants, toddlers, preschoolers and their families. Communities all over the state made it known that young children and their families need more and better resources for the prevention of behavioral and emotional problems and appropriate therapeutic intervention when problems occur.

The MTI – a statewide effort promoting the healthy social and emotional development of the youngest children, was designed to address this need. One pilot site in each of the six MIF regions has initiated an action team made up of local individuals caring for and caring about young children and their families. Each team's work is to develop local networks of services that support the healthy social and emotional development of young children. The planning and development stage has been funded by a generous grant from the Bush Foundation.

According to Lin Backstrom, the early childhood development specialist with the Northwest Minnesota Foundation, Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi L.L.P. has been a powerful partner in the MIF's Early Childhood Initiative.

Backstrom said, "Now, we welcome their presence in our work with the Minnesota Thrive Initiative. Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi L.L.P. funds are directed to the strategic action plans of each unique pilot site. As communities develop a particular continuum of care for their young children, Robins, Kaplan, Miller & Ciresi L.L.P. will be there with them."

In addition to the local teams, a statewide network made up of representatives from the six pilot site teams, the MIF Central Coordination Team and a group of statewide early childhood mental health agency partners are being developed. This statewide learning community will share best practices, provide training and contribute to early childhood mental health system-building efforts in Minnesota.

Through the MTI, communities across Greater Minnesota will become better equipped to nurture the social and emotional well-being of their youngest citizens. This effort will involve a broad array of local citizens, representing organizations that serve young children and their families, in creating a local network of community support and services focused on the social and emotional well-being of young children.

Wally Sparby, Northwest Medical Center board chairperson, explained the proposed affiliation agreement.

NWMC Association members approve affiliation agreement with MeritCare

Dr. Roger Gilbertson, president and chief executive officer of MeritCare Health Systems, answered questions Wednesday evening.

TRF hospital, MeritCare join forces

by David Hill
Editor

The long journey for Northwest Medical Center paused at another major intersection Wednesday evening. Would it continue to struggle alone, or would its association members decide to become an affiliate of a much larger corporation and travel together on this path?

Northwest Medical Center was in need of emergency care itself - it has been hemorrhaging money to the tune of about $1 million per year. Wally Sparby, chairman of the Northwest Medical Center Association, said it was obvious this trend couldn't continue. During the long journey to turning that around, he said, they hired Chris Harff as the hospital's chief executive officer, and she has been able to turn things around. But, Sparby said, with impending major improvements needed to the hospital facilities, the board knew it needed to find a partner with deep pockets. The board also made no secret of its desire, having issued several news releases indicating their desire to find a new partner. After months of negotiations and many meetings, Sparby said the board had reached an agreement with MeritCare Health Systems.

As part of this new agreement, Northwest Medical Center would continue to exist as a separate and distinct Minnesota nonprofit corporation with its own board of directors and employees, as well as its own assets and liabilities. However, NWMC would be required to change its bylaws to reflect MeritCare as the sole corporate member of NWMC. The current members of NWMC will become nonvoting members of the NWMC Foundation.

What does Northwest Medical Center and community get out of this agreement?

MeritCare has committed to several things in consideration for becoming the sole corporate member. Sparby outlined two major commitments - a kidney dialysis unit, and one of three capital investment options - either construct a new facility on the Dakota Clinic site, construct a new facility on a new site, or make significant additional upgrades to the existing NWMC facilities. This would take place within a four and one-half to seven-year timeframe.

In addition to these commitments, a summary of the agreement provided at the meeting stated that MeritCare had agreed to the following:

• that all NWMC assets shall be used for the purpose of advancing and providing healthcare services in the service area of NWMC;

• that MeritCare shall provide management support and other services to NWMC;

• that there will be no change in the status of NWMC medical staff (no layoffs);

• that MeritCare shall use good faith efforts to craft relationships with the local physicians of the Thief River Falls community;

• that assets of the NWMC Foundation will remain assets of the NWMC Foundation;

• that MeritCare administration shall use its best efforts to secure the election of a resident of the Thief River Falls service area to the MeritCare board of Trustees for a three-year term of office;

• that there will be no changes to the NWMC Charity Care Policy without the approval of the NWMC board of directors; and, other considerations as stated in the agreement.

What does MeritCare get out of this agreement?

County says "no new deputy" to Karlstad

Karlstad - In May, a group of Karlstad city representatives appealed to the Kittson County commissioners for "some added law enforcement coverage of Karlstad, which no longer has a city police officer. The Karlstad group had talked with Sheriff Ken Hultgren, and they decided to request a new full-time deputy and share that deputy with the city of Karlstad, which is willing to pay half of the costs.

"A discussion was held at that county meeting, and the commissioners turned the matter over to the Kittson County Personnel Committee. That committee met June 5, and Amb reported the results to the City Council at its June 18 meeting. He said the city was informed by the county that the committee decided not to hire an additional full-time deputy but said they feel the Kittson County Sheriff's Department and the city of Karlstad could draft a contract that would satisfy the needs of both parties." - North Star News of Karlstad, June 28, 2007, by Ardis Hanson

Title of Miss Marshall County awarded

Stephen - "A tardily discovered problem with the minimum age requirement for participation in the Miss Marshall County Scholarship Pageant meant that a 16-year-old Warren girl had to relinquish the crown a few hours after winning it Sunday.

"Meghan Davis, who competed as Miss Warren in the pageant at the Stephen Community Arts Center, was understandably devastated by the turnaround, as was her entire family, according to her stepfather, Jeff Bauer, who brought word of the pageant mix-up to the Sheaf.

"Jan Anderson of Stephen, a member of this year's pageant committee, reported later Monday morning the title of Miss Marshall County 2007 was awarded to the pageant runner-up, Katie Hamness, who represented Strathcona. Discovery of the unintentional breach of the age requirement also resulted in the designation of Allie Kuznia, representing Stephen, as pageant runner-up, replacing Hamness." - Warren Sheaf, June 27, 2007

Greenwald to start outreach ministry

Plummer - Nora Greenwald of White Bear Lake, also known as the former Worldwide Wrestling Entertainment professional wrestler Molly Holly, has organized a nonprofit outreach ministry for young adults in Red Lake County called "The Gathering." Every Tuesday evening through July, it will be held from 7 to 8:30 p.m. at the former Catholic church in Plummer.

"From the various locations Greenwald has traveled to during her former wrestling career and the time she has spent volunteering at the Minnesota Teen Challenge, she has found young adults ages 18 through 30 are less likely to stay involved in faith-based activities. ... Her goal is to try to create more of an interest in the Christian faith in younger generations.

"The program is for people, regardless of their religious preference. The atmosphere will be more like that of a coffeehouse than that of a church, with new guest speakers, singers and movies weekly." - Red Lake Falls Gazette, June 27, 2007, by Carmen Dahl

Ditch assessment dispute heats up

"We want the state to be a good neighbor"

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

The Department of Natural Resources held a series of public hearings this week on proposed rules governing drainage projects that impact state-owned lands in Consolidated Conservation (Con-Con) Areas in Aitkin, Beltrami, Marshall and Roseau counties. A DNR Web site notice states that the DNR intends to adopt rules that govern the criteria and procedures for determining drainage benefits to state-owned lands in Con-Con areas administered under Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 84A.

Representatives from northwest Minnesota counties want to know what's wrong with Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 103E (previously known as 106 and 106A), the statute that governs all drainage authorities, providing the structure to maintain drainage systems for all state-owned and private land.

Northwest Minnesota counties say that rules that are already in place (103E) are fine and that the DNR owes more than $3 million for unpaid ditch tax assessments and interest since 1993. Roseau County claims that DNR owes $785,000, including interest for past assessments. In Marshall County, the total is $379,000.

"Our problem, is everybody else pays their taxes – we're asking the DNR to do the same," said Gary Kiesow, commissioner of Marshall County's fifth commissioner district (most of the county's Con-Con land is in district five). "If they don't pay their fair share, other landowners are stuck paying the bill."

Kiesow is happy that the DNR is taking action, but he feels the rule (84A) should be scrapped. "We have rules in place and the system works where everybody pays."

Con-Con lands were created by the Minnesota Legislature in Beltrami, Lake of the Woods and Koochiching counties in 1929; Aitkin, Mahnomen and Roseau counties in 1931; and Marshall County in 1933.

The majority of Con-Con lands in Roseau and Marshall counties came from tax-forfeited property. The land had been drained to produce better agricultural land, but in some cases, the land was unable to support agriculture and many farming operations failed.

In 1984, the state of Minnesota stopped paying ditch assessments on state-owned land in the Con-Con area, following the creation of conservation law, Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 84A. The wording of the proposed rule can be found in Minnesota Statutes Chapter 84A.55, subdivisions nine and 11. "The commissioner (of the DNR) may make necessary investigations and surveys for and may undertake projects for the drainage of state-owned lands within a game preserve, conservation area, or other area subject to this section so far as the commissioner determines that the lands will benefit from the project for the purposes for which the area was established. The commissioner may pay the cost of drainage projects out of

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Ardell Larson said she had a good feeling about her request of the Pennington County Board to help cover the costs of security.

Larson left last week's meeting under the impression that commissioners would discuss the matter and find some way to help an event that could bring thousands of consumers to Thief River Falls and Pennington County. Using the Pennington County Fair Board for funding had been mentioned as an option, but to Larson's surprise, commissioners felt there was nothing they could or were willing to do that would benefit Kick'n Up Kountry.

Larson came to The Times/Northern Watch Office Tuesday to share her view of the Pennington County Board's decision. Larson said she is hurt by the impression that she's out to turn a profit using taxpayer dollars. "For them to think that I'm just going to get donations isn't fair," Larson said.

Larson also clarified the working relationship between Kick'n Up Kountry and the Pennington County Fair Board. She said Kick'n Up Kountry is leasing the Pennington County Fairgrounds' grandstand with a $500 deposit which could be returned if the grounds are kept in good shape and a $500 lease for the event. [illegible] in full Kick'n Up Kountry and the Pennington County Fairboard will share profits from the beer gardens. Nine food vendors will also be on hand and the Elks Lodge of Thief River Falls will serve VIP meals.

Following last week's Pennington County Board meeting, The Times learned that the nonprofit and volunteer based Roseau County Mounted Posse has not received any contributions from Kick'n Up Kountry during the previous three years it provided security for the country music festival. Despite the lack of previous cash donations, Max Cole of the Roseau County Mounted Posse said posse members plan to continue providing security at Kick'n Up Kountry if they are again invited.

Larson said she plans to make a contribution to the Roseau County Mounted Posse and she plans to make up for past contributions once funding is available. She said members of the Roseau County Mounted Posse did receive free tickets and souvenirs for their volunteer efforts.

Larson said she would welcome the Roseau County Mounted Posse for security, but that arrangements need to be made by the Pennington County Sheriff's Department.

Why sponsorships are needed

Larson said she has been unable to attract investors to Kick'n Up Kountry and during the first three years the country music festival did [illegible] sell enough tickets to cover operating costs including the suggested $5,000 contribution to the Roseau County Mounted Posse. Larson said that is why she is seeking sponsorships to help cover the event's operating expenses.

Most of the event's cost, $150,000, will come from cashiers checks paid to the artists. "I need to have that cashiers check in hand when [the artists] arrive," Larson said. "I can't count on liquor or ticket sales to cover it ... that money needs to be in the bank."

Also contributing to the cost is a large stage ($15,000 – artists won't perform on a smaller stage), sound and lighting equipment, advertising, printing of tickets, electricity, water

Get ready for that July 4 get-together with some new recipes.

Make this yummy dish to serve with your barbecued hamburgers, chicken, brats or even plain hot dogs. Make it ahead without cheese, then reheat in the oven for a quick side dish:

ZIPPY SKILLET RICE
1 cup uncooked long grain rice
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1/2 cup chopped green pepper
1/2 cup chopped onion
2 garlic cloves, minced
2 cans (about 15 ounces each) diced tomatoes, undrained
1/2 cup diced pimentos
1 teaspoon chili powder
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/2 teaspoon turmeric
1/2 cup shredded cheddar cheese

In large skillet, sauté rice in butter for 5 minutes until golden brown, stirring constantly. Add green pepper, onion and garlic and stir and cook 2-3 minutes until vegetables are tender. Add tomatoes, pimentos, chili powder, salt, pepper and turmeric. Mix well.

Cover and simmer 20-25 minutes until rice is tender. Sprinkle with cheese and serve immediately. Serves 6.

Grilling out is great and here is something yummy to make with that leftover grilled steak. You can also make it plain for a side dish or use chicken or pork or all three to make a delicious main dish meal:

STEAK SALAD
1/3 cup oil
2 tablespoons cider or red wine vinegar
1 tablespoon lemon juice
1 garlic clove, minced
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
Dash of Worcestershire
1/2 cup crumbled blue cheese
2 steaks (about 8 ounces each)
6 cups torn salad greens
1 medium tomato, thinly sliced
1 small carrot, thinly sliced
1/2 cup thinly sliced onion
1/4 cup sliced stuffed olives

In small bowl, combine oil, vinegar, lemon juice, garlic, salt, pepper and Worcestershire. Mix well and stir in blue cheese. Cover and refrigerate.

Grill steaks or slice slightly warmed leftovers. On serving platter, arrange lettuce, tomato, carrot, onion and olives. Top with steak and pour dressing over.

Serve this delicious meat with your rice dish - your guests will rave:

PORK LOIN ROAST
1 boneless whole pork loin roast (4-5 pounds)
1/3 cup chopped onion
1/3 cup chopped celery
1 garlic clove, minced
1 teaspoon oil
1 can condensed tomato soup, undiluted
1/3 cup water
2 tablespoons brown sugar
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons Worcestershire sauce
2 tablespoons Dijon mustard
1/8 to 1/4 teaspoon hot pepper sauce

Place roast on rack in shallow roasting pan. Bake, uncovered, at 325 degrees for 1 and 1/2 hours.

In skillet, sauté onion, celery and garlic in oil until tender. Stir in remaining ingredients. Spoon 1 cup sauce over roast and bake 45-55 minutes longer, until meat thermometer reads 160 degrees. Let stand 10-15 minutes before slicing. Serve with remaining sauce on the side. Serves 8 or more.

Make this special bread in your bread machine for a tasty accompaniment to that holiday meal:

CRACKED PEPPER BREAD
1-1/2 cups water (70-80 degrees)
3 tablespoons olive oil
3 tablespoons sugar
2 teaspoons salt
3 tablespoons chives, minced
2 garlic cloves, minced
1 teaspoon garlic powder
1 teaspoon dried basil
1 teaspoon cracked black pepper
1/4 cup grated Parmesan cheese
4 cups bread flour
2-1/2 teaspoon active dry yeast

In bread machine, place ingredients as suggested by manufacturer. Select basic bread setting. Bake according to directions, checking dough after 5 minutes of mixing to see if 1-2 tablespoons of water or water is needed. Recipe makes one (2 pound) loaf.

And we certainly must have a delicious dessert. They'll be begging for seconds when you make this large cake that looks and tastes just like a German chocolate one:

COCONUT CHOCOLATE CAKE
2 cups flour
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 cup butter or margarine
1 cup water
1/4 cup cocoa
2 eggs
1/2 cup buttermilk
1 teaspoon vanilla
Topping:
1 can (12 ounces) evaporated milk, divided
1-1/4 cups sugar, divided
20 large marshmallows
1 (14 ounce) package coconut
2 cups slivered almonds, toasted, divided
1/2 cup butter or margarine
1 cups semisweet chocolate chips

Combine flour, sugar, soda and salt. In saucepan, combine butter, water and cocoa. Cook and stir until butter is melted. Add to dry ingredients.

Combine eggs, buttermilk and vanilla and add to chocolate mixture and mix well. Pour into greased jelly roll pan and bake at 350 degrees for 20-25 minutes or until toothpick comes out clean.

Meanwhile, in saucepan, combine 1 cup evaporated milk, 3/4 cup sugar and marshmallows. Cook and stir until marshmallows are melted. Remove from heat and stir in coconut. Immediately sprinkle 1 cup almonds over cake and then spread with coconut mixture. Sprinkle with remaining almonds. (Pan will be full.)

In saucepan, combine butter with remaining milk and sugar. Cook and stir until butter is melted. Remove from heat and stir in chocolate chips until melted. Drizzle over almonds. Cool. Serves 35.

Delay of passport requirements comes as welcome relief

Area legislators, and most notably Sen. Norm Coleman, have been fighting for citizens concerned about the Western Hemisphere Transportation Initiative, which would, among other things, implement a requirement that all citizens possess passports to travel to and from the United States, even crossing land borders. The warnings about what would happen was so dire, and noise about the requirement so loud and broadly repeated in the media that it's hard to imagine anyone not getting their passport needs addressed months ahead of any planned trip or vacation. Nevertheless, it came as a surprise to many citizens. The number of passports being processed jumped from 11 million to 17 million per year. Passport backlog has been a headline in the national news for the past couple of weeks, so the decision to delay implementation of the rule should come as a relief to many.

Recently, officials decided to back off on the requirements. In a press release from Sen. Coleman's office, Coleman praised the decision to delay implementation of the Western Hemisphere Travel Initiative land and sea rule and to give citizens the option of alternatives to passport documents such as passport cards. The decision will permit land travel between Canada, Mexico and the Caribbean with a driver's license and birth certificate until at least the summer of 2008, instead of the original January 2008 deadline. In addition, Coleman sent a letter to Secretary of State Condoleezza Rice requesting the creation of a local passport processing office in Minnesota.

"The rule issued today should, at least for the moment, bring some relief to Minnesotans worried about what will happen in January of next year for land border travel," Coleman said.

It seems obvious that the new rule shall eventually be implemented. Notwithstanding objections to the loss of privacy and a "Big Brother"-like appearance, the new rule will be implemented because our society is demanding more security at the border. Our question remains - will this help catch people illegally entering this country or will it just cause more hassles for its citizens?

Coleman has decided that if you can't beat them or change the rules, maybe we can take advantage of the new rule, help constituents and create some jobs; too.

Since March, Coleman's office alone has helped more than 2,300 Minnesotans secure passports. "For Minnesotans, the closest regional passport agency is in Chicago, which is several hours' drive from the Twin Cities. As an air travel hub and border state, Minnesota will continue to be greatly impacted by WHTI requirements. An office in the Twin Cities would be of tremendous assistance to my constituents."

Pembina Trail RC&D seeks project proposals

The Pembina Trail Resource Conservation & Development Council is requesting proposals within Kittson, Roseau, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk and Norman counties for landowners and/or producers interested in establishing conservation crops as part of the Productive Conservation on Working Lands pilot project.

The PCWL initiative is a crop establishment incentive opportunity offering Minnesota landowners and/or farmers a chance to receive up to 50 percent reimbursement towards the establishment of productive conservation crops (not to exceed $150 per acre), as well as marketing and research services. Crop selection will be farmer initiated; some examples would include hybrid poplar trees, switchgrass, willows, cuphea, hazelnuts, and other alternative energy or non-conventional crops.

The PCWL initiative is available statewide through local RC&D councils and is administered at the state level by the Three Rivers RC&D Council headquartered in Mankato. This project is possible through cooperation with USDA's Natural Resources Conservation Service and funded through an Environmental Quality Incentives Program Conservation Innovation Grant. A statewide technical advisory panel will review and rank each application and examine project feasibility. Funding recommendations will be forwarded to the Minnesota Association of RC&Ds' executive board for final funding decisions. Submission deadlines for PCWL applications are July 25, 2007, and January 6, 2008.

Those who would like to be involved in an innovative conservation program that provides sustainable economic opportunities and farm diversity are encouraged to apply. Participants must be residents of the state of Minnesota, be EQIP program eligible producers according to USDA criteria, and complete a "PCWL Producer Request for Services" application. To ensure proper planning time and to obtain application materials, contact the Pembina Trail RC&D office for more information at (218) 253-2646, extension 4.

Reaching the bag just before the ball hit the glove of Moorhead first baseman Matt Penner, Thief River Falls runner Spencer Johnson beat out an infield hit in the first game of Wednesday's Ninth District American Legion baseball doubleheader at the Multi-Events Center. The Blues swept the Bandits 19-8, 7-3.

Bandits feeling a little Blue

Sliding into the tag of Moorhead third baseman Andy Stone, Thief River Falls' Lucas Genereux was called out as he tried to advance on a pitch that got away from the catcher during the first inning of Wednesday's American Legion baseball doubleheader nightcap. The visiting Blues won both games, 19-8 and 7-3.

Coming off a title-winning showing during a weekend tournament in Perham, members of the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team had a little extra bounce in their step heading into a Wednesday Ninth District match-up with Moorhead. But the Bandits limped off the Multi-Events Center diamond after being swept by the Blues 19-8, 7-3.

Kyle VanDyke hit two home runs and drove in five runs to lead the visitors in a Game 1 slugfest that featured 30 hits and 27 runs.

The eight runs and 10 hits accumulated by the Bandits will win most games. But not when you give up 20 hits and are charged with nine errors.

Thief River Falls chopped an early six-run first game deficit to 10-8 through four innings, but couldn't contain the Blues, who pushed nine more runs across the plate in their next two at-bats to end the game after six innings due to the 10-run rule.

Moorhead also had a finishing kick in Game 2 to secure the sweep.

Tied at 3-3 going into the seventh, the Blues turned five walks and a two-out, two-strike, two-run single by No. 9-hitter Scott Petry into a four-run, game-winning frame.

Two of those walks were intentional – the first one to set up a potential inning-ending double play, and the second one to avoid pitching to VanDyke with one out and runners at second and third. However, the next two batters also drew free passes as first-game starters Tony Emmench and Matt Penner both picked up a free RBI in pinch-hitting roles.

Petry, who sat on the bench in Game 1 and was 0-for-3 to that point, then came through with a shot up the middle to score two runs and pretty much seal the deal for the visitors.

Thief River Falls started the nightcap with a 2-0 first inning lead on an RBI single by Michael Benedict and a run-scoring double to center by Lucas Genereux.

A triple by Michael Weiss into the right field corner and a sacrifice fly by VanDyke put Moorhead on the board in the top of the second. Thief River Falls got that run back in the bottom of the inning on a walk, passed ball, infield hit and error combination.

The Blues did lose one runner at the plate in the fifth, but pulled even on a run-scoring single to right by Andy Stone and a wild pitch.

Thief River Falls tried to break the tie in the sixth when an inning-opening two-base error and a sacrifice bunt put a runner at third with one out. But a missed bunt attempt on a suicide squeeze resulted in an out at the plate.

The Bandits took a 5-4 record into a weekend tournament at East Grand Forks. The Bandits will host Crookston Monday at 5 p.m. to open a string of five straight home doubleheaders. The run at the Multi-Events Center will also include games Sunday, July 8, vs. Roseau; Monday, July 9, vs. Detroit Lakes; Thursday, July 12, vs. Perham and Friday, July 13, vs. Bemidji.

Fontes signs with D-II North Carolina school

Brandon Fontes, a 2007 graduate of Northland Community and Technical College, has signed a national letter of intent to play NCAA Division II basketball for Pfeiffer University in Misenheimer, N.C.

Fontes, a Grand Forks (N.D.) Central graduate, was a two-year starter at Northland. He averaged 11.1 points, 3.7 assists and 2.1 steals per game as the lone sophomore on the Pioneers' team that reached the 2007 National Junior College Athletic Association Division III national tournament championship game in Delhi, N.Y.

A Minnesota Community College Conference All-Northern Division and All-MCCC pick, Fontes was selected to play in the NJCAA Basketball Coaches Association National All-Star game in April at Kilgore, Texas.

Pfeiffer, a church-orientated school that stresses community service among its students, has approximately 1,000 undergraduates. Misenheimer, with a population of 2,818, is located in the Southern Piedmont of North Carolina, less than an hour northeast of Charlotte.

The Falcons are part of the 12-team Conference Carolinas, along with fellow North Carolina schools Barton College, Belmont Abbey College, Lees-McRae College, Mount Olive College, Queens University of Charlotte and St. Andrews Presbyterian College, plus five schools from South Carolina: Anderson University, Coker College, Converse College, Erskine College and Limestone College.

League member Barton is the defending NCAA Division II champion – the team that snapped Winona State's NCAA Division II record 57-game winning streak in the 2007 national finals.

Pfeiffer finished 17-11 last year, a dip for 11th-year head coach Dave Davis, whose team had averaged 25 wins per year over the previous four years when the Falcons were billed as "the fastest team in college basketball" while leading the nation in scoring four straight seasons.

Fontes and the Falcons will get a taste of the big time on Nov. 11 when they play NCAA Division I power North Carolina in an exhibition game at the Dean Dome. Last year, Pfeiffer had a 15-point second half lead before losing to Purdue of the Big Ten.

NCTC softball team signs four players

Three players from Thief River Falls and one from Roseau have signed letters of intent to play softball at Northland Community and Technical College in 2008.

Baker Cup awarded at Greenbush

Canadian driver Dan Gregoire of St. Anne, Manitoba, was presented with the 2007 Baker Cup after winning the June 23 Wissota Modified feature at the Greenbush Race Park.

The Baker Cup Memorial Race is named in memory of Elliot Baker of St. Hilaire, an avid race fan and promoter before his death. Gregoire received the trophy from Elliot's nice and nephew, Desire Baker and Elliot Dahlen of St. Hilaire.

Gregoire, who races at several tracks in Canada and Minnesota, has been running at Greenbush since 1996. He raced in the Street Class before going to Super Stocks in 2000 and B Mods in 2003. His resume added Late Models in 2005 before starting with the Wissota Modifieds this summer.

The Baker Cup victory was Gregoire's second feature win of 2007 at Greenbush.

Thief River Falls shortstop Patrick Barry tried to pull the ball out of his glove in an effort to make a throw to first base for a double play after forcing Moorhead runner Tony Emmerich at second in Game 2 of Wednesday's American Legion baseball doubleheader at the Multi-Events Center. The Spuds swept the host Bandits.

will help alleviate the Pioneers' biggest problem of 2007 when a pitching thin team struggled through a 6-20 season. All three pitched for the 20-4 Prowlers.

"I am extremely excited that Shawna, Kelly and Brittni have decided to join our team next season," said Huschle in a school news release. "All three can pitch a great game, but when they aren't pitching, they do an outstanding job in other positions. They are each very athletic and will greatly contribute to the program."

Erickson is also expected to contribute. "Carissa is a solid infield player and will be a great asset to the team next season," said Huschle.

Rogalla will be a multi-sport athlete at Northland. Pioneers coach Guy Finstrom announced Rogalla's basketball signing earlier.

Ice Road Truckers

"Just take a blow torch and turn it on frozen eggs until the shells blow off, and man, that's pretty good eating." Obviously what you just read is not a recipe for gourmet food; however, it is a recipe for survival in the Northwest Territories according to John Denison. This is a name you'll become familiar with in a little bit, but first let me give you some background.

Recently, the History Channel has been featuring a series on "Ice Road Truckers." This is a group of men, who deliver supplies via tractor trailer convoy, from the city of Yellowknife in the south, to the diamond mines in the north of the Canadian Northwest Territory. The series covers a period of the eight coldest weeks each year when the ice that makes up the ice road is thickest. At 27 inches, the ice should be safe; however, the semi loads that cross weigh up to 50 tons so sometimes, the trucks break through the ice and sink in water up to 280-feet deep. In a recent episode of "Ice Road Truckers," a deep-sea diver reported that he'd recovered the remains of 39 truck drivers who'd gone down with their trucks. The series has all the characters you'd expect; young and innocent, brash and cocky. One of the men is even a part-time minister. I recommend the series for the education, the entertainment value and because it's a nice way to take a break from summer's heat on Sunday nights.

I've followed, and written about, the ice road truckers since before this series was created. In the series, it's claimed the ice road has been in existence for 26 years when in reality, tiny settlements in the Northwest Territory have existed since the 1930s, when uranium was mined for the first nuclear bomb. There wasn't always a formalized road, but supplies were dragged north by sleds pulled by crawler tractors in the winter. In the television series, John Zigarlik is introduced as the "father" of the ice road and has managed its creation for the last 26 years. If Zigarlik is the father of the ice road then John Denison is its grandfather. Denison created the first organized ice road in 1964 at a time when Zigarlik was the manager of a mine on Echo Bay in the Territories. Denison and Zigarlik knew each other and discussed the road as it was in their best interest. However, Denison was the man behind the wheel. Denison created the first ice road with comparatively few men and machinery under brutal conditions. His efforts were documented by Edith Iglauer in the book "Denison's Ice Road." While today's ice road builders benefit from technology and science, Denison's crew felt their way across nearly 400 miles of ice road and muskeg (like a peat bog) with their wits and by the seat of their pants. Even with advanced technology, today's ice road is no less dangerous, and the men who drive it no less brave in their efforts to earn a living.

If you, like me, crave a little paid adventure and dream of driving the ice road then please continue dreaming; they only employ Canadian drivers. There are no work visas for temporary truck drivers on the ice road and it's probably just as well if you, like me, enjoy home and family and have no interest in taking a swim in 280 feet of freezing water.

Coronary health project will be held this summer

Thief River Falls CHIP (Coronory Health Improvement Project) will conduct a summer class beginning July 15. CHIP is a video-based lifestyle improvement program that can help dramatically reduce health risks associated with heart disease, hypertension, diabetes and obesity. The four-week program will be facilitated by a team of community volunteers, Northwest Medical Center Lab personnel, and CHIP graduates like local resident Jill Hall.

Hall enrolled in the CHIP class last October. She and her classmates had two Heart Screen assessments, one at the beginning of the program and another at the end. She attended 16 sessions, which included scientifically sound video presentations by Dr. Hans Diehl, class activities, and heart healthy food. At the conclusion of the program, Hall was delighted with her results. Her cholesterol dropped 49 points and her triglycerides went down 44 points. She lost six pounds during the month and since then has continued to lose another 23 pounds.

"It is easy when you can experience the results in just four weeks. It's impressive, especially seeing the change in the blood profile at the end of the course. It makes you want to keep going," said Hall.

And just like the Energizer Bunny, Hall keeps going! She continues to make wise food choices, and she exercises in a variety of ways: walking outdoors, going to Curves, using the treadmill, and working out with Dick Nunas, who hosts an exercise program on 3ABN TV.

"Whatever you find that works for you," she observes, "you have to keep doing it."

Since graduating from CHIP, Hall has served as president of the Thief River Falls CHIP Alumni Association, which meets monthly to provide support, recipes, and fellowship for CHIP alumni.

And Hall has found that is what CHIP is about: supporting people as they make healthy lifestyle choices and then continuing that support. Such was the vision of Diehl, a cardiovascular epidemiologist from Loma Linda, Calif., when he founded CHIP almost 20 years ago. According to Diehl, the mission of CHIP is to "empower people to enjoy optimum health through education and motivation."

Would you like to learn more about CHIP and achieving optimum health? Free information sessions will be conducted in the meeting room of the Thief River Falls Public Library at the following times: Monday, July 2 at 10 a.m., 2 p.m., and 6 p.m.; Tuesday, July 3 at 2 p.m. and 6 p.m.; Monday, July 9 at 10 a.m. and 6 p.m. For further information, please call Thief River Falls CHIP Director Marilyne Sayler, RN, MS at 681-1776 or 689-3276

(Continued from Page 1) includes portable toilets and shower costs), security, music and campground licensing, three RV rentals for artists, clothing and souvenir items, all of which must meet the Minnesota Department of Health requirements. Larson is unsure of the total estimate for expenses.

A full $15,000 sponsorship includes advertisement benefits as each business' logo will appear on the stage banner and Kick'n Up Kountry Web site, and appear or be mentioned in all radio, TV and newspaper advertising for the event. The full sponsorship also includes free booth space during the event, 30 general seating tickets and 12 VIP tickets.

Additional sponsorship packages are $7,500, $5,000, $2,500 and $1,000. All five sponsorship packages include some form of advertisement at the event, advertisement in the program guide and at least eight general seating tickets. More information on the various sponsorship packages is available at kicknupkountry@wiktel.com.

Kick'n Up Kountry gives back

Kick'n Up Kountry is seeking sponsorships to cover the enormous operating cost, but Larson says that hasn't kept her country music festival from giving back to the various communities of northwest Minnesota. She said Kick'n Up Kountry has given promotional tickets to the Hallock Bowling Group, Two Rivers Golf Course, the Brent Otto Benefit in Greenbush, the Thief River Golf Club for its motel promo, "Kick'n Out Cancer," the Relay for Life Event in Argyle," the Beth Pridday promo in Detroit Lakes and the Argyle HOPE program.

"I have not said no one time, to anybody who's asked me for tickets," Larson said.

Kick'n Up Kountry also teams with KEM Shriners of Grand Forks to help children with terminal illness and disability needs. KEM Shriners will host a 10 a.m. parade Sept. 1, featuring the Mattracks Extreme Team. She also teams with KEM Shriners to offer a free screening for children with disabilities at Northwest Medical Center. A similar clinic was held in Hallock during the 2006 edition of Kick'n Up Kountry. It found nine new patients that were treated at the Shriners Hospital in Minneapolis. Go to www.shrinershq.org or call 1-888-293-2832 or 612-596-6100 for information on this year's screening.

Larson also reports that Kick'n Up Kountry is working with the Northwest Minnesota Foundation, MeritCare Foundation, Altru Hospital and Rainbow Society in Winnipeg, Manitoba, Canada, to offer a VIP package for children with life threatening illnesses. That program, known as Hopes, Dreams and Smiles, will allow several children with life threatening illnesses to attend Kick'n Up Kountry as VIPs.

Nine children have already been selected to participate in Hopes, Dreams and Smiles. Each child will attend a special reception; receive free hotel lodging; have limousine transportation to and from Kick'n Up Kountry; receive VIP tickets, with a back stage pass; meet Neal McCoy and potentially other artists; and receive a gift bag with a camera, photo album and Kick'n Up Kountry T-shirts.

Kick'n Up Kountry and its Hopes, Dreams and Smiles program has been well received in the Bemidji area. Bemidji's Southside Restaurant will be holding several fundraisers with ticket give-aways during the month of August, during which 98.3 RB Broadcasting in Bemidji will have three remote broadcasts from the restaurant.

Early bird special nears end

Kick'n Up Kountry is set for Aug. 31-Sept. 2 at the Pennington County Fairground's Grandstand. Early bird ticket prices through June 30 (today) are $90 for three-day general, $110 for three-day reserved, $250 for three-day VIP, $80 for single-day general and $90 for single-day reserved. From July 1 to the beginning of the event, those prices increase to $100, $120, $300, $90 and $100, respectively.

Peterson sponsors meetings for manufacturers

U.S. Rep. Collin Peterson will sponsor two meetings to provide information to manufacturers about the availability of federal resources. Representatives from federal and state agencies will explain programs that include assistance in exporting goods and services that are available to assist if a qualifying company has been adversely affected by imports.

The meetings will be held on Tuesday, July 17 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at Sahlstrom Conference Center – Brown Dining Room, University of Minnesota, Crookston, and Wednesday, July 18 from 11:30 a.m. to 1:30 p.m. at Broadway Ballroom, 115 30th Ave. E., Alexandria.

There is no charge to attend these meetings. Lunch (optional) will be available for a separate charge, payable at the door. RSVP by calling Peterson's Detroit Lakes District Office at (218) 847-5056 or by contacting his senior economic adviser, Toni Merdan, by e-mail at Toni.Merdan@mail.house.gov.

Ditch assessment dispute heats up

(Continued from Page 1) funds appropriated and available for them. If the commissioner finds after investigation that a project for the construction, repair, or improvement of a public ditch or ditch system undertaken by a county or other public agency as otherwise provided by law will benefit the lands for those purposes, the commissioner may cooperate in the project by joining in the petition for the project or consenting to or approving it on any conditions the commissioner determines. ... ."

The DNR was to have established criteria for determining benefits to Con-Con lands by Jan. 1, 1986. That timeline was not met, but the Minnesota Court of Appeals ruled that an agency's failure to act within a statutory timeframe does not bar subsequent action, unless the statute specifically directs that result.

In 1992, the state advised the counties that it would not pay pending assessments until a joint review of benefits was conducted. In 1993, it ceased paying assessments on Con-Con lands for which redetermination of benefits had not taken place. Minnesota Statutes, Chapter 84A.55 upheld both decisions.

In 2001, Marshall, Beltrami and Roseau counties sought a ruling that the DNR is responsible to pay ditch assessments on Con-Con lands. The Minnesota Court of Appeals instead ruled that ditch authorities may not compel the DNR to pay assessments on Con-Con lands. The ruling also backed Statutes, Chapter 84A, allowing the DNR commissioner to determine the benefits of drainage systems.

The DNR began writing its rule in 2002 and this week's meetings were the next step, as DNR officials heard comments from county officials and residents.

Marshall County Auditor Scott Peters argues that the DNR's 23-year wait in determining the benefit value of its land has left other landowners with the responsibility of funding the maintenance of ditches in the Con-Con land area. In many cases, he said, 80 percent of the landowners are paying 100 percent of the assessments.

Peters says the DNR commissioner has a right to pay assessments, but he has chosen not to, and Peters argues that it would cost the DNR less to follow the 103E rule than to pay past assessments.

His fear with the DNR's proposed rule is that it is giving the authority to determine benefits to one person and not a third party, like 103E outlines. He added that many ditch systems located in the Con-Con lands are in a fragile financial state.

"We assess across the base," Peters said. "The DNR wants to be able to go by a project to project basis, where they will look at positive and negative impacts. They will set their benefit value base on those perceptions."

A prime example of a ditch that is in a fragile state is Marshall County Ditch 11. Peters said 22.8 percent of the land benefited by CD 11 is Con-Con land, and because the state of Minnesota has not paid its share of assessments, CD 11 is more than $50,000 in debt.

"Are they (DNR) being a good neighbor if they don't pay their bill?" Peters asks. "They're not working with the people, they're working completely against them."

"Our hope is that the state will pay their bill. We hope that the state will change their policy and continue under the 103E rule. We don't believe that 84A is a fair law, providing power to one person. It's not fair taxation. We don't want to tell them how to manage their property – that's their right. A ditch system is just a system that benefits all land within that system.

"We're going to try to work with them to get their bill settled. We will also work with them on this rule, we hope that they will take our offer on that."

Public hearings were held Tuesday in Aitkin; Wednesday at Hobson Union, Bemidji State University and Grygla High School; and Thursday at Warroad Middle School. Each meeting was mediated by Administrative Law Judge Barbara Nielson and followed a similar format, beginning with an opening statement by DNR officials on the proposed plan and a time for public comment on the plan. Written comments will be accepted for a 20-day period ending July 18. Rebuttal comments will also be accepted during a five-day rebuttal period from July 19-23.

Nielson will issue a report on the proposed rules following the close of the hearing record.

TRF hospital, MeritCare join forces

(Continued from Page 1) and chief executive officer of MeritCare Health System, said they were not only excited about being a part of the community but humbled by it. He said Thief River Falls was a long way from Fargo-Moorhead and urged those in attendance not to think of the agreement as creating a new suburb of Fargo-Moorhead. Rather, he said, think of MeritCare as a large regional healthcare provider, and Thief River Falls as a hub for healthcare in this part of the region.

Gilbertson said MeritCare is committed to making NWMC stronger and expanding its services. He said they recognize that the hospital is an important healthcare provider to many people in the region, and an economic development driver, too. With the construction of a hospital, and the structure of the agreement it should be obvious that MeritCare intends to be in this community for the long-term.

Gilbertson noted that the current trend in healthcare is in integrating healthcare throughout the region. MeritCare, he said, delivers more rural healthcare than any other system.

"MeritCare," said Gilbertson, "sees a great opportunity for integrating healthcare in the region."

At the conclusion of a question and answer period, the members of the association in attendance were asked to vote on whether or not to accept the agreement. The final vote tally was 94 votes in favor of the agreement and nine in opposition to the agreement. A total of 103 votes were cast.

The effective date of affiliation is Nov. 1, 2007. There will be changes, but officials with MeritCare and NWMC said not to expect any major changes on Nov. 2.

MINNESOTA HISTORICAL SOCIETY

Local bull dies of anthrax

The Minnesota Board of Animal Health confirmed Thursday that one bull from a Marshall County farm died last week of anthrax. It was the first anthrax case of 2007 and follows the second worst year for anthrax deaths in Minnesota in 2006, when 91 animals died on 28 northwest Minnesota farms. The herd will remain under quarantine for 30 days from the day the bull died.

After the dead bull was discovered out on the pasture, a blood sample was collected and sent to the North Dakota State University Veterinary Diagnostic Laboratory in Fargo. Tests confirmed that the sample was positive for anthrax. The herd hadn't been vaccinated for anthrax this year and has since been taken off the pasture where the infection occurred.

Anthrax is a naturally occurring disease caused by the bacteria Bacillus anthracis. All warm-blooded animals are susceptible to the disease, but cattle, sheep and goats are the most commonly affected. In rare cases, humans can contract anthrax after handling or eating infected products.

In Minnesota, approximately 260 farms have had animals diagnosed with anthrax since it was first reported in the state in 1909. Animals are most likely to be affected by anthrax in the summer while out on pastures. Cases typically occur in areas where animals have previously died of anthrax. Anthrax is not spread by animal to animal contact.

"Anthrax spores have been known to survive for many years in the soil," said BAH Senior Veterinarian Dr. Linda Glaser. "The animal that died was on pasture in northwest Minnesota, an area that has seen anthrax in recent years, so it important that other northwestern Minnesota livestock producers seriously consider anthrax vaccinations for grazing animals." Information on vaccinating animals can be obtained by contacting a veterinarian.

Any animal that dies suddenly of an unknown cause in northwestern Minnesota should be treated as an anthrax suspect. Producers should contact their veterinarian immediately, so blood samples can be submitted for testing. If anthrax were confirmed, any remaining animals should be vaccinated and treated. Autopsies shouldn't be performed on suspect carcasses as the procedure can result in contamination of surrounding soil. All suspect cases of anthrax must be reported to the BAH at (651) 296-6831.

For more information on anthrax and steps farmers can take to protect their cattle, visit the BAH Web site (www.bah.state.mn.us) and click on Anthrax under the Hot Topics menu.

Kittson Central School Board talks about Kennedy campus

Hallock - "Kittson Central School Board members have been doing their 'homework' over the past four months on whether to close the Kennedy school building and add onto the high school."

"On June 25, the board met for its monthly meeting, and chairman Mike Sugden reported that they had two committee meetings with about 20 local residents. Of the meetings, Sugden commented that he felt the public left well-informed."

"A motion to reconfigure the Kittson Central School District by closing the Kennedy campus and pursuing a building project was made with the entire board agreeing to get started as soon as possible. This way, board members concurred, bids could be let out in January, when contractors are setting up jobs for the coming season or summer. To date, the next step is for Superintendent Bruce Jensen to submit a feasibility form for the Minnesota Department of Education to review and comment on. This process will take 60 days."

"The Kittson Central School Board will have community meetings and other informational events. Now, it will be up to the voters to decide how much is spent and where." - Kittson County Enterprise, July 4, 2007, by Louise Money

Early Monday morning fire destroys restaurant in Fosston

Fosston - "An early morning fire gutted a popular family restaurant in Fosston on Monday.

"According to Deputy State Fire Marshal Kevin Mahle, firefighters were notified of the blaze at Uncle Bob's Family Restaurant at 3:54 a.m. The cause of the fire, which completely destroyed the business, remains under investigation." - The Erskine Echo, July 5, 2007

City postpones hospital demolition

Karlstad - "City Clerk Wayne Ruud told Karlstad City Council members they needed to discuss some issues concerning the planned demolition of the old hospital building. He said he had received a cost estimate from Forest River Colony and Salvage in the amount of $41,000. He said the estimate needed to be clarified because it's not clear what is included in it."

"Following further discussion, the council voted to put the hospital demolition project on hold for the remainder of calendar year 2007. Ruud said he would keep the issue on the agenda, so they could discuss it and make sure they have the information they need to be able to begin the project again in early spring 2008." - North Star News of Karlstad, July 5, 2007, by Ardis Hanson

Art in the Park set for July 15

Roseau - "Friends, neighbors and all you art aficionados out there near and far, that time of year has rolled around again to celebrate the various art forms and craftsmanship of our area artists."

Art in the Park will be held Sunday, July 15 from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. at the Pioneer Farm and Village located west of Roseau. It is sponsored by the Roseau Area Arts Association. - Roseau Times-Region, June 30, 2007, by Al Buffum

Patriotism on Parade

Wait, wait ... here it comes, we're about to get wet! The Class of 1987 provided some relief from the heat Wednesday during Plummer's July 4th Celebration Parade. The Tri-River Pioneers sponsored the celebration. More photos from the parade will be in the next edition of The Times.

Pennington County Fair is next week

The 106th Pennington County Fair will be July 11-15 at the fairgrounds in Thief River Falls.

Bus rides

Free bus rides to and from the 2007 Pennington County Fair will be offered once again this year. Tri-Valley Buses will run every hour from 4 to 11 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, and from 1 p.m. to midnight on Friday, and Saturday. On Sunday, buses will run from 1 to 11 p.m.

Bus stops on the route this year, include: Floyd B. Olson Park, the Heritage Community Center, Wal-Mart, SuperOne, Hugo's, and the front door of the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center.

Dogs at the fairgrounds

Fairgoers are no longer allowed to bring their dogs to the fair. The only dogs that will be allowed on the fairgrounds are those that are participating in a dog show or are part of an exhibit or are service dogs. All other dogs are to be left at home.

Lawn mower racing

This year's new additions include the Pennington County Grass Wackers Nationals Lawn Mower racing at the grandstand on Wednesday, and lots of fun and entertainment.

The Grass Wacker Nationals Lawn Mower Racing involves just what readers might expect - racing riding lawn mowers.

Terry BlackLance, official spokesman for the Midwest Dirt Racing Association, which is sponsoring the event, said lawn mower racing was popularized in the South, and it has slowly moved its way north. BlackLance said their organization decided to give it a shot because they thought it might be a good way to introduce people to racing. He also said the fair board was looking for a grandstand attraction for Wednesday evening.

The event will have two basic divisions - stock lawn mowers, and "Outlaw" or modified lawn

Get your exhibits ready

It's that time of year again – time to get your exhibits ready for the Pennington County Fair. Here is some information regarding some changes and additions at the fair this year.

Exhibitions

This year's dog show will be held Wednesday at 5 p.m. The goat show has been moved to Thursday at 7 p.m. The horse show on Sunday, which is open to anyone, will only be the horse show games this year. Registration is at 9 a.m. with show time at 10 a.m. Games will include keyhole, poles, barrels, egg and spoon, ride a buck, sack race, cloverleaf barrels, and rescue race.

Livestock exhibitors are reminded of the health regulations for TB testing.

Exhibitors who enter their sewing and flowers projects will have a chance to win some special awards. The champion adult sewing, champion quilt and champion children sewing projects will each receive a gift certificate from Cloud 9 Quilt Shoppe. In the Flower Department, special awards will be given to champion arrangement, sweepstakes award, champion youth cut flowers, champion youth potted plant, champion youth floral arrangement and overall champion youth exhibit from the Minnesota State Horticultural Society, Nature Belles Garden Club, Moccasio Garden Club and Phillip's Quality Gardens.

Hostas can be exhibited in the Flower Department. An exhibit consists of three leaves. Small leaves are under two inches, medium leaves are two to five inches, and large leaves are more than five inches. How do you measure a leaf? Lay a leaf on a ruler. Measure it at the widest part of the leaf. Hosta leaves need to be conditioned for an exhibit. To condition a hosta leaf, cut the leaf in the early morning or late evening, when the leaves are full of water. Immediately put the leaf in hot water (about or up to 110° Fahrenheit). Then put the leaf in a cool place – a basement or a refrigerator. Let the leaf set for 12 to 24 hours to cool down. This will "harden" the leaf, so it will last longer in a display or arrangement. Hostas are judged on form, size, color and pattern, texture, condition and grooming, and substance. If you know the variety of your hosta or any of your other floral

Sen. Norm Coleman learns about NCTC's partnerships Monday

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

On Monday, Sen. Norm Coleman learned about partnerships between Northland Community and Technical College and local businesses. The Thief River Falls visit was part of a broader effort to learn about concerns that northwest Minnesota communities may have.

"You're blessed in this portion of the state to have some of the most innovative, forward-thinking companies in this region of the country," Coleman said to the 12 people who attended the meeting.

Coleman heard about a program between NCTC, Alexandria Technical College, Hennepin Technical College, Arctic Cat, Machinewell, Dayton/Rogers, ITW/Heartland and Toro. As part of that program, a total of 140 incumbent workers receive 120 hours of training, according to Jim Retka, manufacturing specialist with the college's Center for Outreach & Innovation.

Arctic Cat has enjoyed working with the college, said Dennis Buckley, an Arctic Cat employee who attended the meeting.

Rick Trontvet, who works in human resources at Digi-Key, detailed the company's relationship with NCTC. Digi-Key employees are able to earn electronics technology degrees at the college. They are paid for the time they spend in class.

Andrew Dahlen, an electronic technology/automated systems instructor, told Coleman about Robo Storm, a summer technology camp the college hosted for middle school and high school students. NCTC teamed up with Bemidji State University and six other technical colleges for the camp through a project called 360°. Machinewell, Arctic Cat, Digi-Key and Dean Foods contributed to the camp. "It's just been really nice to have these business partners," Dahlen said.

The challenge is now to leverage the partnerships that NCTC has with Arctic Cat and Digi-Key, and expand those partnerships, said Keri Hanson, vice president of academic affairs and student services.

NCTC President Dr. Anne Temte said the college plans to assemble a team this summer to study the marketing of NCTC to schools outside of this region. She said NCTC is running out of students from this region that would be able to attend the college. Temte anticipates that the marketing team will look into web-based promotions and that NCTC will speak with its business partners about promotional efforts.

It's a challenge to find funding for innovative, new programs, said Temte, who noted instructors and cutting-edge equipment cost money. Referring to possibilities for new programs at NCTC, Temte added that there is an interest in wind energy in this region and Worthington.

Coleman congratulated the college and its business partners on their work so far. "You have some

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

"Space ... the Final Frontier. These are the voyages of the starship Enterprise. Its five-year mission: To explore strange new worlds, to seek out new life and new civilizations, to boldly go where no man has gone before."

Shelley Steva and Gary Taylor didn't go on the starship Enterprise, but they did explore strange new worlds while attending space camp at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center in June.

"I've always wanted to be an astronaut, and I just love the idea of further exploration into space, going to Mars," said Taylor, a Lake Bronson resident who teaches life science at Tri-County School in Karlstad.

"I would recommend that other teachers do it," said Steva, a Thief River Falls resident who teaches life science, earth science, environmental science and biology at Red Lake County Central School in Oklee.

The two teachers participated in Honeywell Educators at Space Academy in Huntsville, Ala. Steva participated in what could be considered to be a beginner program, and Taylor participated in the advanced program as he attended the beginner program last year. When selected for the camps, teachers receive full scholarships. Students are also able to participate in a similar program designed for them. Taylor won the opportunity to send one of his students, Carrie Engen of Karlstad, to that program this year.

In order to be selected for the beginner program, Steva wrote a 500-word essay on how she would incorporate what she learned at the camp into her classes. For his part, Taylor filled out a questionnaire describing how he applied what he learned at last year's camp to his

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

The spotlight has never bothered Chantal Wilson.

Wilson made her performing debut at the young age of 3. She was singing "Sun, Sun, Mr. Golden Sun," and her grandfather came on stage in an attempt to ease any stage fright. But even at that age, Wilson was comfortable in front of a crowd and she kindly told her grandfather "Get off my stage, I'm OK grandpa."

Today, the 16-year-old Greenbush Middle River High School junior enjoys performing in front of a crowd. Whether it's dance, piano or pageant competition, the latest stage-grabbing endeavors, she enthusiastically enjoys performing in front of any sized crowd.

Wilson won the 2007 Miss Minnesota Outstanding Teen Competition that was held June 13-14 in Minneapolis. It was just her third pageant, and the win took her by surprise.

"There were girls down there that had been in close to 15 pageants," Wilson said. "I went down there for the experience – I never thought about winning. There are so many amazing girls down there competing."

Wilson's duties as Miss Minnesota Outstanding Teen mirror those of Miss Minnesota and Miss America. She will promote her platform, literacy, and she will participate in a series of public engagements, such as speaking at elementary schools and promoting the Bike for Books and Story Time programs. She is also preparing for the Miss America Outstanding Teen competition Aug. 7-11 in Orlando, Fla.

The Miss America Outstanding Teen competition series is the sister scholarship pageant to the Miss America Organization. It promotes scholastic achievement, creative accomplishment, healthy living and community involvement for America's teens.

To prepare for the national competition, Wilson has been practicing her stage walking and she is fine tuning her interview skills through mock interviews. Otherwise, she is taking her new role and the upcoming competition in stride. "I just want to go down there and be me and make Minnesota proud," Wilson said.

Wilson holds a 4.0 grade point average and keeps busy with Girl Scouts, Student Council, Friends of the Library, drama and her main performance passions, piano and dance. Outside of school, she also enjoys playing basketball or golfing with friends. "I'm just not that good at shooting," Wilson said.

She started playing piano 12 years ago and for the past four years she has studied under Marcia Knutila of Thief River Falls. Wilson gives Knutila a lot of credit

More chocolate recipes today. It must be the weather, but something chocolates tastes so good in the summertime. Here are some old favorites for you to try again:

If you like pudding, you'll love this:

COCOA CREAM TAPIOCA
2 3/4 cups milk
6 tablespoons chocolate ice cream syrup
1/4 cup quick cooking tapioca
3 tablespoons sugar
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon vanilla
Sweetened whipped cream

In medium saucepan, bring milk to a boil. Stir in chocolate syrup, tapioca, sugar and salt and cook over medium heat, stirring occasionally, until thickened. Remove from heat and stir in vanilla. Cool, stirring occasionally, about 30 minutes or until bottom of pan is cool to the touch. Place in individual serving dishes and press waxed paper directly on top surface. Refrigerate. To serve, garnish with whipped cream. Recipe serves five people.

Summertime is ice cream time. Make this delicious hot fudge sauce to pour on your favorite flavor and top with whipped cream, cherries and nuts for a glorious treat:

HOT FUDGE SAUCE
3/4 cup sugar
1/2 cup cocoa
2/3 cup evaporated milk
1/3 cup light corn syrup
1/3 cup butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla

Combine sugar and cocoa in medium saucepan. Blend in evaporated milk and syrup. Cook over low heat, stirring constantly, until mixture boils. Boil and stir for 1 minutes, remove from heat and add butter and vanilla. Serve warm. (You can refrigerate if desired. Reheat in saucepan over very low heat, stirring constantly.)

(Sherry says I pour mine in micro-safe pitcher and reheat in microwave.)

RICH NUT FUDGE
3 cups sugar
2/3 cup cocoa
1/8 teaspoon salt
1 1/2 cups milk
1/4 cup butter or margarine
1 teaspoon vanilla

Butter 8 or 9 inch square pan (we used to use a pie pan at home in the olden days). Set aside.

Combine sugar, cocoa and salt in heavy 4 quart saucepan. Stir in milk. Cook over medium heat, stirring constantly, until mixture comes to a full rolling boil. Boil without stirring to soft ball stage (234 degrees on candy thermometer), or until syrup, dropped into very cold water, forms a soft ball that flattens when removed from water with fingers.

Remove from heat and add butter and vanilla. DO NOT STIR. cool at room temperature to 110 degrees, lukewarm. Then beat by hand until fudge thickens and loses some of its gloss. Quickly add 1 cup walnuts, pecans or almonds and spread in prepared pan. Cool and then cut and enjoy.

No matter what recipe you use for chocolate chip cookies, bake them until barely browned and then let them stand on the sheet for about 3 minutes before removing to racks to cool fully. It took me about 30 years to learn how to make delicious chocolate chip cookies. I've also learned to not use a mixer - just a wooden spoon - and not do anything extra fancy. Here's a good recipe for you:

GREAT AMERICAN CHOCOLATE CHIP COOKIES
1 cup butter, softened
3/4 cup sugar
3/4 cup packed brown sugar
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
2 1/4 cups flour
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups semi sweet chocolate chips
1 cup chopped nuts, if desired

Cream butter, sugar, brown sugar and vanilla in large bowl. Add eggs and beat well. Combine flour, soda and salt and add to creamed mixture. Beat and then stir in chips and nuts.

Drop by teaspoonfuls onto parchment paper and bake at 375 degrees 8 to 10 minutes, until barely browned. Remove from oven and let stand on sheet for about 3 minutes, then remove to rack to cool. Sit down with a cold glass of milk and enjoy!

HAVING MORE RETIREMENT ACCOUNTS
AS HAVING MORE MONEY.
Many investors won't put all their retirement savings at a single broker because they believe it's far too risky. Actually, there may be more risk in having multiple accounts. Without a single focus, it can be difficult to keep track of your investments and to see if you're properly diversified.* At the very least, multiple accounts usually mean multiple fees.
Bringing your accounts to Edward Jones could help solve all that. Plus, one statement makes it easier to see if you're moving toward your goals.
To learn why consolidating your retirement accounts to Edward Jones makes sense, call your local investment representative today.

Scams continue to proliferate despite warnings.

Get rich scams have been around for centuries, but as Minnesota Attorney General Lori Swanson points out, due to advancements in inexpensive technology, financial scams are proliferating.

According to the United States Postal Inspection Service, U.S. citizens lose over $120 million per year to the foreign lottery scam and over $100 million per year to the Nigerian Advance Fee Fraud. According to the Federal Trade Commission, identity theft, which may include forms of phishing, fake check scams, foreign lottery scams and advance fee fraud, costs Americans over $50 billion per year.

Hardly a week goes by that The Times doesn't receive one or more (usually more) variations on several scams. In fact, the one I received on June 27 from Mr. Jide Offor, says I have been chosen to be their foreign partner, and that they will transfer the sum of $20 million into my back account if I cooperate with them. For my wonderful service, I will be given 30 precent of the total money. All I have to do is call the telephone number they provided at the bottom of the notice.

These offers always end up in the trash but apparently that doesn't always happen in other homes and businesses. I suspect people fail to identify these proposals as scams because they are naive, inexperienced Internet users, or are just unaware of the types of scams out there.

To help us out, Swanson identified the following "Top Five" scams: Foreign Lottery/Cashier's Check Scam, in which the victim is told they won a foreign lottery and need only to send a cashier's check for a certain amount to receive their winnings; the Excess Cashier's Check/Purchase Scam, in which the scam artist agrees to purchase an item from the victim, sending them a counterfeit cashier's check in an amount in excess of the purchase price; the Advance Fee Loan Scam, in which the consumer is asked to pay a "deposit," typically representing 10 percent of a purported loan, but once the scam artist receives the deposit, he or she is never heard from again; The "Nigerian" Scam, in which a victim is told that a Nigerian official needs to get money out of the country and offers to pay the victim a percentage for serving as an intermediary; and Phishing Scams, in which the scam artist poses as a legitimate company with which the victim has a relationship in order to dupe the victim into supplying Social Security numbers, bank account numbers and other information, which is then used to commit identity theft.

Recently, we received a press release from the Roseau County Sheriff's Department warning residents of a scam in which a resident received a letter in the mail saying he had won $50,000. It was a typical lottery scam.

As the Roseau County Sheriff's Department says, "Do not get involved in these get rich quick scams, they become rich and you don't."

Paulose visits with FBI, Red Lake Tribal Council

by Michael Meuers

On Tuesday, June 26, recently appointed U.S. Attorney Rachel Paulose visited with the Red Lake Tribal Council in the council chambers. Also visiting were FBI agents Ralph Boelter and Tom Jones.

Paulose not only came to the meeting to introduce herself but to hear from the Tribal Council about its concerns about alcohol and drug abuse, violence and gangs on the Reservation. She was also told how a lack of housing and unemployment affect these issues. One council member was concerned that there does not appear to be an option for long-term treatment for relatives and friends who may have a serious or life-threatening drug or alcohol problem.

Council members asked why there weren't more prosecutions for drug trafficking, sexual misconduct, violent crimes and gang activity. The council also wanted to know how Paulose and the FBI intended to address this problem.

Paulose said that, in spite of her short tenure, prosecutions are up in American Indian country and cited the most recent rounds of drug busts. "We are going after the drug organizations, the top of the chain," said Paulose. She also pointed out that although she has been a U.S. attorney for only a short time, she has more than 20 years of experience in prosecutions related to gun and drug trafficking, and she has worked in the Civil Rights Department.

Boelter, a lead FBI agent, said that the FBI headquartered in Bemidji has given a priority to Indian Country. "We are committed to investigating violent crime and drugs," said Boelter. He then pointed out the recent significant indictments.

Boelter encouraged the Red Lake Tribal Council to reconsider joining the Gang and Drug Task Force made up of federal, tribal and state law enforcement. Boelter agreed that council's concerns of sovereignty are legitimate, saying, "I assure the council that any state or other law enforcement officials are deputized as federal agents before ever entering Red Lake." Boelter also pointed out that "the only way to make an impact is to have a steady drug enforcement, that the more money drug traffickers make, the more power they have, and high unemployment provides fertile ground."

Several Tribal Council members present felt that they should indeed take another look at joining the Gang and Drug Task Force with assurances regarding sovereignty.

You never know what kind of weather fans are going to encounter when attending baseball games in northwestern Minnesota. High temperatures and humidity blanketed the area until June 27 when a Thief River Falls vs. Moorhead American Legion doubleheader at the Multi-Events Center forced spectators sitting in their lawn chairs to don jackets and wrap themselves in blankets.

Bandits shut down Crookston offense

Thief River Falls and Crookston originally planned to play 14 innings of baseball Monday. However, with both teams coming off a Friday-through-Sunday pitching-draining appearance at the East Grand Forks Classic, they agreed to turn the American Legion doubleheader to a single game – a contest shortened to five innings when the host Bandits won a ten-run rule 10-0 decision.

Cody Conners, brought up from the VFW 16-year-olds, pitched a two-hit shutout in his Legion debut. He struck out four and did not walk a batter.

"Cody got the job done in his first start of the summer," said Thief River Falls coach Courtney Skjerven.

Thief River Falls reached double figures in the run column by combining eight hits with eight walks and two hit batsmen.

"Their pitcher had a lot of trouble throwing strikes," mentioned Skjerven. "We came up with hits when we needed them."

Spencer Johnson and Michael Benedict both had two-hit games for the winners, while Lucas Genereux hit a two-run home run as Thief River Falls' record climbed to 10-5.

The Bandits had a chance to catch their breath with a five-day schedule break before taking on Roseau in a rare Sunday match-up. The 3 p.m. twinbill begins a stretch of four doubleheaders in six days for the Bandits, who will also host Detroit Lakes Monday at 5 p.m.; Perham Thursday at 5 p.m.; and Bemidji Friday at 4 p.m.

It will be a busy regular season-ending month of July for the Bandits, who play 10 doubleheaders – 20 games – in a 19-day span before the 2007 Ninth District Legion tournament begins Aug. 1 in Roseau.

"It will be nice to have a few days off to rest up after a long weekend," acknowledged Skjerven. "We play a lot of games in the next three weeks."

Bandits duplicate Perham championship at East Grand Forks...

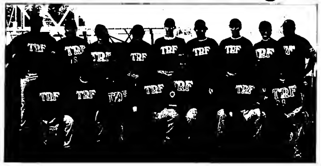
Back-to-back titles for TRF Legion

Sunday wins over area rivals East Grand Forks and Red Lake County sewed up a second straight weekend tournament title for the Thief River Falls American Legion baseball team.

The Courtney Skjerven-coached Bandits, coming off a championship performance at the June 23-24 Perham Wood Bat Invitational, edged Red Lake County 3-2 in the finals of the June 29-July 1 East Grand Forks Classic.

Thief River Falls beat North Dakota's Midway-Minto 2-0 and Grafton 10-3 and dropped a 4-1 decision to Canadian entry St. Boniface, Manitoba, in the Friday-Saturday pool play portion of the tournament.

Those results earned the Bandits a spot in the Sunday championship round semifinals, where they outscored host East Grand Forks 14-13.



That produced a title game showdown with Red Lake County, a 13-0 semifinal winner over St. Boniface.

Spencer Johnson was 2-for-3 at the plate and Lucas Genereux drove in two runs in the Bandits' championship game win. Three first inning runs gave Thief River Falls starting pitcher Thomas Heaton an early lead that he protected in a route-going, four-hit performance.

Red Lake County, staffed by players who were members of the Section 8A high school champion Red Lake County baseball team, gained a championship round semifinal spot with pool play results that included wins over Park River 18-3, Crookston 14-11 and Munich 7-4, along with a 10-0 loss to East Grand Forks.

A Thief River Falls run in the top of the seventh broke a 13-13 tie in a wild semifinals game against East Grand Forks. Michael Benedict,

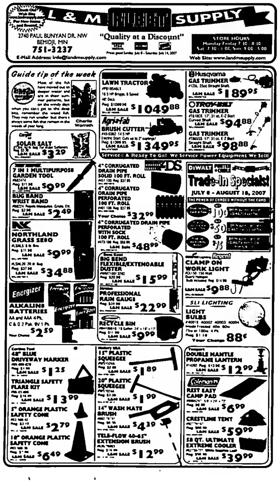
Seaversons compete in Idaho Ironman Triathlon

Marc, John and Erin Seaverson were in Idaho June 24 to compete in the fifth annual Ford Ironman Coeur d' Alene Triathlon.

The gruelling event features a 2.4-mile swim, 112-mile bike and a full 26.2-mile marathon run.

Marc and John, who are Lincoln High School graduates, competed in the male 30-34-year-old age group. Marc's time was 12 hours, 27 minutes, 48 seconds. Older brother John came in at 12:37.11.



Erin, Marc's wife, went 13:44.23 in the women's 30-34 age group.

It was the second Ironman competition for Marc and Erin and the first for John.

The Coeur d' Alene race had 2,197 finishers.

Ironman competition was introduced by a group of Navy Seals in Hawaii in 1978 when 15 entries tested their endurance and fitness. Today, word-wide Ironman events draw 22,000 athletes.

Entries have 17 hours, from 7 a.m. to midnight, to finish the event.

License application deadline July 27 for prairie chicken hunt

Hunters who wish to apply for one of 182 permits for the 2007 Minnesota prairie chicken season must do so by July 27. Applications are available wherever hunting and fishing licenses are sold.

The five-day prairie chicken season, which will begin on Oct. 20, is open to Minnesota residents only. Hunters will be charged a $4 application fee and may apply individually or in groups up to four. Prairie chicken licenses cost $20.

The hunt will be held in 11 prairie chicken quota areas in west-central Minnesota between Warren to the north and Breckenridge to the south. Up to 20 percent of the permits in each area will be issued to landowners or tenants of 40 acres or more of prairie or grassland property within the permit area for which they applied.

The season bag limit is two prairie chickens per hunter. Licensed prairie chicken hunters will also be allowed to take sharp-tailed grouse while legally hunting prairie chickens. Sharptails and prairie chickens are similar looking species and the general closure on taking sharp-tailed grouse by small game hunters in this area is to protect prairie chickens. Licensed prairie chicken hunters who wish to take sharptails must meet all regulations and licensing requirements for taking sharp-tailed grouse.

Minnesota's prairie chicken population has increased substantially and now stands at more than 1,760 adult males. The DNR expects more than four times that number of birds in the fall population. Prairie restoration and protection programs have helped stabilize the bird's population in recent years. The restoration of a regulated prairie chicken hunting season has helped build awareness and support for protecting and enhancing prairie and grassland habitats, according to the DNR.

Application worksheets and maps of permit areas are available on the at www.dnr.state.mn.us. Successful applicants will be notified by mail and must purchase their permit at an ELS vendor.

Entry fee for the nine-hole group will be $5. Entry free for the 18-hole competition will be $10. Entry fee includes lunch.

Elk hunt license deadline July 13

July 13 deadline to apply for the 2007 Minnesota elk hunt is approaching. The hunt is being held to reduce the elk population, located in a zone around Grygla from the present level of 55 animals.

There will be no bull permits offered this year as there were six bull elk mortalities documented in 2006. Two of the bulls were legally taken during the 2006 season, one was taken mistakenly during the antlerless season, one died presumably of brain worm and the remaining two were found dead from unknown causes.

Hunters may apply at any of the 1,800 statewide locations where hunting and fishing licenses are sold. Paper applications will not be accepted. Hunters may apply individually or in parties of two. There is a non-refundable application fee of $10 per hunter. Successful applicants will be notified by mail, and must purchase an elk license for $250. Each party will be authorized to harvest one elk.

The antlerless elk hunt seasons are Sept. 15-23 and Dec. 1-9. Applicants interested in the early hunt should select Area 10 while applicants choosing to apply for the late hunt should select Area 20. The early hunt will be a good opportunity to try calling a bull then taking a cow from the harem. During the late season, elk should be congregated in larger groups with snow on the ground, making tracking and trailing easier.

All successful applicants will be required to attend an orientation session at Thief Lake Wildlife Management Area headquarters prior to the hunt, and will be required to register any elk harvested at this location.

Some biological information relative to elk physical condition will be collected at the check station and elk will be tested for chronic wasting disease as and bovine tuberculosis as part of Minnesota's wild cervid surveillance program.

Rural Reflections

The comments published in this column are intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. They are written by independent columnists and do not represent the opinion of the staff or management of The Times/Northern Watch

The clothes I wear

I am not a flashy dresser although I am particular about the clothes I wear. Clothing and I have a relationship built mainly of practicality and type of fabric, finding something comfortable to wear. I will explain.

I have read that Einstein wore the same type of clothing every day, his closet had many sets of the same pants, jacket, tie and shirt. I never want to find out if this is true or not because I use it as an excuse for my own choice of clothing, which is a t-shirt and jeans. My wife picked up on this early in our marriage and soon I found what I would term "Sunday t-shirts" she'd purchased for me in our closet. These t-shirts normally have little or no printing on them and come in colors other than my favorites, white or black. Lately, Lisa has branched out into other areas of clothing for me to include underwear. It appears to be my own failing that my mother passed the baton of purchasing my underwear directly to my wife without my knowledge that there was even a race. Perhaps it's best as most of my underwear have tags that say "underoos" on them. (An obvious lie. I never wore children's clothing. I went from diapers directly to the husky and short aisle.) I really appreciate that Lisa looks out for me and buys me nice things, the only exception to this is her latest purchase of a blue, horizontally-striped t-shirt, which makes me look like a back-up singer for Elton John.

I will wear almost anything as long as it meets my wife's approval for looks and my approval for material. I rarely wear anything but cotton. I check each tag on all clothes and will reject anything that includes polyester – even if it's just a little to keep the collar nice. The one fly in this ointment is the uniform I wear at work. It's funny, we've made so many advances in life yet polyester is still the Holy Grail of uniforms. Polyester is the only fabric guaranteed to keep you hot in summer and cold in winter. At the last fitting for uniforms, I asked the salesman if I could have a cotton blend to which he puffed out his chest and replied, "I've been selling clothes since 1975 and there's nothing better than lycra." I love a little conflict (especially with haberdashers who act macho), so I moved a little closer to him (so he could clearly hear me) and replied, "Well I've been wearing clothes since 1965 and I like cotton." Apparently, none of his prior customers had challenged his lycra "gambit," so he was a little dumbfounded. I let him off the hook and asked to see what he had in a "short and husky."

Formal ceremonies cause fear deep inside my person. I have no problems speaking in front of a crowd, but I dread finding clothes for the occasion. Dress clothes are still built in proportions based on the men who never received proper nutrition during the time of the Depression. I have received plenty of proper nutrition, so in order for my pants to fit my legs, I need large pants. I normally split the seams on dress pants, so when I wear them, I sit and move carefully like I know I'm not going to actually win the Miss America pageant, but I'd really like to get Miss Congeniality.

In the end, it's not so much the clothes on the outside as it is the person on the inside. I think the bolt of cloth from which your character is cut trumps that which your clothes are cut from any day of the week, unless that material is polyester; godless, man-made, itchy, hot and cold polyester.

It's time to control CRP weeds

The Kittson County Farm Service Agency reminds all Conservation Reserve Program participants of the importance of the timely control of weeds (thistle and other undesirable plants) on acreage enrolled in the program. To comply with noxious weed and cover provisions, CRP participants must control or eradicate weeds prior to the plant maturing.

Cover maintenance is allowed during the primary nesting season (June 1 - Aug. 1). Weed control measures completed during the nesting season should be limited to spot treatment of acres infested. The intent of spot treatment is to minimize damage to nesting wildlife and habitat.

Historically, a high majority of producers completed CRP maintenance with mowing. Last year, two new broadleaf chemicals for weed control on CRP were introduced. Many producers sprayed CRP to control broadleaf weeds. The chemical weed control results were excellent and much improved over the traditional chemicals used for weed control in the past. University of Minnesota weed control test plots have found the new chemicals are providing over 90 percent reduction in thistles. With increases in fuel and a limited number of vendors providing mowing services, more producers appear to be electing chemical weed control options. The Kittson County Farm Service Agency office has the U of M test result for CRP chemical test plots. If you would like to review the information, feel free to stop by for a copy. CRP participants interested in chemical weed control should visit with a local agronomist regarding chemical selection and application. As with any chemical, timely and proper application are critical for effective control. Chemicals used for weed control on CRP will also impact any covers, alfalfas, forbs, and flowers.

CRP participants should be aware that inspections this year will begin in late July and continue through September. The timing of 2007 inspections will not allow for weed control warnings to be provided. The inspections are done for compliance purposes; if an inspection finds mature weeds that will go to seed, a violation notification will be issued.

Cover/weed violations will result in either termination of the contract or assessment of a CRP payment reduction. The Minnesota FSA Committee recently announced that the payment reduction for CRP weed violations in the state would be $30 per acre. The County Committee has responsibility to review all CRP weed/cover to determine good faith or lack of good faith. If good faith is determined for a violation, the standard $30-per-acre payment reduction will be applied on the acres determined in violation. If good faith cannot be determined, the CRP contract acreage in violation would be terminated. Termination requires refunding of all previously issued payments on the contract with interest, plus liquidated damages.

for her success.

"Marcia Knuttila is an excellent teacher and she is one of my favorite persons in the world," Wilson said. "A piano lesson with her is not only a piano lesson, but a lesson in life."

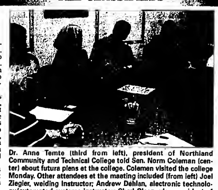
Wilson will again play piano for the talent portion of the Miss America Outstanding Teen competition. She will perform Frederic Chopin's Ballade in A-Flat Major.

Wilson said the 10-minute piece had to be cut to two minutes to fit into the time allotted for performances. Wilson and Knuttila composed a two-minute version that Wilson says is perfect for her talent performance. "It starts slowly and softly, and finishes fast and driving."

Talent accounts for the largest portion, 35 percent, of each contestant's score. Other areas contributing to a contestant's overall score are interview, 30 percent; poise in evening gown, 15 percent; athletic wear, 10 percent; academics, 5 percent; and on-stage question and answer, 5 percent.

The athletic wear competition replaces the traditional swimsuit competition. Wilson said it is more than just wearing fitness apparel. Each contestant's fitness wear should appropriately match the activity in which she is participating. A volleyball player would wear volleyball shorts and shirt. For Wilson, that means wearing a tutu and pointe shoes to represent her activity, en pointe ballet and professional dance study.

Along with her musical background, Wilson has danced for 12 years and dancing was her talent when she won her first pageant, the Miss Greenbush Centennial Pageant in 2005. She enjoys both performing arts.



Besides preparing for the Miss America Outstanding Teen competition, Wilson is continuing her fine arts studies and she is taking Spanish 3. She plans to take post-secondary class at Northland Community and Technical College starting in the spring semester of 2008.

She is the daughter of Ward and Dawn Wilson of Greenbush and she is set to graduate from Greenbush-Middle River High School in 2009. Following high school, she plans to attend college and later, law school. She still has two years to choose a school, where she currently plans to major in political science, and possibly minor in music performance.

During her reign as Miss Minnesota Outstanding Teen, Wilson hopes to help the northwest Minnesota communities that have helped her get where she is. She has already started planning a way to implement the national platform, the "Dream Academy," by creating a mentoring program in area high schools that connects high-school students to elementary students.

She is also encouraging area girls to participate in scholarship pageant programs like Miss Minnesota Outstanding Teen.

"Any girls who are considering this program should go for it," Wilson said. "Even if you don't win, it's still a lot of fun and it is an extremely positive experience – it has been for me."

Dr. Anne Temte (third from left), president of Northland Community and Technical College told Sen. Norm Coleman (center) about future plans at the college. Coleman visited the college Monday. Other attendees at the meeting included (from left) Joel Ziegler, welding instructor; Andrew Dahlen, electronic technology/automated systems instructor; Shari Olson, vice president of planning and administration services; and Dennis Buckley, an Arctic Cat representative.

exhibits, put the name on the entry tag. This makes it more interesting for everyone as they view exhibits.

Do you enjoy setting a table with unique accessories for a special event? Now, you can enter a table setting at the fair. Entries will be taken in the Needlework Department. An entry is one place setting with a centerpiece set up by the exhibitor on 30 inches of a long table. A tablecloth, placemat or napkin should be used. Candles, flowers and objects may be used to enhance the appearance. Flatware is optional. Exhibits will be judged on originality, theme, appearance and balance. Exhibitors may enter one table setting in each lot. Lots are child's birthday, patriotic, Christmas, other holiday or any other.

If not taken during the actual event, photos will be taken at the following times and places:

Photos of 4-H exhibit grand champion award winners in the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center, will be taken at 4 p.m. on Thursday, July 12. 4-H livestock division photos will be taken during the event, if possible. Make-up photos for individuals unable to be at the arena during the time scheduled for the photograph will be at 11:30 a.m. on Saturday in the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center.

Photos of open class exhibit grand champion award winners will be taken at 1 p.m. on Saturday, July 14. Photos of open class livestock grand champions will be taken during the event, if possible.

Should I pick up this piece of candy? It was a question that some kids may have asked themselves Wednesday during Plummer's July 4th Celebration Parade.

BlackLance said lawn mowers in the stock lawn mower division could be used to mow lawn in the morning and race in the evening. The only modifications involve securing the lawn mower's deck so it doesn't fall off, and for safety reasons, removing the blades.

The "Outlaw" division involves anything modified in any way, such as changing the carburetion, gears or anything that will make it faster. In this division, the United States Lawn Mower Racing Association rules are followed.

Racers participating in Grass Wackers National Lawn Mower Racing will be racing around an oval, and a Le Mans-style course. Depending upon the division and the lawn mower, BlackLance said the speeds could range from 25 to 75 miles per hour.

To insert a little more interest and fun into the event, local celebrities will be participating in drag racing with lawn mowers.

No prize money is awarded in the Grass Wackers National Lawn Mower Racing. The idea behind lawn mower racing is to keep it inexpensive so there is no prize money, said BlackLance. Winners will receive trophies and bragging rights. There will be trophies for all six divisions.

It should be interesting. He said he has watched lawn mower racing before. They can be seen on ESPN 2. BlackLance said lawn mower racing has taken place in Park Rapids.

BlackLance said he and his youngest son built a lawn mower racer. He said they bought it on a Thursday, and worked on it on Friday and Saturday. They also put decals on it to make it look sharp. It took a little work, he said, but it was fun. In all, he said they put about $200 into it.

Their lawn mower racer will be on display at Pennington stores this week (depending on weather), and hopefully other stores in the community in the near future to generate more interest in the event. At the display, rules and information about the race will be distributed. Rules can also be found in the Pennington County Fair Premium

BlackLance said he has received a lot of telephone calls regarding the event. He said he has also been told there has been a run on older riding lawn mowers, lately.

The entry for racers is $10 per division or $20 on day of race. Spectators can either purchase a Grand Pass, which allows spectators to attend all of the grandstand events, or pay at the gate.

It will be a free for all death match Thursday, July 12 during the Pennington County Fair Frag Fest '07, a Halo 2 tournament, will be held that evening from 6 to 9 p.m. at Ralph Engelstad Arena. Halo 2 [illegible] an Xbox game features a genetically-engineered super soldier that fights the Covenant in an attempt to save humankind. Young and old are welcome to compete in the tournament.

Andrew Cardinal, 15, is organizing the tournament with the help of his parents, Bob and Anita. Andrew worked on a similar tournament last year in Marshall County with Scott Peters. "I thought I might as well try it here in Pennington County," said Andrew, who noted the tournament went well in Marshall County.

At the tournament, no motion detectors will be allowed, and all maps will be on original Halo 2. The winner will be the best player of three matches. Games will be 12 minutes in length with 30 kills. The player will have random weapons. Players and spectators will refrain from swearing. Players can bring controllers. Players must try to be friendly to others and the press. Player rules will be posted.

Prizes will be awarded in the form of t-shirts, a GameStop gift card and a first place trophy.

Grandstand attractions

The 106th Annual Pennington County Fair promises to thrill and entertain spectators.

Grandstand attractions this year include the Pennington County Grass Wacker Nationals lawn mower Racing starting at 6:30 p.m. on Wednesday, a concert by Back Behind the Barn Boys starting at 9 p.m. on Thursday, Thunder on Hooves Professional Bull Riding at 7 p.m. on Friday and Saturday, and the St. Hilaire Lions Demolition Derby at 5 p.m. on Sunday. (More information about the bullride will be available in the next edition of The Thief River Falls Times.)

This year's midway attractions will be provided by Todd Armstrong Shows. Games, food, prizes, rides and shows are all a part of the Todd Armstrong Shows Carnival.

Grand Passes, which admit the holder to the attractions taking place in front of the grandstand, may be purchased in advance. The advance ticket price for adults is $40, and $20 for children, age 12 and under. The Grand Pass is good for admission to all six grandstand events.

Advance Grandstand Pass tickets can be purchased at Pennington Square, Pennington Main, Petro Pumper and Erl's Market in Thief River Falls, the Kruse In in St. Hilaire, Eagle Square in Red Lake Falls, and Goodridge Cenex in Goodridge, or call the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce at 681-3720.

On the midway, advance sales specials include the Day Pass for $15, and the popular Mega Ride Pass for $15. Advance sale tickets are available until noon on Wednesday, July 11, at the following locations: Arnold Avenue Store, Erl's Market, Pennington Square BP, Amoco 24, Kum & Go, Pennington Main, Goodridge Cenex, Kruse In, Petro Pumper, SuperOne Foods and Hugo's.

Rides for kids under 38 inches

Last year at the Pennington County Fair, there were a few rides available for the children under the height of 38 inches. Carla Hruby and Deb Howe felt a need to have something special set up for this population in the air-conditioned Ralph Engelstad Arena. These women wanted to make this a priority for the 2007 fair. Conducting research, this team found a business in the Fargo, N.D., area that specializes in providing giant, inflatable, indoor activity centers for children of all ages.

Since this activity had not been included in the 2007 fair budget, letters were sent to area businesses seeking financial support. For this to be an all family affair Hruby and Howe felt the need to provide safe, age-appropriate activities for this age group. The Thief River Falls Lions Club was first to respond to the request. After hearing the proposal for the project, the Lions Club elected to sponsor this event. Thus, Lions Park at the Fair was born. Northwest Beverage and the Thief River Falls Eagles Club also gave generous donations to assist in this project.

Lions Park at the Fair will be in operation Friday, July 13 through Sunday, July 15 from the hours of 12 to 5 p.m. The daily cost for each child will be $5. Children can participate in these activities from either one to five hours for that cost. A parent signature will be expected when his or her child/children enter and exit the activity center. Additional assistance will be provided by Lincoln High School National Honor Society students.

Bandshell entertainers

A highlight of the Pennington County Fair is the free entertainment provided to spectators at the bandshell. This year's lineup promises to keep everyone entertained.

The line-up includes The Cathy Erickson Band, the Little Bohemian Band, Magic By Nick, Knight Rider, Impulse, Beau Jo and the Bandits, and Beats Working.

A complete schedule of when these performers will be on the stage appears in the 2007 Pennington County Fair Premium list.

To spectators, the entertainment is free, but the events are really subsidized by sales of the annual Pennington County Fair Raffle. For a $10 donation, ticket holders have a chance at a 2008 Arctic Cat Prowler, a 50-inch HD television and much more. The drawing for this event will be conducted at 9:30 p.m. on Sunday, July 15.

Fireworks display

A huge fireworks display will light up the northern skies over Thief River Falls and Pennington County on Saturday, July 14. The annual fireworks display, which is sponsored by the Todd Armstrong Shows and Pennington County Fair Board, will take place at about 10 p.m.

Parade

The theme of the 2007 Pennington County Fair is "Our Fair Feels Like Heaven in 2007." Parade spectators might look for how floats in this year's parade matches up with the theme. They might also be looking for originality or excellence. If interest is anything like it has been in past years, this year's parade promises to give spectators a large choice of floats.

Line-up for the parade begins at 8:30 a.m. and the parade begins at about 10 a.m. The parade participants will start at the corner of Brooks Avenue and First Street, proceed down First Street to Knight Avenue, turn north on Knight Avenue and proceed to Fourth Street, where they will turn west and proceed to the Pennington County Fairgrounds.

Six awards will be presented - first, second and third for Crowds Choice, Best Farm Implement, Best Vintage Car, and Most Original.

Wall of Shame

The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources Turn in Poachers Program will display a Wall of Shame. This display will feature mounts of illegally taken wild game, mainly deer. The display can be seen July 12, 13 and 14 in the Ralph Engelstad Arena.

LSS seeks adoptive parents

Have you, or someone you know, ever considered expanding your family through adoption? Lutheran Social Service of Minnesota will hold a free adoption information meeting on Monday, July 16 from 6:30 to 8 p.m. in room 4 of the Clay County Family Service Center, 715 N. 11th St., Moorhead. The orientation is open to anyone interested in learning more about adoption. Walk-ins are welcome.

LSS staff will be on hand to describe the adoption process, the costs involved, and the children available through all of its adoption programs. LSS places children from Minnesota as well as from many countries around the world, to include Guatemala, Colombia, Vietnam and China.

To register, please call (218) 236-1494, ext. 207 or ext. 215. For more information, visit www.minnesotaadoption.org.

Space ... the New Frontier

classes. He also had to describe how he tried to promote the program to his fellow teachers. Taylor did a good job promoting the camp because Steva learned about the program from him.

Shelley Steva

Steva learned more about being an astronaut during her portion of the program. Participants were divided into teams. Each team of about 16 campers ate and socialized together, much like real-life astronauts do. Steva's team was called Team Inspiration. Her team members ranged in age from 22 to 72. Steva was one of three team members from Minnesota.

"We did two missions," said Steva. "In other words, we were flying the space shuttle." They simulated launching and landing the space shuttle, conducting space walks, and working on experiments on the space station. Steva's time was spent in mission control and conducting experiments in the space station.

There were a few moments when Steva probably questioned why she decided to participate in the camp. For one activity, the teachers were suspended by ropes above a lake. "While it's perfectly safe, you're saying in your head, 'You're 50 feet above [the water],'" recalled Steva, who noted the teachers were then splashed into the water to simulate a landing that could occur.

For another activity, they were placed in what Steva described as an open container. Camp officials then intentionally sunk the container. Team members then had to swim out of the container in order to be rescued.

Gory Taylor

"I was concerned," said Steva. "The physical aspect was almost scary for me."

Steva said the space camp was fairly realistic; however, real-life astronauts train for three years. Steva and her team members had a 1½ hour orientation before each of their two missions.

The teachers were also given information about space and learned how they could use that information in their classes. For one lesson, the teachers had to try to find a way to raise food on the moon. "Basically, what's nice about it is they're not telling you what to do," said Steva. "You're using a lot of problem-solving skills and things you'd like your students to be able to do as well."

Steva enjoyed herself and may apply for the advanced program in the future. She may learn more about that program from Taylor. While Steva went through the beginner program June 18-29, Taylor was participating in the advanced program.

Teachers who participate in the beginner program are eligible for the advanced program; however, they have to be selected for that program after filling out questionnaires. Taylor was among 35 teachers from across the world who participated in the advanced program in late June. They underwent training for four days at the Kennedy Space Center in Florida. The remainder of their training was held at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center in Huntsville.

"My favorite part is we did underwater scuba training like the astronauts do," said Taylor, who described it as both invigorating and scary at the same time. "We did engineering and design work. We had to design and program robots, Lego robots."

The teachers also designed a heat shield system and wrote science fiction stories. They talked to a few astronauts about their experiences in space as well. Taylor especially enjoyed listening to former aerospace engineer Homer Hickam.

Throughout his time at the camp, Taylor learned many lessons that he could use in his classroom. As he put it, one of his students could go to the moon or to Mars.

really unique things going on here," he said. Coleman added that the U.S. needs more productive, better trained workers to compete with other countries.

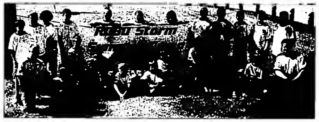
Students attend first annual ROBO Storm Camp

Twenty-two middle-school-aged students from throughout northwest Minnesota attended the first annual ROBO Storm Camp at Northland Community and Technical College on June 20 and 21.

Each student participant was required to enter a technology fair exhibit, which was then judged. The winners of the Technology Fair were: first place: Kyle Thibert from Lafayette High School, Red Lake Falls; second place: Megan Coltom, a Strathcona resident who attends Badger High School; and third place: Anthony Martin from Franklin Middle School, Thief River Falls.

During the ROBO Storm camp, participants learned how to assemble robots, worked the various sensors in tandem, and then used computer programming skills to enable the robot to function.



Andrew Dahlen, a camp director, said the kids did a phenomenal job. "This camp was all about getting young people interested in math and science," said Dahlen, an automated systems instructor at NCTC. Dahlen believes that in the future, math and science skills will become more important. He said, "The careers and jobs that will be available to these students, will all be based on the skills they used these past two days at the camp."

In addition to presenting technology fair exhibits, building and programming and competing with Lego Mindstorm Robots, the students also toured the Arctic Cat factory to see its automated equipment and learn more about its highly specialized careers.

Event sponsors included NCTC, Bemidji State University and six community and technical colleges that teamed together as part of a Center of Excellence in Manufacturing and Applied Engineering, also known as 360°. The goal of 360° is to provide new educational routes for students to pursue while bringing industry and education together to help the country stay competitive on a global scale. For more information about 360°, log onto www.360mn.org.

NCTC thanks the local businesses and organizations that contributed to the success of the summer camp and technology fair: 360° – the Center of Excellence in Manufacturing and Applied Engineering that helped fund the camp; Machinewell of Grygla and Digi-Key Inc. of Thief River Falls for setting up booths and donating door prizes; Dean Foods for its donation of prizes; and Arctic Cat for giving a tour of the robotics equipment in the plant.

Dahlen and Joel Ziegler, faculty members of the Automated Systems program, did a phenomenal job facilitating the camp and keeping students engaged in the robotics projects. The staff from the Center for Outreach & Innovation (David Jobe, Lisa Krause, Kirsten Melby and Jim Retka) coordinated the camp, chaperoned evening activities, judged the Technology Fair, and involved businesses in the event.

Twenty-two students attended the first annual ROBO Storm Camp on June 20 and 21 at Northland Community and Technical College in Thief River Falls. They included (front row) Anthony Martin, Matthew Griggs, Marcus Langevin, Ein Cilbum, Garrett Anhom, Megan Coltom, Robert Rogalla, Zach Vollen; (middle row) Jim Retka (NCTC), Bradley Sustad, Logan Alten, Nicholas Wilson, David Erickson, Denny Godin; (back row) Ryan Hutton, Anthony Lorenson, Willie Nikunen, Blake Sustad, Joel Ziegler (NCTC), Lisa Krause (NCTC), Kirsten Melby (NCTC), Andrew Dahlen (NCTC), Joey Zavieke, Jackson Lindom, Taylor Johnson, Kyle Thibert and Daniel Weege. DNR and Kittson County to discuss legal drainage

Hallock - A meeting will be held Tuesday, July 17 at the Kittson County Courthouse in Hallock to "discuss possible wetland violations which may have occurred during a legal ditch maintenance project on State Ditch 72 in 2006." The meeting will be held in the upstairs meeting room. It is open to the public.

"In 2006, the State Ditch 72 Joint Ditch Authority cleaned out portions of three laterals on the SD 72 system in Kittson and Roseau counties. The work involved the removal of beaver dams, cattails and brush from these ditches. Spoil was placed within the ditch right of way. The original grade and cross sections were not altered.

"The Minnesota Department of Natural Resources has indicated that this work possibly affected some adjacent wetland and this could be a Wetland Conservation Act violation." - Kittson County Enterprise, July 11, 2007

County Board slates hearing on new dryer at MarKit Grain

Warren - "A public hearing on a conditional use permit for adding a grain dryer at the MarKit County Grain facility north of Argyle was set for 1 p.m. Tuesday at the Marshall Co. Courthouse. Before setting the hearing, the Marshall Co. Board of Commissioners heard a presentation Tuesday, July 3 about the facility expansion from Dwight Spear, North Dakota regional operations superintendent for Archer Daniels Midland Company." - Warren Sheaf, July 11, 2007

Fosston native climbs Mt. Kilimanjaro

Fosston - "For most people, the ingredients for an ideal vacation usually include comfortable accommodations surrounded by beautiful scenery, entertainment and/or relatives and friends. The main focus is rest and relaxation.

"In December 2006, Fosston native Kerri (Manecke) Kolstad and her husband, Dave, left their comfortable home in White Bear Lake and headed to the rough accommodations of a Tanzanian mountain base camp. ... They climbed the largest free-standing mountain in the World – Kilimanjaro." - The 13 Towns of Fosston, July 10, 2007, by Dan Kindall

Anni Daedlow named "Outstanding Alumnus"

Warroad - At this year's Warroad High School Alumni Banquet July 3, the Warroad High School Outstanding Alumnus Award was presented. "This year, the Warroad Alumni Association presented the Class of 1967's Anni Daedlow with this award – and it came as quite a shock to the recipient." - Warroad Pioneer, July 11, 2007, by Holly Harrison

North to Alaska with the Roseau biker

Roseau - "If he were a mountain climber, Randy Olson, 49, would make every attempt to scale Mt. Everest. Reaching the peak isn't necessary. Making the climb is, but climbing mountains isn't his game. Riding bike is.

"The owner of Step Ahead Therapy in Roseau flew to Anchorage, Alaska, on May 26, planning to pedal all the way back to Roseau. He didn't complete his mission, but it was quite the journey." - Roseau Times-Region, July 7, 2007, by Jeff Olsen

TRF Council takes a look at REA budget

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

More events are being held at Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls. Parks and Recreation Director Madelyn Vigen repeated that message several times to the Thief River Falls City Council on Tuesday night.

"It's been very busy, and it's honestly, I know, an expensive building. We are trying our very, very best to make things go in a positive direction, but it costs a lot to maintain," Vigen said.

Vigen spoke to council members about the proposed 2008 budgets for REA, the Huck Olson Memorial Civic Center, and parks and recreation. She said she recently learned that Section 8AA will host two semifinal basketball games at REA in 2008. REA will also host the Prowler Wrestling Invitational in 2008. Both events were held elsewhere in 2007. Arctic Cat is currently contemplating the possibility of holding a nine- or 10-day dealer event at REA in 2008.

The proposed 2008 budgets list $834,895 in expenses for REA, which is a decrease of $4,154 from the 2007 budget, and $108,550 in expenses for the HOMCC, which is a decrease of $595 from the 2007 budget. Proposed revenue for both buildings is listed at $599,483, which is an increase of $70,372 from the 2007 budget. Revenue for the Imperial Room is listed at $13,000.

REA is an asset to Thief River Falls, noted council member Odette Bendickson. She added that if the arenas broke even financially, the council would be delighted.

Council member Elvera Cullen said REA brings people to Thief River Falls and those people, in turn, spend money in Thief River

Two charged after transporting body

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

Two people have been charged with willful disturbance of a dead body after they allegedly placed a dead child's body into a plastic tote and transported the 2-year-old to Minnesota in February.

The child's mother, Jody Lynn Weaver, 38, Grand Forks, N.D., was charged Wednesday in Grand Forks County District Court with two felony counts of abuse and neglect of a child, and one count each of willful disturbance of a dead body and failure to report a death.

The latter two charges are Class A and Class B misdemeanors, respectively. The two counts of felony abuse stem from Weaver's alleged failure to "provide proper parental care or control as required by law, or other care or control necessary for the physical, mental or emotional health of two minor children, by allowing a deceased body to decompose in the minors' dwelling for approximately two weeks," according to a press release from the Grand Forks County State's Attorney's Office.

Weaver's boyfriend, Clarence Roger Smith of Grygla, has been charged with a Class A misdemeanor of willful disturbance of a dead body and a Class B misdemeanor of failure to report a death.

"It's unlikely [that other charges will be filed]," said M. Jason McCarthy, an assistant Grand Forks County state's attorney, on Thursday. He added that Destiny Weaver's cause of death couldn't be determined.

An initial investigation found that Destiny Weaver had "flu-like symptoms in the days prior to her death," according to a press release issued by the Grand Forks Police Department in February.

Marshall Co. Fair starts July 25

What better way to celebrate the 100th anniversary of the Marshall County Fair than to load up on a lot of free entertainment? And, it's true, the fair, lined up for Wednesday-Sunday, July 25-29, at the fairgrounds in Warren, features such a huge variety of entertainment on the free stage that everyone will be giving a big thumbs up to this year's theme, "A Century of Family Fun!"

Planning for the centennial fair started well over a year ago. When fair board members asked each other what they would most like to see, the consensus was improvements to fairground buildings, said Dwight Anderson, secretary of the fair board. As a result, what most visitors to this year's fair are likely to notice first are two new buildings, one for horses and the other for swine, sheep, goats, poultry and rabbits.

In keeping with the centennial theme, the fair board feels very fortunate to be hosting the Commanding General's Mounted Color Guard, which is attached to the U.S. Army 1st Infantry Division at Ft. Riley, Kan. This cavalry unit made up of specially assigned active duty soldiers uses 1860s period dress. Its historical array includes an 1871 wagon pulled by mules. In addition to free performances at 8 p.m. Wednesday, 6 p.m. Thursday and Friday, 5 p.m. Saturday and 11 a.m. Sunday in the horse arena, the Commanding General's Mounted Color Guard will lead this year's fair kickoff parade from downtown Warren to the fairgrounds, starting at 6:30 p.m. Wednesday.

Many Free Acts

The fair's free stage has been very popular in the past, and this year, Anderson said, it has continued to get better, even expanding to the grandstand. Top acts in the line-up of free entertainment this year are two grandstand events: the comedy team of Williams & Ree at 8:30 p.m. Friday, preceded by Monroe Crossing, the Midwest's premiere bluegrass and gospel quintet, at 6

Environmental group sues Kittson County

The Minnesota Center for Environmental Advocacy (MCEA) alleges in a lawsuit that Kittson County, its Board of Commissioners, and Glenn Anderson Construction illegally drained some wetlands and filled others in the Beaches Lake Wildlife Management Area (WMA), even though they had none of the proper permits from state and federal agencies to do so.

Roger Malm, Kittson County Attorney, said he hasn't seen the complaint yet, but understands that it's rather lengthy. Malm said he needs to see what they're claiming before responding.

Malm said he found it a little interesting that MCEA announced the filing of the lawsuit after a meeting between Kittson County and MCEA had been scheduled for next Tuesday.

MCEA, the St. Paul-based non-profit environmental advocacy organization filed the lawsuit this week under the Minnesota Environmental Rights Act, saying the excavation of four ditches in and around the WMA has caused extensive damage to Juneberry Ridge Fen and other outstanding quality wetlands in the area. The fen, a unique groundwater-fed wetland, provides

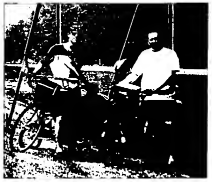
Pennies for Part-Timers bike tour raises $4,235

After 45 days of peddling to raise money for part-time students who plan to attend Northland Community and Technical College, Art Instructor John Leopold along with students April Wollin of Greenbush, and Andy Kalsnes of Thief River Falls, completed their 1720 mile bicycle journey from Mobile, Ala., to Thief River Falls, on Saturday, July 7.

To celebrate their homecoming, the Northland College Foundation held a welcome back reception for the bicyclists on Monday, July 9, at the NCTC Commons.

"People have been asking me how it feels, having made it all that way," said Leopold. "Well, it feels great to be home and in familiar surroundings with faces that I recognize, and people I know and care about. As for the experience, I have learned that achievement is its own reward, and finishing is just one small part of the overall experience. It was the journey itself that was important, not just finishing. I can say definitively that whoever said that 'the person who begins the journey is not the same person who finishes it' was absolutely correct."



"I'm certain that Andy and April will agree with me when I say that the trip was absolutely worth every peddle stroke, every early morning, every swallowed insect, every discomfort and irritation. Meeting all the great people that we did, and experiencing the regions of the country as we did was an excellent adventure. I'm also certain that there are still many unforeseen benefits waiting to reveal themselves to us in the months and years to come," Leopold said.

The Pennies for Part-Timers scholarship tour total mileage to date is 1720 miles or [illegible] peddle strokes. Leopold also plans to ride to the Canadian border, which should bring that to 1790 miles, and he intends to continue riding locally until he brings that total to an even 2000 miles.

"I want to thank our sponsors, friends made along the way, loved ones and family waiting patiently at home, all the great people that offered us their encouragement, and of course those people that followed along by reading the Blog that I updated daily on the NCTC Web site."

"It's easy to forget amid all the excitement that our main purpose in making this journey was to raise funds for part-time student scholarships and to raise awareness for these under-represented students in our communities," said Leopold.

It's still not too late for individuals to contribute to the Pennies for Part-Timers Scholarship fund. Just contact the Northland College Foundation and ask for a pledge form by calling (218) 681-[illegible]

Time for a picnic or a block party - today we have recipes for good eats for everybody.

SLOW COOKER BARBECUE BEEF
1 sirloin tip roast (3 pounds) cut into large chunks
3 celery ribs, chopped
1 large onion, chopped
1 medium green pepper, chopped
1 cup ketchup
1 (6 ounce) can tomato paste
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
1/4 cup cider vinegar
3 tablespoons chili powder
2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons molasses
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons Worcestershire sauce
1 teaspoon ground mustard

Place beef in 5 quart slow cooker. Add celery, onion and green pepper.

In a bowl, combine ketchup, tomato paste, brown sugar, vinegar, chili powder, lemon juice, molasses, salt, Worcestershire and mustard. Pour over beef mixture.

Cover and cook on low for 8-9 hours or until meat is tender. Skim fat from cooking juices if necessary. Shred beef.

Serve on rolls, using a slotted spoon to place meat on rolls.

HEARTY BAKED BEANS
1 pound ground beef
2 large onions, chopped
3/4 pound sliced bacon, cooked and crumbled
4 (15 ounces each) cans pork & beans
1 (18 ounce) bottle honey barbecue sauce
1 (16 ounce) can kidney beans, rinsed and drained
1 (15 ounce) can lima beans, rinsed and drained
1 (15 ounce) black beans, rinsed and drained
1/2 cup packed brown sugar
3 tablespoons cider vinegar
1 tablespoon liquid smoke (if desired)
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon ginger

In large skillet cook beef and onions over medium heat until meat is no longer pink. Drain.

Place in 5 quart Dutch oven and stir in remaining ingredients. Cover and bake at 350 degrees for 1 hour or until heated through. Recipe serves 18-20 people.

Can't have a party or a picnic without this - and this is as close to my grandma's recipe that I've seen:

DILLY POTATO SALAD
3 pounds potatoes (about 8 medium)
6 hard cooked eggs, chopped
3 celery ribs, chopped
6 green onions, chopped
2 medium dill pickles, finely chopped
1 cup mayonnaise
3/4 cup sour cream
1/4 cup dill pickle juice
4-1/2 teaspoons mustard
1 teaspoon celery seed
1 teaspoon salt
1/2 teaspoon pepper
Leaf lettuce from your garden

Place potatoes in a Dutch oven and cover with water. Bring to a boil. Reduce heat, cover and simmer for 20-30 minutes or until fork tender. Drain and cool.

Peel and cube potatoes. Place in large bowl. Add eggs, celery, onions and pickles.

In small bowl, combine mayonnaise, sour cream, pickle juice, mustard, celery seed, salt and pepper. Pour over potato mixture and mix well.

Cover and refrigerate at least 4 hours. Serve in a pretty lettuce-lined bowl - or not. Recipes serves 10-12 people.

PASTA SALAD
1 (12 ounce) package tricolor spiral pasta
1 (10 ounce) package refrigerated tortellini
1 (7 ounce) jar marinated artichoke hearts, undrained
1/2 pound fresh broccoli florets (1-3/4 cups)
12 ounces provolone cheese, cubed
12 ounces hard salami, cubed
1 medium sweet red pepper, chopped
1 medium green pepper, chopped
1 (15 ounce) can garbanzo beans or chickpeas, rinsed and drained
2 (2-1/4 ounces each) cans sliced ripe olives, drained
1 medium red onion, chopped
4 garlic cloves, minced
2 envelopes Italian salad dressing mix

Cook pasta and tortellini according to package directions. Drain and rinse in cold water. Place in large bowl and add artichokes, broccoli, provolone, salami, peppers, beans, olives, onion and garlic.

Prepare salad dressing according to package directions. Pour over salad and toss to coat. Refrigerate until serving. Serves 14-16 people.

This tangy dessert treat will be a big hit, and it's made quick and easy with packaged cake mix and canned pie filling:

LEMON SHEET CAKE
1 package lemon cake mix
4 eggs
1 can lemon pie filling
1 (3 ounce) package cream cheese, softened
1/2 cup butter, softened
2 cups confectioner's sugar
1-1/2 teaspoons vanilla

In large mixing bowl, beat the cake mix and eggs until well blended. Fold in pie filling. Spread in greased and floured 10x15 inch jelly roll pan. Bake at 350 degrees for 18-20 minutes until it tests done. Cool on wire rack.

In small mixing bowl, beat cream cheese, butter and confectioner's sugar until smooth. Stir in vanilla. Spread over cake. Store in fridge.

Recipe serves 30-35 people.

Crazy Day will be crazier than usual in TRF

In a departure from previous years, the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce Business Boosters are putting a new emphasis on the celebration of Crazy Day this summer. Crazy Day will be held Thursday, July 26 from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. Activities will encompass the entire community.

The traditional business displays with their crazy bargains and insane savings will occupy sidewalks in front of businesses throughout the city, but outrageous Ron Kalinoski and zany Heather Bayne, the co-chairpeople of the Business Boosters Committee, have been hard at work with their committee members to develop two new wacky ideas.

Plans are being made to barricade the 200 block of LaBree Avenue from Poppler's to Lori's Hallmark to make the street area available for booths. These booths will be appropriate for vendors of crafts and baked goods and for fundraising activities, as well as other businesses who wish to bring their displays downtown. There will be live music and activities for children. The cost for a 10 foot by 10 foot booth space is $20. Vendors are responsible for providing their own display tables. No electricity will be available. Applications are available at the Chamber of Commerce office.

City residents are also being encouraged to take advantage of the shoppers being out and about to organize rummage sales in all sections of the community in conjunction with the Crazy Day promotion. To have your sale included in the Chamber's advertising for the July 26 citywide rummage sale register at the Chamber. There will be a $10 fee for registration. This registration will take the place of the Thief River Falls Radio Garage Sale Gram for this one date only.

Monday is the deadline to report crop acres to FSA

The Pennington County Farm Service Agency Office reminds producers that they must report their acres to the FSA County Office in order to be eligible for benefits under most FSA programs. The deadline to timely file an acreage report for the 2007 crop year is Monday, July 16.

Acreage reports filed after the deadline will require that the producer pay a fee for the County Office to inspect and measure the acreage.

Some of the FSA programs requiring that an annual acreage report be filed include the Direct and Counter-Cyclical Program (DCP), Crop Disaster Program, Noninsured Crop Disaster Assistance Program (NAP), Loan Deficiency Payments (LDPs), Marketing Assistance Loans, and Conservation Reserve Program (CRP).

The Pennington County Office has mailed out maps to producers for the farm(s) the County Office has them listed as operating for the 2007 crop year. A letter was attached to the maps, informing the producer what needs to be recorded on the maps before coming into the office to file their acreage report.

Producers with questions concerning acreage reporting requirements should contact the Pennington County FSA Office at 681-1612, ext. 2.

Engen lifts off to space camp

Karlstad resident Carrie Engen, 15, blasted off to space June 3-9 at the U.S. Space & Rocket Center in Huntsville, Ala.

"It was an amazing experience," Engen said.

Engen, who will be a junior this fall at Tri-County High School in Karlstad, was able to attend the camp for free. While attending Honeywell Educators at Space Academy last year, Engen's teacher Gary Taylor won the opportunity to send one of his students to the student space camp. Taylor gave his students the opportunity to write essays on why they should be selected to attend space camp. The essay contest was open to all of Taylor's students in grades 7 through 12 who were interested in space.

"Carrie wrote about what she wants in the future, not just a career as a veterinarian, but a future for the world," recalled Taylor. "She wrote about a need to explore and how she expects some day we will find something beyond our world, solar system or galaxy. I guess what set her essay apart was the need to search and find out more about space, and her understanding of how small we are in the universe."

While at space camp, Engen participated in a ropes course with her teammates. She said, "We had to do different activities to help us work together."

Engen also attended PowerPoint presentations that covered such information as space shuttle engines. After the presentations, Engen and her teammates were able to simulate what it would be like to fly a space shuttle and go to space.

Public warned about hitman e-mails

The Polk County Sheriff's Office has received two complaints about hitman e-mails. These hitman e-mails have surfaced in the past few months and are now starting to make the e-mail rounds. The e-mails threaten the recipient, claiming that a hitman has been hired to kill the person but won't kill the person if the person pays a large fee.

Here is an example of a popular hitman e-mail that is being sent:

"Good day.

"I want you to read this message very carefully and keep the secret with you till further notice. You have no need of knowing who I am till I make out a space for us to see. I have been paid $50,000 in advance to terminate you with some reasons listed to me by my employer. It's one I believe you call a friend. I have followed you closely for one week and three days now, and have seen that you are innocent of the accusation.

"Do not contact the police or FBI or try to send a copy of this to them because if you do, I will know and might be pushed to do what I have been paid to do. Besides, this is the first time I turned out to be a betrayer in my job.

"Now listen, I will arrange for us to see each other face to face, but before that, I need the amount of $80,000 and you will have nothing to be afraid of. I will be coming to see you in your office or home. Determine where you wish we meet. Do not set any camera to cover us or set up any tape to record our conversation. My employer is in control now.

"You will need to pay $20,000 to the account I will provide to you before we will set our first meeting. After you have made the first advance payment to the account, I will give you the tape that contains his request for me to terminate you, which will be enough evidence for you to take him to court (if you wish to), then the balance will be paid later.

"You don't need my phone contact for now till I am assured you are ready to comply.

"Lucky you."

The sheriff's office reminds you that this is an extortion scam that attempts to get you to pay large fees. These hitman e-mails are sent out in bulk, which means that no one has paid scammers to kill you. As a result, the extortion attempt is real; the threat against your life is not. In other words, you don't need to pay off a hitman.

The sheriff's department has seen that the amount of money asked for has varied from $50,000 to $150,000; however, new versions may have different amounts.

If you receive a hitman e-mail, don't panic. It's most likely bogus. Don't send money, and don't give out any personal or financial information.

Next, read the e-mail a few times to see if it seems like it is specific to you, or does it look like it easily could have been e-mailed to millions of unsuspecting potential victims? For example, does the e-mail use your name, address, phone number, family members' names, and several other specific things that show the information is truly about you? If the e-mail contains significant information that is specific to you, call your local law enforcement agency and report it to the FBI.

If there is little in the e-mail to make you believe that the e-mail is unique to you, simply delete the e-mail, or you can report it to local law enforcement, but tell the agency that it is probably a scam.

If you receive an e-mail and feel that it might be a scam, you can go online and check with www.scambusters.org. Scambusters will advise you of the latest scams that are occurring.

GF man pleads guilty to conspiracy to burglarize Radio Shack

A Grand Forks, N.D., man pled guilty Monday in Pennington County District Court to conspiring to burglarize Computer Run/Radio Shack in Thief River Falls on April 5.

Zachary James Rogers, 23, pled guilty to charges of felony conspiracy to commit a second degree burglary, gross misdemeanor third degree refusal to submit to a chemical test, and felony second degree assault, according to court documents. In a plea agreement, charges of felony aiding and abetting a second degree burglary, felony possession of stolen property and gross misdemeanor fleeing a peace officer in a motor vehicle were dismissed. Sentencing has been set for Aug. 13.

Gregory Wade Nordrum, 38, Grand Forks, has also been charged in connection with the case. A plea hearing is scheduled Monday.

According to the criminal complaint against Rogers, a concerned citizen called police April 5, indicating that someone was breaking into Computer Run/Radio Shack. A window was broken at the business, and the person was driving a gray Oldsmobile. While en route, law enforcement allegedly observed the Oldsmobile as it traveled behind Kmart. The vehicle then traveled to an area near McMullen Auto Sales. As law enforcement observed the vehicle, Rogers failed to stop at stop signs at the intersections of Nelson Drive and Sherwood Avenue, and at Nelson Drive and Highway 59 South. Law enforcement officers activated their emergency lights and sirens; however, Rogers didn't stop the car. He accelerated at a high rate of speed in an attempt to evade law enforcement. Law enforcement continued to follow Rogers and Nordrum throughout Thief River Falls. Rogers traveled at a high rate of speed and failed to stop for red lights. He went through yards and drove off of roads to try to evade law enforcement.

Law enforcement officers then tried to use their squad cars to stop Rogers, who ended up colliding with a squad car in a yard at an unidentified Thief River Falls location. Rogers continued driving, and the vehicle traveled at speeds between 90 and 100 mph. According to the complaint, the Oldsmobile collided with the squad car a second time while the officer attempted to stop the Oldsmobile. (The assault charge stems from the collisions with the squad car.) At that point, the Oldsmobile was stopped, and Rogers and Nordrum allegedly fled on foot. They were both apprehended in the area of Oakland Park.

Further investigation revealed numerous electronic equipment had been stolen from Computer Run/Radio Shack. Those items were valued at more than $2,500 but less than $3,500. A window at the business had also been broken.

Western Minnesotans at risk for West Nile virus

Warmer than normal weather conditions in June may put more western and central Minnesota residents at risk for West Nile virus this summer than in previous years. Minnesota Department of Health officials are concerned that people may be exposed to the virus early in the WNV season, which typically begins in mid-July.

MDH monitors the abundance of Culex tarsalis, the primary mosquito carrier of WNV in Minnesota, in western and southwestern Minnesota. At most monitoring sites, June numbers of Culex tarsalis mosquitoes were the highest recorded since 2002, when WNV was first detected in the state.

"Unusually warm weather in June led to an early spike in the numbers of the mosquito that transmits West Nile virus in Minnesota," said David Neitzel, an MDH epidemiologist specializing in diseases carried by mosquitoes and ticks. "Warm weather also speeds up the development of WNV in mosquitoes, so there could be a greater than usual number of infected mosquitoes able to transmit WNV when they feed in July."

In many areas, numbers of other pest mosquitoes have been relatively low with this summer's hot and dry weather, Neitzel added. People are not being bitten as often, so they may believe their disease risk is non-existent. However, Culex tarsalis mosquitoes and WNV thrive in this type of weather. "You may not have noticed many mosquitoes when you've been out at dusk this year, but unfortunately the few that are out there may be carrying WNV," he said.

The Culex tarsalis mosquito prefers open, agricultural areas of Minnesota. In past years, the majority of Minnesota's WNV infestations has occurred in people from these areas. Approximately 10 percent of people with the severe form of WNV infection die from their illness, and many more suffer from long-term nervous system problems after their illness. It is extremely important, therefore that residents of western and central Minnesota take simple precautions to prevent mosquito bites.

To reduce your risk of being bitten by mosquitoes:

- While outside among mosquitoes, keep mosquito repellent handy and use it! The most effective repellents contain the active ingredients DEET (up to 30 percent), picaridin, or oil lemon of eucalyptus.
- Minimize outdoor activities at dusk or dawn, when the mosquitoes that transmit WNV are most actively feeding.
- Wear long-sleeve shirts and long pants if you must spend time in an area where mosquitoes are biting.
- Eliminate mosquito-breeding sites on and around your property, including items such as old tires, buckets, clogged rain gutters, cans, and other containers that can hold small amounts of water. Change water in birdbaths and horse troughs at least weekly.

August is usually the peak month for WNV cases in Minnesota, but people are at risk of disease from July until frost occurs. Freezing conditions kill mosquitoes or force them to find protected locations to over-winter. Thus, it is important to keep preventing mosquito bites through most of September.

Of those who become infected with WNV, most people will have no symptoms or display only mild symptoms. Approximately one out of 150 people who become infected will develop severe central nervous system disease (i.e., encephalitis or meningitis). Symptoms usually show up three to 15 days after being bitten. They can include headache, high fever, rash, muscle weakness, stiff neck, disorientation, convulsions, paralysis and coma. Severe cases tend to occur most often in the elderly. Since 2002, reports have indicated that 340 Minnesotans were infected with WNV, and 12 have died from their illness.

Information on WNV can be found at the MDH Web site (www.health.state.mn.us). People who have questions about WNV can call MDH at 1-877-676-5414 between 8 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Rydell to host program on backyard composting

On Sunday, July 22 at 2 p.m., Rydell National Wildlife Refuge will host a Learning at the Lakes program on backyard composting.

Yard waste can really accumulate over the years, and it is illegal to place yard waste in household garbage or the landfill. Join Howard Person, Pennington County Extension agent, and learn ways to decrease the volume occupied by yard waste and make good quality mulch or garden fertilizer at the same time.

To get to the Rydell Refuge, go three miles east of Mentor or three miles west of Erskine on Highway 2 and turn south on Polk County Road 210. Follow County Road 210 about 2½ miles south to the large entrance sign and main gate of the refuge. For more information, contact the Rydell Refuge at 1-800-841-0172 or (218) 687-2229.

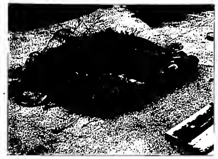
TRF man pleads guilty to sex offense

A Thief River Falls man pled guilty Monday in Pennington County District Court to second degree criminal sexual conduct.

In a plea agreement, another charge of second degree criminal sexual conduct and a charge of first degree criminal sexual conduct were dismissed against Jesse Emerson Hornseth, 27. Sentencing has been scheduled for Oct. 15, 2007, since Hornseth needs to undergo a sex offender evaluation.

The case had been set to go to trial, and prospective jurors had been called to hear the case.



On Aug. 14, 2006, a father reported to law enforcement that he was concerned about something his daughter had written in her diary. According to the criminal complaint, the girl, who was under the age of 12 at the time, wrote that she recently discovered that what Hornseth was doing to her was called molestation. The Pennington County Sheriff's Department and Thief River Falls Police Department investigated the case. Law enforcement learned the girl also told a babysitter that she had been molested by Hornseth. The girl told law enforcement that Hornseth touched her inappropriately on more than one occasion. She indicated that the incidents occurred approximately once a week at two residences where Hornseth had lived. The complaint indicates the incidents occurred multiple times over an extended period of time. Hornseth was charged with the offenses Sept. 11, 2006.

Ring of Fire

There was once a time to dream and then plan for summer projects. That time will soon pass. Minnesotans must always keep an eye on the cold, gray visitor even while they enjoy its warm, sunny counterpart and plan for the coming winter. However, I have one more project for you that you may still be able to squeeze in this summer.

Residents of Thief River Falls may have a recreational fire because it is allowed by city ordinance. The rest of us may have a recreational fire simply because we want one. Gathered around a shared fire, we are more in tune with ourselves, our family and a tradition that extends behind us for centuries. I want to tell you about a fire pit surround I built to make a campfire safe, yet keep it rustic.

I started our fire pit with a steel tractor wheel as a fire ring. It was inexpensive and deep enough to keep cinders from spilling onto the ground. In our case, the wheel was centered on a concrete patio prior to it being poured, but you can place a fire ring on patio blocks or anywhere flat, safe and fireproof. At this point, with no more effort, you would probably be fine for fire, but a steel wheel on blocks is maybe a little too rustic and plain. I wanted to make our fire pit look nice, so I borrowed a technique that stone fence builders have used in the past. First, I built a simple, square wooden form to encompass the fire ring and hold field stone and mortar. I then placed about an inch of prepared mortar mix on the ground surrounding the steel wheel then placed field stone into the mortar. You want to pay attention to the stones you use and place the plain stones closer to the inside of the form and the fancier ones with lots of color towards the outside and closer to the wooden form as they'll be featured when the form is removed. Leave a little space between the fire ring/tractor wheel and the inside row of rocks as the ring will expand when you make fire and you don't want the field stone surround to crack. After you lay the first course, trowel on some more mortar mix, then arrange more field stone for the next layer. Bear in mind, this fire pit surround only needs to be strong enough to hold together, so don't use too much concrete. It's like my sister (sweet, insane) Deb says about baking chocolate chip cookies, "just enough dough to hold the chips together." When you reach the top of the wooden forms, try to use stone in sizes so that you develop a slope from the inside edge down, which will help shed water. Let the project sit, forms intact, for about four to six hours. After this time, remove the forms, then use a power washer to (gently, please) remove some of the concrete. I don't know how to describe how much concrete to remove, but try to strike a balance between strength and beauty; field stone looks much nicer than concrete. In my case, I waited too long before I washed off the excess concrete and had to use an air chisel to remove more concrete and some mereuric acid (use protective gloves) to clean concrete residue from the stone.

A fire ring surround was a fairly easy project for a weekend, but be prepared to take your time removing excess mortar, as it dries slowly. Patience is well rewarded in a project, but procrastination is not; it's not too late for one more summer project, but soon home improvement will be more about insulation than decoration, so go build your ring of fire.

Scott Bergland steps down after 10 years and will be succeeded by his brother...

Tim Bergland named Prowlers' head hockey coach

by Mike Lundgren
Sports Editor

It's staying in the family, but the title of Thief River Falls boys head high school hockey coach now belongs to Tim Bergland, named Thursday to succeed Scott Bergland, his brother, who stepped down from the position he has held the past 10 years.

Tim Bergland has been a Thief River Falls assistant coach under Scott Bergland the past three years.

Resignations of both coaches were accepted earlier to pave the way for the position change. New Thief River Falls Activities Director Mike Biermaier then announced this week that Tim Bergland had been offered the job as head coach, and had accepted the position. The appointment is pending official approval by the school board.

Scott Bergland

■ Year-by-year coaching record with the Prowlers: 1997-98 - 5-18; 1998-99 - 8-13-4 (lost to East Grand Forks 2-1 in overtime in section final); 1999-2000 - 7-12-4; 2000-01 6-15-2; 2001-02 - 16-10-1; 2002-03 - 15-10-3; 2003-04 - 15-11-1; 2004-05 - 19-8-1 (lost to Warroad 4-1 in section final); 2005-06 - 22-9 (beat Warroad 3-2 in four overtimes in section final; finished fifth at Class A state tournament); 2006-07 - 13-13-2 (lost to Warroad 2-1 in section final)

There is still a desire to stay involved in a sport that he loves, acknowledged Scott. But he simply doesn't have enough hours in the day to handle all the duties assigned a head coach in addition to responsibilities in his position with Farmers Union Oil Co. and his role as father to Megan, a Franklin Middle School student.

"It's a time commitment thing," explained Scott Bergland. "I just didn't have enough time to get it all done."

Scott said the coaching transition should be relatively smooth for Tim and his yet-to-be-confirmed staff, which in recent years has also included Jeff Tunberg and Jeff Vacura. "It's always been 'coaching-by-committee' anyway," he explained. "The only reason I was the head coach was that somebody had to do it."

Succeeding Pat Cullen, Scott Bergland started his decade-long run with the Prowlers in the 1997-98 season. He directed operations for 263 games, finishing with a 126-119-18 record. That's the most games coached by an individual in the long history of the program. The 10 years and 126 victories rank second on the school record list to Wendell Grand, who coached the Prowlers 11 years and won 133 games.

The Prowlers reached the section finals in 1999 – the first time they made it that far in post-season play since 1983. Thief River Falls didn't make the finals again until 2005, but now have played in three straight championship games – a feat last accomplished in a 1955-56-57 stretch.

Thief River Falls made its first state tournament appearance since 1965 by beating Warroad 3-2 in four overtimes in the 2006 Section 8A title game and finished the year with a school-record 22 wins.

A Lincoln High School and University of St. Thomas graduate, Scott Bergland also coached in the Thief River Falls youth hockey program, served as a hockey official and spent four years as head hockey coach at Northland Community and Technical College, where his 1987-88 team set a school record with 17 wins, won a state title and advanced to the NJCAA national tournament.

Tim Bergland coached high school hockey for three years at Fergus Falls before returning to his hometown. He was the Otters' head coach for two years, leading them to the 2003 state tournament.

A 1983 LHS graduate, Tim played four years of hockey at the University of Minnesota, serving as the Gophers' co-captain during his senior year. He played for Team USA in the World Championships and had a 12-year professional hockey career that included NHL stints with Washington and Tampa Bay.

With the way the situation has developed, the switch should be smoother than most coaching changes. But Tim Bergland says it will, nevertheless, require a period of adjustment for both him and the players. "Obviously, its a different position being head coach instead of an assistant," he said. "Different responsibilities. You're not the middle man anymore. And it will be different for the kids, too. Our styles are different; the way Scott coaches and the way I coach are different. Neither way is wrong, just different."

Prowler swimmers will have craft & bake sale to 'Help Pay the Rent'

Members of the TRF Swim Club and the Thief River Falls girls high school swim program are organizing a fund-raising craft and bake sale that will be held during the city's July 26 Crazy Days promotion. Proceeds will be used to help cover the costs connected to staging the 2007 Section 8A True Team girls high school swim meet.

Three-time defending champion Thief River Falls will be designated as the host. But instead of using the Prowlers' Franklin Middle School pool, the Saturday, Oct. 13, state-qualifier will be held at the Hyslop Pool on the University of North Dakota campus in Grand Forks.

The meet location rotates at various sites across the section. Thief River Falls' host status is complicated by the fact diving competition can not be held in the FMS pool because is doesn't meet state-mandated depth and height guidelines.

During the regular season, diving is simply scratched in meets staged here. But the event must be available for sectional competition.

That prompted the Thief River Falls/UND arrangement. There is, however, a substantial rental fee, and that's where the 'Help Pay the Rent' theme for the craft and bake sale, scheduled to be held on LaBree Avenue, comes into play.

The fund-raiser is being put together by TRF Swim Club Chair Dianne Kays. Meet and rental details are being handled by Thief River Falls swim coach Lacy Knott.

For additional information call Kays at 681-8911.

Bandits pitcher Jorden Espeseth turned and made a pick-off throw to first base Thursday during Thief River Falls' American Legion baseball match-up against Perham. Espeseth was tagged with the loss in a 6-1 Game 1 setback. Final 2007 home appearance for Post 117 will be a Wednesday, July 18, doubleheader against Fergus Falls starting at 4 p.m. doubleheader at the Multi-Events Center. Thief River Falls finishes the schedule with trips to Stephen-Argyle, Bemidji, East Grand Forks and Roseau.

Buzz, Bandits split in Legion baseball

Isaac Stoll's hitting and Philip Moendick's pitching carried Perham to a 6-1 win over Thief River Falls Thursday in the first half of a Ninth District American Legion baseball doubleheader at the Multi-Events Center.

A three-run first inning, then back-to-back second inning home runs by Ben Warne and Herschel Masinas put Perham in position for a twinbill sweep, but Thief River Falls rallied to pull out a high-scoring 12-10 Game 2 win.

Stoll was 4-for-4 at the plate with three doubles and three RBI in the opener. Moendick, a hard-throwing left-hander, scattered six hits, striking out 10.

The visiting Buzz led from start to finish, with a first inning Stoll double driving in Anthony Ruther, who had opened the game with a single.

A two-run single by AJ Masinas made it 3-0 in the second inning.

Stoll doubled home a run and scored on a triple into the right field corner by Andy Kratzke in the fifth inning for a 5-0 gap.

The Bandits got on the board in the fifth when Michael Benedict walked with one out, stole second, went to third on a wild pitch and scored on a two-out fly ball single into short center field by Michael Blix.

Perham got that run back in the seventh on a Herschel Masinas lead-off single, an error on a pick-off attempt and Stoll's third double of the game.

The split put the Courtney Skjerven-coached Bandits at 13-8 for the year.

Thief River Falls will be at Moorhead Tuesday before the Bandits make their final 2007 home appearance with a 4 p.m. Wednesday doubleheader against Fergus Falls.

Bemidji takes two from Post 117 Legion squad

Bemidji swept Thief River Falls 12-8, 4-0 Wednesday in an American Legion baseball doubleheader at the Multi-Events Center.

The visitors built an 8-0 lead in the rain-interrupted opener and held off the Bandits down the stretch.

Simon Anderson's Game 2 shutout pitching completed the sweep.

Jeff Schaper hit two home runs and first-game winning pitcher Andrew Hengel homered once.

Bemidji improved to 15-7.

TRF, Detroit Lakes VFW split

Thief River Falls won a 16-5 Game 1 decision, but host Detroit Lakes bounced back with a 9-6 second-game victory in a Monday VFW baseball doubleheader.

A seven-run seventh inning secured the Phantom's win in the opener when the Thief River Falls 16-year-olds had seven players with multiple-hit games in a 20-hit attack.

Post 2793 opened the Game 1 scoring in the top of the first when one-out singles by Keaton Joppru, Cody Conners, Myles Keefe and Dillon Barry were followed by walks issued to Briar Verbout and Jordan Anderson for a 3-0 advantage.

An RBI double by Jake Nelson helped make it 5-1 in the third inning.

Verbout and Anderson singled home runs in the fourth as the lead climbed to 7-2.

Keefe and Verbout drove in fifth inning runs for a 9-2 spread.

Four hits, two walks and two Detroit Lakes errors were part of Thief River Falls' seven-run final at-bat.

Conners had a 4-for-6 first game, with Keefe and Verbout adding three hits each. Anderson was the winning pitcher. He gave up 11 hits in six innings of work, but walked just one.

"We hit the ball really hard," reported Thief Rive Falls coach Shane Zutz. "Jordan threw strikes and made them put the ball in play."

Detroit Lakes shattered a 4-4 Game 2 tie with a five-run sixth inning for the split. The winners combined nine hits with five Thief River Falls errors.

"We worked out of some jams, but then had some defensive breakdowns that cost us," pointed out Zutz.

A double by Keefe and a single by Barry scored two first inning Thief River Falls runs.

The Phantoms made it 3-1 in the second when Chaz Harger reached base on an error and scored on passed ball.

A two-out triple by Verbout had a throwing error tacked on at third base as Thief River Falls opened up a 4-1 scoreboard gap in the third.

Conners doubled as the visitors picked up the final two runs of the day in the top of the seventh.

New DNR map books highlight stream trout fishing in Minnesota

Finding opportunities to fish trout will be easier than ever this year, thanks to two new map books produced by the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

The books highlight trout streams, lakes and public fishing opportunities in the northwestern and southeastern areas of the state. The northeast map book is new. The southeast book has been updated from a 2005 edition.

Map books are available by calling toll free 1-888-646-6367 and will soon be available online at http://www.dnr.state.mn.us/fish/trout/index.html

Last year's trout stamps sales were 88,800, down from 96,000 to 98,000 sold at the beginning of the decade.

– Minnesota DNR Questions & Answers –

Q: Boat anchors do a good job of keeping boats in place, but they can also cause damage to the aquatic vegetation in a lake or river. Is there any one style that causes little or no damage?

A: What a person does with a boat anchor - placement and retrieval - has more influence on the amount of damage it might do than the style of the anchor. For example, lower the anchor when your boat has stopped moving, this will keep it from dragging through vegetation. When you are moving your boat to a new location, even a short distance, be sure to lift the anchor off the bottom. It is illegal to drag an anchor while under power. On windy days, when it is difficult to remain anchored in place, only use the anchor in sheltered areas where the anchor will hold your position.

Internet expanding scope, meaning of 'free press'

by Gene Policinski
First Amendment Center

For most of the nation's history, much of the public's attention - and much of the legal contention - regarding a free press has been on the "free" part.

But of late, figuring out the "press" portion has gotten a bit tougher, often as the result of the work of Internet entrepreneurs.

There's no specific definition of "press" in the 45 words of the First Amendment. So who might be bound by responsibilities that go along with the role of a free press? Are bloggers and other Web users part of a broadly defined "press" even though they certainly could not have been envisioned by the Colonial-era Founders who wrote the First Amendment? And what of those who aren't defined by traditional measures of circulation and ratings, but who may well have global audiences?

There are occasional contributors to Web sites, often as a result of their random presence at news events such as the tragic killings at Virginia Tech. Within minutes of the first reports of the campus shootings, even as news organizations were rushing staff to the scene, amateur cell-phone images and video were featured prominently on television and the Web.

The bloggers and "citizen journalist" contributors raise serious legal issues. One example: A proposed federal "shield law" would protect reporters in many circumstances from having to reveal confidential news sources to federal grand jurors. The law would mirror provisions in nearly all states. But opponents say defining who is a journalist - who is "press" - must be accomplished first, so that every citizen is not someday sheltered from testifying.

It may be that such a definition ultimately may include anyone, in any medium, who takes on a meaningful news-reporting function - as opposed to simply writing a diary entry or composing a personal letter.

Other issues raised have less legal bite, but nonetheless bear watching. There is the innovative (and shocking, to some) idea advanced by the editor and publisher of Pasadena Now, an online news site focused on that California city. James Macpherson proposed hiring two reporters living in India to watch Pasadena City Council meetings via a regular webcast and then write news reports. The intercontinental arrangement's cost was reported to be much less than the expense of hiring a local reporter to do the same.

The situation poses yet more perplexing New Age questions: Can and should technology substitute for "being there"?

On its Web site, Pasadena Now pledges to use the advantages of digital media - the "immediacy ... of interactivity ... audio and visual" - to better inform its readers. And there's no reason to doubt that reporters based in India or elsewhere could not write fully and fairly on what they saw on a webcast - but is that a news story?

Now before traditional journalists just write off the idea of such remote staffing, they ought to consider that many mainstream U.S. news operations - seeking to cut costs or curry favor with a new generation of readers - have curtailed or don't bother with regular reporting on so-called "process" stories like city council meetings. At least Macpherson's plan would have a report of council activities posted in a timely fashion.

Still, as a young journalist, I honed my reporting skills - and in the process, informed readers at several newspapers in Indiana (not India) - of the workings of our city and county councils and agencies. Legions of reporters similarly have spent hard time in locales nationwide, perched on wooden benches or plastic chairs in stuffy, fluorescent-lit chambers, recording and reporting on proposed tax hikes, street-paving plans and school board budgets. Those stories alerted readers to a host of ordinary but necessary aspects of daily life and not incidentally kept politicians and bureaucrats connected to constituencies - and perhaps reminded them that citizens were watching.

Does not the role of a "free press" include more than reporting accurately what happened? Does it not also include the freedom to ask questions - in person - about what did not? To fully report those local Indiana stories, it sometimes was important to ask why, with no open discussion, a vote was delayed. Occasionally the story might be more about the whispered comments made between two council members away from the microphone than about the recorded action.

An accurate account of a government meeting - whether written from a building down the street or one halfway around the globe - does have some value, of course, especially when the alternative is no story at all.

But surely the First Amendment's provision for a free press counsels practitioners and product to be more than a transcription service.

Demo derbies and more

In addition to the line-up of free entertainment, the fair will again feature paid admission performances in the grandstand, led by the perennial favorite demolition derbies Thursday and Saturday evenings, and the popular sprint car races at 2 p.m. Sunday.

Thursday's demolition action is the Warren Jaycees Complete Destruction Demolition Derby at 7 p.m., also sponsored by the fair board. The fair board-sponsored demolition derby is at 6:30 p.m. Saturday. Grandstand admission for both demo derbies is $13, or $7 for kids age 12 and under.

Sunday racing will feature MDRA Midwest modifieds and streets plus full-size cars. Grandstand admission for the sprints is $16, or $7 for age 12 and younger.

Other grandstand shows with paid admission include:

• R&R novelty wrestling at 9 p.m. Wednesday; tickets $8, or $4 for children age 12 and under.

• ATV mud drag racing and mini moto bike racing at 10:30 a.m. Saturday; tickets to the racetrack infield bleachers are $7, or $4 for children age 12 and under. Arrangements have been made to have portable bleachers available in the race track infield, with 600 extra seats provided, so no one will have to be worried about being turned away from grandstand events because of a lack of seating.

Family fun carnival

Anderson said the biggest change fairgoers may have to adjust to for this year's fair probably will be the use of tickets for rides at the Family Fun Shows Carnival at all times, except for a special Thursday night wristband period.

All rides take one ticket. Ten-ticket strips can be bought in advance for $14 ($1.40 per ticket) at many Marshall County businesses. The advance wristband will be sold for $14 and will be good for all rides only on Thursday from 6 p.m. to the 11 p.m. close. Single tickets can be bought for $2 each or Family Fun Packs of 20 tickets may be bought for $35 ($1.75 per ticket) at the midway ticket box throughout the carnival. Wristbands for Thursday night only can be purchased at the ticket box for $15.

Locations for advance carnival ticket sales are: Jet Stop, Dale's Foods, Bremer Bank, Hardware Hank, American Federal Bank, Warren Pharmacy, Community Bank, True Value and the Cenex C-Store in Warren, Community Bank and Kosmatka's Market in Oslo, John's Service & Repair in Alvarado, Valley Oil & Convenience and United Valley Bank in Argyle, Citizens State Bank Midwest and Kelly's Country Market in Stephen, Young's General Store in Middle River, Express Mart and Sethre Store in Newfolden and the Viking Cafe.

Hours for the carnival are 6 to 11 p.m. Wednesday, 3 to 11 p.m. Thursday, 12 p.m. to 12 a.m. Friday and Saturday and 12 to 6 p.m. Sunday.

More free attractions

Once again, many commercial exhibitors will be set up at the fair, most in the Centennial Building. The layout has been changed for this year, so if you do not see your favorite exhibit, look around a bit, advised Anderson. Wildlife exhibits from the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources and Agassiz Wildlife Refuge will again be set up under the grandstand. Commercial exhibit hours are 6 to 10 p.m. Wednesday, 12 to 10 p.m. Thursday, Friday and Saturday, and 12 to 5 p.m. Sunday. A large quilting exhibit will be back for the second year, and will include three major quilting vendors.

Settler's Square Museum, just off the south side of the fairgrounds, will be open throughout the fair with all free exhibits.

Old-time threshing will be demonstrated at 6 p.m. Friday and at 1 p.m. Saturday and Sunday. Open class and 4-H dog shows will be held at 6 p.m. Thursday. A kids pedal tractor pull will be held at 1 p.m. Saturday, near the Baby Barnyard. Kids age 4 to 11 can enter, and there is no charge for participation or watching. A car show for classic, collector, custom, street and muscle cars will be held from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. in Holiday Park, adjacent to the fairgrounds, followed by a cruise-in from 5 to 9 p.m.

Once again, a large number and variety of food vendors will be set up at the Marshall County Fair, and the carnival midway will also have a large number of food concessions.

For more information about any of the fair activities, visit the fair's Web site at www.marshallcountyfair.org, or call Dwight Anderson at (218) 201-0052.

Environmental group sues Kittson County

habitat for rare and threatened plant species, including the threatened sedge carex garberi and plant species of special concern, including the fewflower spikerush (Eleocharis quinqueflora) and smooth sawgrass (Cladium mariscoides).

Some areas of the Beaches Lake WMA are comprised of open aspen parkland, an ecological subtype that's becoming increasingly rare in Minnesota, and the WMA is one of the few places in Minnesota that provide good elk habitat. It also provides habitat for many other wildlife species, including deer, moose, and birds such as the threatened Wilson's phalarope (Phalaropus tricolor) and bird species of special concern such as yellow rails (Coturnicops noveboracensis), marbled godwits (Limosa fedoa), and Nelson's sharp-tailed sparrow (Ammodramus nelsoni).

Beaches Lake WMA spans several townships in the county, including portions of Peatland, Klondike, and Cannon townships.

After the county applied for grant funding in 2004 to build an off-road vehicle trail through the WMA, the state sent it a letter denying the request for funding and telling the county that because of the area's high diversity and habitat quality and numerous natural heritage elements, including rare, threatened, or endangered species, the county should scrap those plans and find somewhere else to construct a trail.

Instead, in the late summer or fall of 2006, the county did exactly what the state told them not to do. They excavated, deepened, and widened Lateral Ditch Nos. 12, 13, 14, and State Ditch No. 50. In the process, this construction filled some wetlands with dirt and rocks, and in other cases drained surrounding wetlands.

"This Wildlife Management Area belongs to all the people of the State of Minnesota and is established to protect and preserve this important remnant of the natural landscape. It is not private property to be managed according to the wishes of one small group of people who refuse to value wildlife habitat and protection," said MCEA Legal Director Janette Brimmer.

The defendants did not have permits or permission from the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources (DNR) to perform this work; they did not have a valid drainage system report, drainage repair petition, engineer's report, and/or drainage order; they had no approved wetland replacement or mitigation plan; they did not consult with and did not have permits or permission from the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers; and they did not prepare an Environmental Impact Statement, all of which are required under Minnesota and federal laws.

"Development is allowed so that people can access WMAs for hunting, but it must minimize intrusion on the natural environment. There was already ample access to the Beaches Lake WMA. What they've done - constructing or improving ditches that alter and damage high-quality habitat - is unjustified for access and is totally inconsistent with the purposes of the WMA," said attorney and Wildlife and Forestry Advocate Matt Norton, of MCEA.

MCEA is asking that the court require the defendants to immediately and completely restore the wetland conditions in Beaches Lake WMA, Juneberry Fen, and any other wetlands or public waters that have been affected by this illegal work. MCEA also wants vegetation restored and for the defendants to pay restitution to the state for natural resource damage to Juneberry Fen and any illegal taking of threatened species.

Falls.

Mayor Steve "Beaver" Nordhagen and council member Emery Lee voiced concerns regarding the amount of time spent marketing the Imperial Room.

Dale Wennberg, arenas marketing and events coordinator, replied that he may spend an hour with a potential renter of the Imperial Room. He noted it may take an additional three or four times until the person decides he or she will rent the room. "If we didn't have the room, you're marketing a facility that has ice nine months out of the year," Wennberg said.

Wennberg added that city personnel will soon have a better grasp of how much it costs to hold an event at REA and the HOMCC. Meters were recently placed on such things as lights and compressors in order to determine how much it costs to operate those things.

A question was also raised about rewiring the old chandeliers from the City Auditorium and operating them in the Imperial Room. It's estimated that it will cost $19,000 to repair the chandeliers; however, Vigen said more research needs to be completed.

"Do you recommend spending $19,000 on fixing the chandeliers for the Imperial Room?" Nordhagen asked Vigen.

Vigen replied that she knows it's something people would like to see in the Imperial Room.

The Imperial Room wasn't the only REA feature discussed at the council meeting. Council member Floyd Erickson asked about progress on raising funds for a new basketball court at REA.

$30,000 has been raised so far, responded Wennberg, who noted he has heard only positive comments about the city's decision to obtain a new basketball court.

City personnel are trying to raise $120,000 for a new basketball floor, standards, a rack system and scorers' table. Currently, the city uses a deteriorating basketball court. It purchased the used basketball court two years ago from the University of North Dakota for $25,000. For tournaments, it currently uses basketball hoops that belong to UND and REA - Grand Forks, N.D.

Wennberg is optimistic about receiving private donations for the basketball court and other related items. "I don't think it's a dream. I hope it isn't," Wennberg said.

Besides a basketball court, Parks and Recreation Department personnel were asked about plowing snow in the city. Currently, the department plows snow from 11 miles of sidewalks near Thief River Falls [illegible] orchards.

"Why do you do that?" Nordhagen asked Vigen and Curt Howe, parks buildings and grounds supervisor.

Vigen replied that the department was assigned to do so. She added that it costs about $1,800 for the department to plow the sidewalks.

"It takes perhaps four hours depending on how much snow [has fallen]," Howe said.

At the time the department was first assigned snow-plowing responsibilities, the council wanted to get people off of the street, said Wennberg, a former council member and Thief River Falls mayor.

"They weren't getting done by the homeowner or whatever," Howe said.

Selling parkland was another issue discussed at the council meeting. In May, council members toured city parks. They were asked to rate the parks in an effort to determine if the council wishes to sell any of the parks. Vigen said she will provide the survey results to council members once they have completed the surveys.

The abuse charge carries a maximum penalty of five years in prison, a $5,000 fine or both. The willful disturbance charge carries a maximum penalty of one year in prison, a $2,000 fine or both. The failure to report a death charge carries a maximum penalty of 30 days in jail, a $1,000 fine or both.

Smith and Jody Weaver allegedly loaded Destiny Weaver's body into a plastic tote Feb. 12. The tote was then placed in the trunk of a vehicle that Smith drove from North Dakota to Minnesota. Jody Weaver followed Smith in another vehicle. En route, Smith called the Pennington County Sheriff's Department. Deputies met Smith and Jody Weaver at Kruse In in St. Hilaire, where the child's body was surrendered.

Jody Weaver has three other children. Two of the children are no longer in her custody, and the third child has not been living with her.

Former Thief River Falls pastor charged with felony forgery

A former Thief River Falls pastor has been charged with a felony offense of aggravated forgery after he allegedly filed forged documents in Clay County.

Merrill Richard Kindall, 65, Thief River Falls, will make his initial court appearance Monday in Clay County District Court, according to the Clay County Court Administrator's Office. Kindall was charged June 6 with the offense, which carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison, a $20,000 fine or both.

Kindall retired June 30 as pastor of the Evangelical Covenant Church in Thief River Falls. He served for 41 years with the Evangelical Covenant Church. Kindall is currently in the process of moving to the Little Falls area.

According to the criminal complaint, a Moorhead detective was assigned to a forgery investigation at the Clay County Recorder's Office on Oct. 6, 2006. Nelson was shown a copy of a marriage license, an educator statement and a marriage certificate. Kindall, who was then employed as a minister at the Evangelical Covenant Church in Thief River Falls, allegedly signed a reduced marriage fee educator statement that indicated he provided 12 hours of premarital education to a bride and groom before they were married. (The bride and groom are identified in the criminal complaint by their initials.) The bride and groom allegedly told the detective that "no education whatsoever was provided other than a brief one-hour meeting."

Kindall also allegedly "filed a marriage certificate with Clay County, indicating that he had filed his credentials which allow him to perform marriages within Pennington County. The marriage certificate also indicates that the wedding took place May 28, 2005, in Thief River Falls" and that Kindall officiated at the wedding. Kindall allegedly signed the document, which he filed in Clay County. The bride and groom told police that they were married Aug. 21, 2005, on the same date that their baby was baptized.

The complaint alleges, "The bride indicated that she was told by [Kindall] that a baby's parents should be married at a baptism and that is why [Kindall] insisted they get married at the baptism. The bride was not aware that the marriage certificate contained the date of May 28, 2005, which was before the bride and groom's child was born in July 2005, until she received a certified copy of the marriage certificate filed by [Kindall]." Kindall filed the marriage certificate Sept. 6, 2005, in Clay County. According to the complaint, the reduced marriage fee educator's statement was filed in Clay County on Aug. 24, 2005. That was the same date the bride and groom applied for their marriage license, according to the criminal complaint.

Two people injured in five-vehicle accident Wednesday

Two people were injured in a five-vehicle accident Wednesday in the city of Thief River Falls.

Alvin H. Rondorf, 83, and Mildred B. Rondorf, 80, both of Thief River Falls, suffered non-life threatening injuries, according to the Minnesota State Patrol report. They were taken to Northwest Medical Center. Mildred Rondorf was treated and released from the hospital, according to an ER staff member on Thursday. Alvin Rondorf declined medical attention.

At the time of the accident, Arnold I. Reigstad, 68, Newfolden, was driving a 1998 International semi tractor eastbound on Highway 1, and Alvin Rondorf was driving a 1994 Ford pickup truck southbound on Barzen Avenue. According to the report, Alvin Rondorf pulled into the path of Reigstad's semi tractor. The pickup truck was then struck on the right side. It continued moving, striking the front of a 2000 Dodge Caravan driven by Shery K. Brekkestran, 34, Thief River Falls. The northbound van was stopped on Barzen Avenue. Alvin Rondorf's pickup truck then sideswiped the left side of a northbound 1999 Chevy pickup truck driven by Christopher L. Burger, 28, Thief River Falls. Alvin Rondorf's pickup truck then struck the left side of a 1999 Dodge Intrepid driven by Kristine K. Stoneouse, 37, Trail. That car was in a parking lot.

Reigstad, the Rondorfs and Burger were wearing their seat belts. The report indicates Stoneouse wasn't wearing her seat belt, and it was unknown whether Brekkestran was wearing her seat belt.

Alvin Rondorf's pickup truck was totalled. All of the other vehicles sustained minor damage.

The State Patrol was dispatched to the scene at 5:10 p.m. Wednesday. The Pennington County Sheriff's Department and Thief River Falls Police Department assisted at the scene. The Thief River Falls Fire Department was also dispatched to the scene.

Area Guard unit expected back

Date remains tentative for security reasons, but next Friday is the tentative date of their return to armory

Residents across northwestern Minnesota have been waiting for news that the 2nd Combined Arms Battalion - Crookston, Thief River Falls and Fergus Falls have returned. The soldiers were deployed for 22 months, 16 of those months in Iraq.

News this week reports that the 2nd Combined Arms Battalion - Crookston, Thief River Falls and Fergus Falls was expected to arrive at Ft. McCoy, by way of Maine on July 18. The reunion at the National Guard Armory in Thief River Falls is expected to take place on July 27.

Minnesota National Guard explained that moving over 2,600 people and their equipment from a combat zone - while still ensuring their safety - is a very complex operation. All of these soldiers do not come home at once, but instead in "waves" of small units ferried from Kuwait to Ft. McCoy, Wis., by charter aircraft over a period of weeks.

The exact dates of specific unit departures from Iraq is classified due to operational security concerns, but soldiers have been authorized to give their families a general idea of when to expect them home.

Demobilization at Ft. McCoy, Wis.

When 1st Brigade troops leave Iraq, they arrive at Ft. McCoy, Wis., for a formal military "demobilization." That is to say, they will turn in their equipment, review their personnel records, undergo medical evaluations, and begin the "Beyond the Yellow Ribbon" reintegration training to ensure they are prepared to return back to their civilian life. This process is expected to take about eight days per unit.

Within a day or two of arriving at Ft. McCoy, National Guard units will be able to determine when they will arrive to their hometown armories. Home towns can expect to have two to three days notice.

Families, friends, and visitors need to know that they should not come to Ft. McCoy, as the formal "demobilization" process is a strict series of military events, much like the training soldiers went through prior to their tour in Iraq at Camp Shelby, Miss. Soldiers will not be permitted to leave Ft. McCoy and will be required to be involved in demobilization. The goal is to have them complete their required tasks so that they can finish demobilization and depart for their home town armories as soon as possible. They will be released at their home town Armory.

Initial Reunion at Hometown Armories

When the soldiers are cleared to leave Ft. McCoy, they will depart by motor coach en route to their home

Council member vacancy filled

Red Lake Falls - "Barry Schultz of Red Lake Falls has been appointed to fill the vacancy of council member-at-large for Red Lake Falls. Spring start now seems likely for Engelstad residential plan Warren - "If Randy Engelstad's proposal for an 18-lot residential subdivision on the southwest side of Warren becomes reality, start of construction of the first new houses is much more likely to happen next spring than yet this fall. That information emerged from a lengthy discussion of the planned development at the Warren City Council meeting July 10.

"Presenting a new financial analysis intended to make the developer's financial exposure look less forbidding was Traci Ryan of Sauk Centre, an analyst with the David Drown Associates consulting firm. She said she had retooled an earlier cash-flow scenario to incorporate an $80,000 reduction in infrastructure costs, thanks to an improved bidding environment, and to reflect a shift in the use of tax increment financing as a tool to help Engelstad manage his liabilities in the project." - Warren Sheaf, July 18, 2007

Airport project on hold

Fosston - "The Fosston City Council voted at its regular meeting July 9 to place the airport building project on hold.

"The city had hoped to build a 45x50 storage facility to house snow removal equipment before winter. According to Fosston Administrator Chuck Lucken, the bids for the project came in $90,000 higher than the engineer's estimate.

"Two construction firms placed bids. Lenes Sand and Gravel of Fosston had submitted a bid for the amount of $345,157, and Sand Steel Building Company from Emerado, N.D., bid $340,865.

"City Council felt some of the design features were more than needed. A motion was made by Councilman Lowell Veum to reject the bids and seconded by Councilman Bob Saeter. The motion was carried on a unanimous vote.

"The project will be rebid this winter with the intention of beginning construction sometime in 2008." - The 13 Towns of Fosston, July 17, 2007, by Dan Kindall

TRF to decide on TIF for apartment complex

by April Schelnohe
Reporter

A new apartment complex may be in Thief River Falls' future – if the Thief River Falls City Council approves establishing a Tax Increment Financing district for it.

At their Committee of the Whole meeting Tuesday, council members received a request for a hearing about the matter. "I sincerely would ask for your consideration for a request for a public hearing to take place in the month of August for this property," Harold Jesh said to the committee.

"If the council moved forward with this, Harold's company would be the first company to receive TIF that is a for-profit," said Community Development Director Mike Moore.

At its July 24 meeting, the council plans to vote on whether to approve the request. That meeting will be held at 5 p.m. at City Hall.

Jesh owns Harold A. Jesh LLC of Sauk Rapids. He plans to build a 24-plex along Cottonwood Avenue. Jesh anticipates that the land, 24 garages and the complex itself will cost more than $2 million. If TIF were approved, Jesh expects that construction would be completed in spring 2008. The three-story apartment complex would have a variety of apartments, including one-bedroom, two-bedroom and three-bedroom apartments. The apartments may have one or two bathrooms depending upon the number of bedrooms. Rent would range from about $700 to $900 depending upon the size of the apartment.

Council member Emery Lee asked Jesh why he was asking for TIF. (Lee owns a number of rental properties in Thief River Falls, and he is listed as the contact person for Cottonwood Apartments on the Thief River Falls Chamber of Commerce Web site. Cottonwood Apartments are located near the proposed site of Jesh's complex.)

"The TIF will allow me to keep my rents affordable," Jesh replied.

Mayor Steve "Beaver" Nordhagen asked Jesh how much rent would cost if Jesh didn't receive TIF.

"I cannot build this unit without TIF," Jesh responded.

Jesh's purchase agreement stipulates that he will not purchase the property unless he is given TIF, Moore noted. The property is currently zoned R-4 or multi-family.

Jesh doesn't know how long the TIF district would continue, provided that the council approved

Young's Store celebrates 100 years in Middle River

▶ Over the years, Young's General Store has grown in space and the types of items that it sells. Yet, it has always remained at its original Middle River location. The business is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year. (Submitted photo)

Young's General Store is celebrating its 100th anniversary this year. The Middle River store will host an open house Saturday, July 28 from 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. A free lunch will be served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m.

Airport in TRF gets major grant funding

Sen. Norm Coleman announced on Monday, July 16, that local airports in Moorhead and Thief River Falls have been selected to receive federal grants from the U.S. Department of Transportation's Federal Aviation Administration (FAA).

"Local airports are critical for the economies of their community and the surrounding area," said Coleman. "In Thief River Falls, major Minnesota businesses like Arctic Cat, Digi-Key and others help drive the economy for local residents. Moorhead is a regional economic hub for northwest Minnesota. Ensuring the safety and viability of each city's local airport is critical, and I am very excited the FAA has recognized their importance by awarding these grants."

Specific funding projects are as follows:

- $250,070 for Moorhead Municipal to acquire snow removal equipment, construct a storage building, and update the airport master plan study to include an environmental assessment for a

Store to celebrate with open house

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

Sugar was $0.05 a pound, and bacon was $0.20 a pound, when Henry Young opened Young's General Store in Middle River.

Henry Young

The store celebrates its 100th anniversary this year. To celebrate, the store is holding an open house Saturday, July 28 from 7:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. A free lunch will be served from 11 a.m. to 3 p.m. Door prizes will be available all day, and specials will be offered.

About the owners

Henry started the store in 1907. The store was passed down from Henry to his son Howard. The store's current owners are Howard's daughters Patsy Young and Bobbi Holm.

"It's worked good for 100 years," said Bobbi's husband, Steve Holm.

"So why change?" asked Lorene Young, Bobbi and Patsy's stepmom.

Steve and Lorene are among several Young/Holm family members who work or have worked at the store. Steve and Bobbi's daughters, Larissa and Breanna, have worked at the store. Their son, Jordan, is a current employee.

"Not a lot of families can go do that," Steve said.

Lorene agreed, saying that their family is fortunate to be able to work together and get along. Yet, she is also the same person who jokingly once entered Steve's picture in a dog photo contest. Steve hasn't forgotten Lorene's entry – even though the contest was about 10 years ago.

The Young/Holm family members aren't the only employees at the store. Including the family members, the store employs seven people.

That may be surprising, especially when one considers that the store is open every day of the year. It's open half-days on holidays and Sundays.

The history of the store

Henry, who operated a pool hall before Young's General Store, probably couldn't fathom how far the store would come. The store sells such things as grocery items, clothing, notions, knick-knacks, health and beauty aids, hunting supplies, plumbing supplies, electrical supplies, toys, costume jewelry and even horse halters. Young's General Store also operates a greenhouse in the summer months.

Marshall County approves feedlot ordinance

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

The Marshall County Board unanimously approved a feedlot ordinance at its meeting Tuesday. The ordinance is expected to go into effect within the next 30 days.

A final public hearing about the matter was held June 20 in Newfolden. After the hearing, no changes were made, according to Marshall County Auditor/Treasurer Scott Peters.

Highlights of the ordinance include:

- Registration is required if a feedlot has more than 50 animal units, or it has more than 10 animal units and it is within 1,000 feet of a lake or 300 feet of a river. (One animal unit equals 1,000 pounds.)
- All new feedlots or current feedlots that plan to expand are required to obtain a conditional use permit if they are located within one mile of a city.
- Current feedlots are grandfathered in at their current size and distance from other buildings.
- Existing feedlots are required to obtain a conditional use permit if the owners expand their operations and/or if they change the species of animals that they have at their feedlots. If the owners decide to sell their feedlots, the new owner is not required to obtain a conditional use permit unless the feedlot expands or the species change.
- Odor management plans are required for liquid manure storage systems at new or expanding feedlots that have or will have 500 or more animal units.
- As part of the conditional use permit application, manure management plans are required for new or expanding feedlots that have or will have 500 or more animal units.
- Setbacks are required for feedlots that have or will have 500 or more animal units. Those feedlots with 1,000 or more animal units will be required to follow federal guidelines. As a result, the county is only asking that the feedlots notify the county if they plan to expand or build in the county.
- Documentation is required if a nearby landowner allows a feedlot owner to build a liquid manure storage facility closer to the neighbor than the required setback. That documentation must be filed with Marshall County Feedlot Officer Howard Person. If a person wishes to build a new home closer than the setback requirements allow, the feedlot owner will be able to approve or disapprove of that construction.
- "Setbacks for liquid manure apply to all liquid systems regardless of size," according to a handout Person provided to public hearing attendees in June. There are also setbacks for solid manure application; however, there are no setback requirements for solid manure surface spreading near schools, parks, churches, public roads, residences or subdivisions.
- Setbacks are also "required for new and existing manure stockpiles." In addition, according to the proposed ordinance, "Manure may not be applied at any rate greater than the maximum recommended agronomic rate for the crop to be planted and the time of application."
- Manure from feedlots with 500 or more animal units that is transported into Marshall County must

Summer cooking is easy and yummy, so today's recipes are just right for summer eating: Serve the main dishes with a zippy fruit salad and garden greens for a super supper:

This is a wonderful 30-year-old recipe that still makes one of the best cakes ever:

CHOCOLATE MACAROON CAKE

Coconut Mixture

1 egg white
3 tablespoons sugar
2 cups flake coconut, chopped fine
1 tablespoon flour

Cake

4 eggs, separated
1 3/4 cups sugar, divided
1/2 cup shortening
1/2 cup sour cream
2 teaspoons vanilla
1/2 cup brewed coffee
1/4 cup buttermilk
2 cups flour
1/2 cup cocoa
1 teaspoon soda
1 teaspoon salt

Frosting

1 cup semi-sweet chocolate chips, melted and cooled (but not hardened)
3 tablespoons butter, softened
2 cups powdered sugar
5 tablespoons milk

To make coconut mixture, in small bowl, beat egg white on medium speed until soft peaks form. Gradually, on high speed, beat in the 3 tablespoons of sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, until glossy peaks form and sugar is dissolved. Fold in coconut and flour and set aside.

To make egg whites for cake batter, in large bowl beat egg whites on medium until soft peaks form. Gradually beat in 1/2 cup sugar, 1 tablespoon at a time, on high, until stiff, glossy peaks form and sugar is dissolved. Set aside.

In another mixing bowl, cream shortening and remaining sugar. Add egg yolks, sour cream and vanilla and beat until creamy. Combine coffee and buttermilk. Combine flour, cocoa, soda and salt and add to creamed mixture alternately with coffee mixture. Beat until combined. Fold in beaten whites.

Pour half of the batter into an ungreased 10 inch tube pan with removable bottom (angel food pan). Drop coconut filling by spoonfuls over batter. Top with remaining batter.

Bake at 350 degrees for 55-60 minutes or until a toothpick or tester comes out clean. Immediately invert cake on wire rock. Cool completely, about 1 hour. Run a knife around side of pan and remove.

To make frosting, combine frosting ingredients. Beat until smooth and creamy. Spread over top and sides of cake.

Try something really zesty and good for you tonight:

SPINACH HOT DISH

2 1/2 cups uncooked macaroni
1 pound hamburger
1 onion, chopped
2 small carrots, shredded
1 celery stalk, chopped fine
1 (28 ounce) can Italian diced tomatoes, undrained
2 teaspoons salt
1/2 teaspoon garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon dried oregano
1 (10 ounce) package thawed chopped spinach, squeezed dry
1/2 cup grated Parmesan cheese

Cook macaroni according to package directions.

In Dutch oven, cook beef, onions, carrots and celery until meat is no longer pink. Drain. Add tomatoes, salt, garlic powder, pepper and oregano. Bring to a boil, then reduce heat and cover. Simmer 30 minutes, until veggies are tender.

Drain macaroni and add to beef mixture, along with well-drained spinach. Place in greased 3 quart baking dish and sprinkle with Parmesan. Bake, uncovered, at 350 degrees for 25-30 minutes, until heated through and bubbly. Recipe serves about 12 people.

This easy dish is just as good cold as it is hot - great for a picnic:

CHICKEN PARMESAN

1 cup flour
2 teaspoons salt
2 teaspoons paprika
1/4 teaspoon pepper
2 eggs
3 tablespoons milk
2/3 cup grated Parmesan cheese
1/3 cup dry bread crumbs
1 chicken (3-4 pounds), cut up, rinsed and dried

In shallow bowl, combine flour, salt, paprika and pepper.

In another shallow bowl, beat eggs and milk.

In a third bowl, combine Parmesan cheese and bread crumbs.

Coat chicken with flour mixture, then egg mixture, then in crumb mixture. Place in well-greased (or release-foil-lined) 15x10 inch shallow baking pan. Bake at 400 degrees for 50-55 minutes or until chicken juiced run clear. Serves 4.

Peaches are in season, so try this tasty drink with some fresh (or frozen) fruit. It makes a great breakfast drink too. Nutritional info is included:

PEACH SMOOTHIES

1/2 cup peach or apricot nectar
1/2 cup sliced fresh or frozen peaches
1/4 cup vanilla yogurt
2 ice cubes

Combine all ingredients in a blender. Cover and process and serve immediately. Recipe makes 2 drinks.

Nutritional info: One drink (with fat free yogurt) equals 120 calories, trace of fat, 1 mg chol, 29 mg sodium, 29 g carb, 2 g fiber, 2 g protein. Diabetic exchange is 2 fruit.

Foundation provides low-interest loans for water wells

Certain low- to moderate-income individuals or families may be eligible for money to construct, repair or improve household water well systems through 1 percent interest loans from the Foundation for Affordable Drinking Water.

Qualified applicants can borrow up to $8,000 at 1 percent interest for a term not to exceed 20 years. To qualify, households must:

• Own the home and use it as the principal residence
• Have as the primary drinking water source an individual household well system located on the property of the home
• Must meet income and other eligibility requirements
• Be located in a city, town or unincorporated area with a population of less than 50,000.

The program is available in Alabama, Colorado, Idaho, Indiana, Iowa, Kansas, Maine, Massachusetts, Minnesota, Nebraska, New York, North Carolina, Ohio, Tennessee, Texas, Utah, Vermont, Washington, West Virginia and Wisconsin.

The foundation, established by the National Ground Water Association, will not underwrite a loan once a project is under way or has been completed. Most new home construction projects are not eligible.

Another important aspect of the loan program is to educate loan recipients on the importance of regular well maintenance and annual testing of their well system.

Complete information, including application forms and requirements and income eligibility limits, can be accessed at www.ngwa.org and by clicking on the link for the Foundation for Affordable Drinking Water. Applications and additional information can also be obtained by contacting 1-800-551-7379, ext. 544 or by e-mailing Peg Leach at pleach@ngwa.org. Learn more about the program by going to www.wellowner.org and clicking on "Financing."

"Water is essential, and the Foundation is committed to helping those in greatest need," said Paul Humes, foundation director. "If you have a real need and meet the qualifications for this program, we encourage you to apply."

EDITORIAL OPINIONS

Dave Hill, Editor

Editorial opinion published under this heading is intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. TRF Regional Airport is ready for business

The Thief River Falls Regional Airport is a much busier place than many people realize. Regional air carriers hauling passengers come and go, but most of the business generated at the airport comes from commercial planes hauling parts and accessories to and from our major manufacturers in the region. Quite frequently our taxpayers focus on the cost of operating that facility, but it shouldn't be overlooked as an opportunity.

Cirrus, which is the world's leading innovator of single-engine, piston-powered aircraft recently unveiled plans to launch a new jet, which it believes will both create and fulfill a market sector - the realm between high performance single-engine airplanes and the very light jet class.

Last week, DreamCatcher Aviation announced plans to launch a new business that would paint, furnish and refurbish corporate and similar-sized aircraft to meet its customers' specifications. Company officials hope the new business will be headquartered in Bemidji.

Cirrus and DreamCatcher will create jobs and economic opportunities in the communities where they operate. It could happen here, too. Local leaders have entertained the idea of expanding business at the airport, but quite often inspiration and growth comes from individuals living within a community. The Thief River Falls Regional Airport is an economic opportunity waiting to take off. It's time that idea took flight.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

To the Editor:

An innocent man has been accused of a crime. The whole thing is happening because of someone wanting to blame someone else for their mistakes, and they are using Pastor Kindall as a scapegoat so they can get an annulment. The criminal complaint was not true. It said only one hour of counseling was provided when actually five were done with the promise of seven more, and Pastor Kindall offering to go to the couple to provide those hours of counseling. The paper he signed, was signed to save the couple money when they needed.

I'm happy to sign my name in support of a man who's been a great pastor, friend, leader and a person who cares more for the people than just about anyone I've ever met.

Holly Steinhauer
Thief River Falls

To the Editor:

I was saddened to see the article in the July 14 Northern Watch: "Former pastor charged with felony." I've met Pastor Kindall a couple of times, but I can't say I know him personally. His reputation (what little I know of it) is that he has been a good pastor with a good ministry. If the accusations against him are correct, he is guilty of exercising bad judgment. Clay County has chosen to charge him with a felony which, according to the article, carries a maximum penalty of 10 years in prison, a $20,000 fine, or both. Much damage has been done to his reputation and the reputation of the church. It is hard to comprehend the consequences for him if he were to be convicted and receive the maximum penalties.

I don't recall the official name of Minnesota's program for reduced marriage license fees (the article refers to a "reduced marriage fee educator statement"), but I haven't liked the program from the first time I heard of it.

Throughout the years of my ministry (ordained in 1978), I have conducted pre-marriage classes with couples who came to me to be married, and I continue to do so. Some couples have been more cooperative than others. At first glance, a financial incentive from the state encouraging cooperation might seem to be a gift to conscientious pastors, but there is no such thing as a free lunch.

My premarital counseling has focused on biblical teaching about marriage and family. I'm a pastor; biblical teaching is my focus in everything. To qualify for the state's marriage license discount, I would have to permit the state to make changes to my curriculum. Some might argue that the state's requirements were good and beneficial. Regardless, it is a very uncomfortable precedent to have the state telling the church what to teach. I didn't want any part of it.

When the program was introduced, pastors were invited to attend a training session. If I recall correctly, there was some implication that attendance was a requirement for participation – though I could be wrong about that. Either way, I chose not to go. I thought that if I was not qualified to participate, it would not be an issue with people coming to me to be married. I was wrong. Couples came saying they were urged to get a signature. They were told that any pastor could sign, and any premarital counseling qualified. One couple, that I sent back without a signature, was sent back to me again with the message, "Just sign." In a couple of cases, I actually paid the license fee myself to get them off my back.

If every pastor who signed without conducting 12 full hours and/or without using approved materials was prosecuted, I suspect the courts would be busy for quite a long time. For anyone so charged, "entrapment" might make a good defense, because that has been the result of the state's effort regardless of how well-intentioned the state might have been. For this, and for what could easily be construed as a clerical error, the reputation, and perhaps the life, of a good pastor is being destroyed. Clay County prosecutors need to rethink their actions here.

Rural Reflections

Grant Nelson

Square Corners

Today's column may, at first, read a bit like one of my "do it yourself" columns. It's not. I just want to tell you about the work I enjoy that keeps my cattle from roaming ranges other than those we own.

First off, I despise fixing fences. This is probably the reason why I build a good fence that rarely needs attention. A well-built, electric fence should last decades, which means that the next person to work on my fence, will do so seated in a flying saucer. Good fence is also a nice reflection of its builder - square corners, straight line posts and taught wire say that this guy cares about what he builds. The corner posts of a fence should take up approximately half of the total build time for a fence because they are that important. I shudder when I see corner posts slowly angling their way up and out of the ground. It's a shame really, the builders have paid money for treated posts, guy wires and hardware, yet their corners fail because they didn't dig the holes below the frost line. It reminds me of married people kissing on the cheek instead of the lips - it lacks commitment. I mean, if you are going to dig in corner posts you better not lose interest at two-and-a-half feet (can you feel my anger?), but rather "gut it out" until you reach four feet. When I think of good corner posts, I think of my cousin Scott Olson. His corners boom the phrase "warrior-poet" loudly, and even after several years of service because they are square. Dale Nelson also has some excellent corners that are bit heavy enough that even though one of his bracing wires recently snapped, it still is doing the job for which it was built.

Fence means so much more to me than "cattle corralled" as opposed to "cattle gone wild" even though confinement is its purpose. Fence marks the border of your land and makes for good neighbors. Fence defines its builder better than the builder could define himself - obsessive or sloppy, creative or reserved, industrial or natural. Farmers are traditionally friendly to wildlife and you'll find evidence of this every time you spot a birdhouse mounted on a fence post. Recently, I've spotted fence used to prevent cattle from entering ponds and rivers to improve water quality, which tells me cattle farmers are a conscientious bunch. It's apparent that men are not the only ones involved in fence design; a woman's touch is evidenced in the figurines, iron rosettes, flowers and upside-down cowboy boots you'll occasionally see nailed to or buried next to fence posts.

I get a little nostalgic and romantic (and wordy) when I think about fence. I stand at the corner of our land and clearly see its borders marked by fence I built, and I feel good and settled and accomplished. My holes dig easier because the post-hole tool I use was given to me by my old friend, Lloyd Noreen, prior to his passing. He had put it to much use over time, but told me that at his age, he "never wanted to see a railroad tie again." While I've replaced the handles three times, the steel digger part is still original, so it feels good to work with my old buddy's huddy. Fencing is a good subject of conversation, but talk doesn't mean much and it certainly won't hold cattle; better go find my little buddy.

Rydell to show "Growing up Grizzly"

On Sunday, July 29 at 2 p.m., Rydell National Wildlife Refuge will show a video called "Growing up Grizzly" for the Learning at the Lakes Program.

The video is about Doug and Lynne Seus, who lead interesting lives at the foot of the Rocky Mountains in northern Utah. For nearly 30 years, the Seuses have raised orphaned grizzlies, including the big screen's most famous bear, Bart. Hosted by Brod Pitt, this video follows orphaned twins Honey-Bump and Little Bart through their first year of life with the Seusses as they grow and discover the world around them – their first swim, their first drive into town for ice cream and their first time on a movie set.

To get to the Rydell Refuge, go three miles east of Mentor or three miles west of Erskine on U.S. Highway 2 and turn south on Polk County Road 210. Follow County Road 210 about 2½ miles south to the large entrance sign and main gate of the refuge. For more information, contact the Rydell Refuge at 1-800-841-0172 or (218) 687-2229.

Michael Benedict was all smiles as he rounded third base and received a handshake from Thief River Falls coach Courtney Skjerven following a game-winning sixth inning grand slam home run in the Bandits' come-from-behind 16-13 victory over Fergus Falls in the first half of Wednesday's American Legion baseball doubleheader. Post 117 completed the sweep with a 7-5 Game 2 decision.

Bandits beat Fergus Falls in American Legion baseball...

TRF rally nets 16-13 win

Best way to describe the first half of Wednesday's Thief River Falls vs. Fergus Falls American Legion baseball doubleheader was 'interesting.' Very interesting. The host Bandits wound up with a 16-13 win in a see-saw game that featured an early lead, a seemingly insurmountable deficit and a dramatic late-game rally.

Thief River Falls banged out four first inning hits, including doubles on consecutive pitches by Lucas Genereux and Sean Sorteberg, for a 4-1 advantage.

But six Post 117 errors in the first two innings allowed Fergus Falls to go ahead 6-4 following a three-run Nick Lewis home run. All six runs were unearned.

Fergus Falls appeared to have the game in hand when the visitors put together six singles to score a half-dozen fifth inning runs for a 13-5 cushion. Driving in runs were Andrew Anderson, Travis Swiontek, Matt Duenow and Connor Kerr.

Thief River Falls got two of those runs back in the bottom of the inning, then hit two home runs in a nine-run sixth that capped the comeback.

Michael Benedict and Genereux drew back-to-back walks to open the sixth. Sorteberg followed with a first-pitch three-run home run over the left field fence, giving him five RBI for the game and pulling the Bandits within 13-10.

An infield single by Eric Blix and walks issued to Patrick Barry and Michael Blix loaded the bases. Sam Mattison hit a first-pitch single to left for a run and Tomas Heaton's fourth hit of the game made it 13-12.

Fergus Falls finally got an out when the ninth batter of the inning popped up. Benedict was the next hitter and he sent the ball over the left field fence for a grand slam home run and a 16-13 lead.

A Swiontek home run helped stake Fergus Falls to a 4-1 lead in Game 2.

But after giving up three runs in the top of the fourth, Thief River Falls came right back with four runs in the bottom of the inning and went on to win 7-5 for a sweep.

Jake Collins and Nick Gagner opened the Bandits' fourth with singles. Dan Nelson advanced the runners with a sacrifice bunt. Base hits by Heaton, Jordan Espeseth and Benedict produced the runs.

Fergus Falls loaded the bases with nobody out in the seventh, but Heaton, who had a 6-for-7 doubleheader at the plate, got out of the jam with clutch pitching that included a strike-out, foul-out and another strike-out.

"I was very happy with the way we hit today," said Thief River Falls coach Courtney Skjerven. "We came back; we never gave up. Our pitchers also did well, but our defense was not good at all. We really need to get more consistent defensively before districts."

The two Ninth District wins pushed Thief River Falls' record to 18-9. It was the final home appearance of the year for the Bandits, who finish the regular season schedule with doubleheaders on the road against Bemidji, East Grand Forks and Roseau.

Ninth District tournament will be played Aug. 1-6 at Roseau.

Moorhead is the defending Ninth District Division I champion.

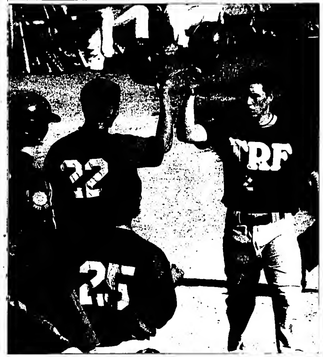
Mike Stromberg-conducted Best Darn Swim Clinic will be held Monday-Wednesday, Aug. 6-8, at the Franklin Middle School pool in Thief River Falls.

Swimmers will be divided into age groups based upon the grade they will be entering in the fall of 2007: middle school for grades 8-under and high school for grades 9-12.

Tentative schedule will feature sessions for middle school swimmers from 9 to 11:30 a.m. and for high school swimmers from 1 to 3:30 p.m. There is a minimum requirement of 20 swimmers. The number of registered swimmers in each age group will determine the exact schedule.



Cost is $135 per swimmer if paid by July 23 and $155 if paid after that day. The fee includes a camp shirt. Checks should be payable to the TRF Swim Club and sent to TRF Swim Club, P.O. Box 244, Thief River Falls, MN 56701.

Stromberg coached 21 seasons at the University of North Dakota and was named NCAA Division II National Women's Coach of the Year in 1989 and 1999. In 1996, the American Swim Coaches Association selected him as one of the Top 100 swim coaches in the country. Under his guidance, UND swimmers won 38 NCAA national titles and 668 of them earned All-America honors.

For additional clinic information, call Lacy Knott at 218-253-4797.

Fergus Falls runner Matt Duenow went head-first into the second base bag for a first inning stolen base during Wednesday's American Legion baseball doubleheader opener. The throw bounced past Bandits shortstop Patrick Barry on the play. Post 117 won both games, 16-13 and 7-5.

Sean Sorteberg (right) was met with a helmet-tapping greeting at home plate by Lucas Genereux and the rest of his Thief River Falls teammates after hitting a three-run home run to ignite a nine-run sixth inning rally that carried the Bandits past Fergus Falls 16-13 in the first half of an American Legion baseball twinbill played Wednesday at the Multi-Events Center.

Bandits, Blues split twinbill

Winning pitchers Cody Conners and Ryan Johnson both threw low-hit gems Tuesday as Thief River Falls and Moorhead split a Ninth District American Legion baseball doubleheader at Matson Field.

Conners gave up only three hits and a third inning run in a 4-1 Thief River Falls Game 1 victory.

Johnson recorded a four-hit shutout in the nightcap in the Blues' 5-0 win.

Moorhead's Kyle VanDyke stopped Thief River Falls without a hit through four innings in the opener, but the Bandits got to him for nine hits over the final three innings to support Conners. The visitors erased a 1-0 deficit with two runs in the sixth and doubled their offensive output in the seventh.

"This was the most complete game we've played all year," reported Thief River Falls coach Courtney Skjerven. "Cody shut down a great-hitting team and our defense was solid."

Three fifth inning runs secured a Game 2 win for the Blues.

"We could never get anything going offensively," offered Skjerven. "We hung in there until the fifth. They put a few hits together, and we could not answer."

The Blues, who swept the Bandits earlier this year 19-8 and 7-3, went to 31-6 with the rematch split.

Roseau County Sheriff's Office investigates theft

Two juveniles were apprehended early Tuesday morning after they were allegedly involved in the theft of two three-wheelers from a rural Salol resident.

A press release from the Roseau County Sheriff's Office doesn't indicate the juveniles' ages or cities of residence. It also doesn't indicate whether they are male or female. As of press time Friday morning, Sheriff Jule Hanson hadn't returned a message from the Northern Watch.

The press release indicates the case remains under investigation and will be passed onto the Roseau County Attorney's Office following its completion.

The case stems from a report from the John Casavan residence at about 1:43 a.m. Tuesday. At that time, someone from the Casavan residence reported that two people were in the yard and stealing two three-wheelers. Deputies were dispatched to the scene, along with the Minnesota State Patrol, U.S. Border Patrol and Roseau Police Department. Law enforcement followed tracks allegedly made by the suspects and found a pickup truck. It was stuck on a minimum maintenance road, and one of the stolen three-wheelers was found nearby. The other three-wheeler was found a short distance away from the Casavan residence. A short time later, the two juveniles were apprehended and brought to the Roseau County Law Enforcement Center.

No injuries after Roseau Co. accident

No injuries were reported after an accident early Friday morning in Roseau County.

At the time of the accident, Chad Skeim of Thief River Falls was driving a 1999 Dodge Caravan southbound on Roseau County Road 9 in Reine Township. According to a press release from the Roseau County Sheriff's Department, a deer ran out in front of Skeim's vehicle. Skeim swerved to miss the deer, entered the ditch on the east side of the road and tipped the vehicle on its side.

The sheriff's department was dispatched to the scene at 12:30 a.m. Friday.

establishing a TIF district for the proposed complex. The amount of time for the proposed TIF district would be determined at a later date, Jesh said he has had TIF districts that span anywhere from 15 to 25 years.

During the life of a TIF district, taxes continue to be collected. However, a portion of the taxes – specifically, those taxes that would have been generated from the development of the property – is set aside to pay for improvements. This is where tax increment comes into play. The tax increment is the comparative market value of the developed property minus the value of the undeveloped property. This has not yet been determined for the property that Jesh wishes to purchase. While the district is in place, the value of the original and undeveloped property would continue to go to the city, county and school district. The remaining amount would be used toward infrastructure.

With TIF, the county and school district are able to review the matter and provide comments. However, the county and school district's portions of the taxes, minus the original amount collected, would be used as tax increment.

Other taxpayers do not subsidize TIF; however, there is a delay in placing the affected property on the tax rolls.

At the Committee of the Whole meeting, Jesh said he met with Moore and human resources professionals from both Arctic Cat and Digi-Key in October. Those individuals indicated to Jesh that there is an ongoing need for market-rate housing for Arctic Cat and Digi-Key employees.

A lot of rental housing listed in Thief River Falls is old, Jesh said. Some are smaller rental properties and some are above commercial properties. He referred to a 2005 study of housing in Thief River Falls. That study found that the last general occupancy market-rate rental project, Summerfield Place Townhomes, was constructed in 1994.

A number of developers have tried to construct apartment complexes in Thief River Falls. A local company, together with a Fergus Falls area developer, planned to construct a complex two or three years ago, said Moore, who noted a number of issues prevented that company from doing so.

Developers from Grand Forks, N.D.; Thief River Falls; Roseau and Moorhead have tried to build multi-family housing in Thief River Falls, added Moore. Yet, that never happened.

Moore said, "There's just no one else out there, and housing continues to be an issue."

The Committee of the Whole heard about the possibility of annexing properties that are totally surrounded by the city. The request to annex those properties was precipitated by a request to annex a property in Gilbert Industrial Park, according to Moore. That property, which is currently owned by Larry Spong, is located in Rocksbury Township. Spong intends to sell that property to Paul Olson. Moore was under the impression that Olson plans to build a storage facility that includes bedrooms. However, bedrooms are not a permitted use under the property's zoning.

In addition to that property, the committee heard about the possibility of annexing Pennington Avenue and Efta Court properties that are currently located in Rocksbury Township. Those properties are also totally surrounded by the city.

The Pennington Avenue and Efta Court property owners met with the Thief River Falls Planning Commission on Monday. "There's still research that needs to be done and answers that need to be provided to these individuals," Moore said.

The Committee of the Whole directed Moore and City Attorney Paul Ihle to speak with the Rocksbury Township Board about the possibility of the annexation of the aforementioned properties.

Forty-five youth and mentors from Northwest Community Action's Youth Intervention Program traveled to the Metrodome on July 13 to watch the Minnesota Twins play the Oakland A's. The kids had a great time watching the Minnesota Twins win the game, 5-3. This trip was made possible by the generous support of community organizations. armory. The Minnesota National Guard will track progress on its Web site: http://www.minnesotanationalguard.org.

The support from home towns across Minnesota has been inspirational, and officials say they are grateful to all the communities that are eager to give our troops a proper reception.

There is a process. First, there is the "initial reunion" that will take place when the motor coach arrives at the local armory from Ft. McCoy. Next, there is a "welcome home ceremony" that will take place after the troops return.

For this "initial reunion," when the units arrive at their home armories, their instructions are clear: get off the bus, march on to the drill floor, and dismiss the troops so they can immediately be with their families. While the Minnesota National Guard encourages as many members of each hometown to turn up and show their support for their soldiers, the Minnesota National Guard strongly discourages any formal program during this initial reunion. They want the soldiers to be with their families.

Marshall Co. approves feedlot ordinance have a manure management plan approved.

The ordinance was the final step in a process that began in September. At that time, some neighbors voiced their opposition to the reopening of Excel Dairy in Excel Township. (Excel Dairy has since reopened.) At that time, the county board voted against an interim law that would have regulated feedlots. Instead, it appointed a committee to study whether the county should have a permanent ordinance to regulate feedlots. The committee then worked on drafting the ordinance, which has since been approved.

Airport in TRF gets major grant funding

• $500,028 for Thief River Falls Regional to acquire snow removal equipment to enhance the safety and operation of the airport during winter months

Last month, Sen. Coleman sent a letter to the U.S. Dept. of Transportation requesting that the City of Thief River Falls receive "Essential Air Service" designation, which would ensure continued air service between Thief River Falls Regional Airport and Minneapolis/St. Paul International Airport. The Department of Transportation has announced they would continue the EAS designation and service between the Cities, with Mesaba Aviation providing 12 one-stop round trips per week to Minneapolis-St. Paul from Thief River Falls, would continue from now through June 1, 2009.

The FAA's Airport Improvement Program provides grants to public and private airports to promote the development and modernization of local airports.

Then ... and now

Henry's son Howard began operating the business in the mid-1940s, after his military service ended. During Howard's tenure at the store, the business joined Hardware Hank United in 1959. It also gained space. It took over the former Middle River Post Office, when it moved to its current location in the 1960s.

About 20 years ago, the business took over another nearby building, which housed such businesses as a grocery store, a hardware store, an insurance agency and a beauty shop in the past. At that time, an addition was constructed to connect the two buildings.

"We've been able to add more and more things," said Steve, who noted Young's General Store began selling more health and beauty aids after Middle River's drugstore closed about 20 years ago. It also began selling more hardware items around that time, which was when Middle River's hardware store closed.

Patsy, Bobbi, Steve and Lorene all joined Young's General Store on a regular basis in the 1970s. Steve began working at Young's after teaching industrial arts in Oklee. He still enjoys working at Young's. "You meet a lot of nice people," Steve said.

And they meet a lot of people from Middle River, the surrounding area, other states and even other countries. Lorene and Steve recalled customers visiting from such places as Japan, Ghana, Germany, Norway and Sweden. Those visitors joined the many customers who signed the business' guest book. Other customers don't sign it because they visit so often.

And many customers have had memorable moments at the store or because of the store. Steve recalled that at least one man bought his wedding shoes from the store. Another customer, a priest who was preaching in Greenbush, needed new shoes one memorable Sunday. As he was about to give his sermon, he told parishioners, "Like they said, 'If they don't have it, you don't need it.'" will be served at the park's swimming area. The Marshall County Historical Society is providing the ice cream in celebration of the old-time creamery picnics that were once held at the park.

Old Mill State Park is located on Marshall County Road 39. From Newfolden, go approximately 11 miles west on Marshall County Road 4 to County Road 39. From Warren, take Marshall County Road 3 northeast for approximately 17 miles and watch for signs to the park.

All programs are free and open to the public, however a Minnesota state park vehicle permit is required to enter the park. Permits can be purchased at the park office.

Return to committee structure?

TRF Council discusses whether to change its committee structure again

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

For seven months, the Thief River Falls City Council has operated under a new committee structure. Now, it may change that structure yet again.

At the July 24 council meeting, council member Ken Schmalz suggested that the council should think about changing back to its old committee structure. Council members are expected to discuss that proposal at their Committee of the Whole meeting on July 31 at 4:30 p.m. at City Hall.

At the council meeting, Schmalz indicated that it would be nice to have a small committee at times. Schmalz added that he felt the council was losing some communication with city staff under its new committee system.

Why is the council losing communication with staff, asked council member Emery Lee.

Some personnel issues are harder to bring up with this system, Schmalz replied.

In addition and apparently referring to the public, Schmalz noted that few people attend council meetings or Committee of the Whole meetings. Schmalz indicated that some people attended smaller committee meetings.

(Typically, attendees were individuals directly affected by a particular issue on the council or committee's agenda, or they were candidates who were in the process of running for council seats.)

The Parks and Recreation Committee received the most attention from the public. The public seemed to attend more meetings related to issues regarding parks and recreation, according to City Administrator Jodie Torkelson.

Council member Glen Kajewski noted that some of those issues should have been handled by management, not the committee.

If the council changed its committee structure, it would be the second time in less than a year. In January, the council overhauled the committee structure and the council schedule. Around that time, it also voted to broadcast its council and Committee of the Whole meetings on TV. (City leaders encountered some technical difficulties while attempting to broadcast the meetings. However, those difficulties have apparently been resolved, and the meetings will again be broadcast Thursdays at 8 p.m. on Cable Channel 13.)

For many years in the past, City Council had committees for public utilities, parks and recreation/public safety, and administrative services. With the exception of the Public Utilities Committee, the committees met twice a month. The Public Utilities Committee met once a month. City Council has also had an

Co. Board reappoints two to watershed panel

Warren - "Doug Sorenson of Warren and John Nelson of Oslo were appointed to additional three-year terms on the local watershed district by the Marshall County Board of Commissioners at its meeting Tuesday, July 17.

"The two men are among the seven members of the Middle River-Snake-Tamarac Rivers Watershed District Board of Managers. They, along with Norman Lindemoen of Newfolden, had requested appointment to three-year terms on the watershed board. After interviewing the three candidates and hearing comments from several watershed representatives and members of the public, the county board voted to reappoint Nelson and Sorenson on a motion by Gary Kiesow, with a second by LeRoy Vonasek." - Warren Sheaf, July 25, 2007

Rehab equipment available on loan

Middle River - The American Legion Auxiliary Unit 444 of Middle River has organized a building full of rehab equipment.

"The purpose is to provide hospital, medical or rehab equipment for the community and surrounding area. ... Use is not restricted to veterans but is available for any community members, young or old.

"The equipment is available on loan. Much of it has been donated to the organization, but some has also been purchased by the Past Presidents Parley." A Rehab Fund has been established. "The organization will accept either monetary or physical (equipment) donations."

"Available equipment includes hospital beds, wheelchairs, toilet lifts and extenders, shower chairs, a variety of styles of crutches (metal and wood), and bed pans. The most recent donation has been a recliner lift chair."

"If you are in need of this type of equipment, the service is provided free of charge. Contact Judie Johnson at 222-3572 or call Donovan Ruud at the American Legion, 222-3538, to make an appointment to pick up equipment." - The Tribune of Greenbush, June 25, 2007, by Barb Geer

"The Hogwarts Express" visit

Rainy River, Ontario, Canada - "On Friday, July 20, the Hogwarts Express made a midnight stop at the historic train depot in Rainy River, Ontario, Canada.

"The depot, particularly Platform 9¾, was to be the site of the eagerly awaited Harry Potter book party, celebrating the release of the seventh and final book in the series by J.K. Rowling.

"The book, 'Harry Potter and the Deathly Hallows,' was to be released at midnight, and thanks to the hardworking team of the Rainy River and Baudette libraries, eight lucky partygoers would be receiving a copy.

"Guests were already lined up outside when the doors to the depot opened at 10 p.m." Guests were "greeted by two students from the Hogwarts School of Witchcraft and Wizardry who issued them a ticket to the train. Upon entering the building, guests found themselves in the presence of several memorable characters." - Northern Light of Baudette, July 25, 2007, by Rita Skeeter (a.k.a. Sarah Palm)

Benji's Wish ...

Rural Strathcona boy gets his wish to manage The Twins

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

Benji Wilebski denies that he is a "sports nut." Maybe "Minnesota Twins nut" would be a more apt description. When the Make-A-Wish Foundation came calling, it was only fitting that Benji would be the manager of the Twins for a day.

"It was a good experience," said the rural Strathcona resident, who wishes he could do it again.

Benji, 9, and his family left the Metrodome with lasting memories and plenty of pictures. While Benji's wish was granted, his parents hope their own wish will be granted. "Our wish is for him to stay healthy and grow older, and that he lives to be an old age," said his mom, Sue.

It has been said that 9-year-old Benji and his family endured a roller coaster ride to get to that moment July 17, when many memories were made at the Metrodome.

The health problems begin

It was a far cry from what began Dec. 9, 2005. Benji, who was then about 7½ years old, was suffering from strep throat. "Over the month, he had three courses of antibiotics, and it wasn't making his tonsils better, actually one was better and one was still swollen," Sue remembered.

Later that month, Benji suffered from an ear infection and was prescribed ear drops. His primary physician initially thought that Benji's tonsils or adenoids were causing the problems and suggested that Benji should possibly have them removed sometime in the near future. The family waited.

Benji's parents, John Jr. and Sue, are thankful that they waited. During surgery, Benji would likely have bled to death. It would be another month until they learned what was causing the strep throat.

In the meantime, Benji's health problems continued. On Jan. 8, 2006, Benji had ear pain even though he shouldn't have had any ear pain. The next day, he was taken to the ER. The doctor prescribed IV antibiotics and steroids, and ordered a CT scan. When the results came back from the CT scan, it was suspected that Benji had cancer. That night, Benji and his family made their way to Children's Hospital in Minneapolis.

On Jan. 9, Benji saw an ear, nose and throat specialist there. The specialist planned to do an MRI and another CT scan the next day. Benji's parents convinced the specialist to do it that day. "He didn't really look like a sick child," said Sue, who noted that was the reason why the specialist wasn't too concerned.

Bird baths, garden gnomes and plastic flamingos need to watch out for this

by Scott DCamp
Reporter

Bird baths, garden gnomes and plastic flamingos need to watch out, because they have some big competition in the world of lawn ornaments.

Lawn ornaments are defined as decorative objects placed in the grassy area of a property and Wright Construction owner Randy Wright has a rather large and heavy decoration that has caught the eye of many driving by the Wright Construction shop on Highway 59 north of Thief River Falls.

In late May, the Highway 59 shop began showcasing a very visible and very heavy 1956 Caterpillar D9 Bulldozer. The gigantic dozer weighs in excess of 88,000 pounds and since it has engine problems, Wright refers to it as his new lawn ornament.

"It's the heaviest duty lawn ornament you'll ever see," Wright said. "It's not going anywhere."

The 44-ton machine hasn't run in over 20 years and it was just sitting in Oslo. Wright was asked to haul the 51-year-old machine out for scrap metal, but when he arrived for the pick-up, he had a change of heart and decided that he wanted to keep the classic dozer as a collectors item.

"Instead of making $1,500 on it, I hauled it out for nothing and paid $3,000 to keep it," Wright said. "You just don't find that many of these around anymore."

Caterpillar D-9s from the 1950s were typically used for large mining and heavy tree or brush clearing operations, Wright said. They also had a limited role in road construction.

The D9 is big for a tractor today, but it dwarfed the tractors of its day. Wright said a big tractor in the 1950s was a 50 horse. The D-9 had a 90-horse power motor that's only purpose was to start the 325-horse power main engine.

Wright planned to store the 44-ton machine at his construction company's shop north of Thief River Falls, but transporting it there proved to be quite a task.

A second bulldozer, a D-6, was

This 1956 Caterpillar D9 has drawn a lot of attention from motorists passing by Wright Construction's shop on Highway 59 north of Thief River Falls. Randy Wright purchased the 44-ton bulldozer in May.

SOUPÇON

Sherry LaCoursiere

Summer is the time for lighter meals and meals made with fresh grown produce. Try some of these for a brunch or light supper.

SEVEN LAYER BEAN DIP

1 can refried beans
1 package taco seasoning mix
1 (8 ounce) package cream cheese, softened
1 (4.5 ounce) can chopped green chiles
1 cup salsa
2 cups shredded lettuce
2 cups shredded cheese (Cheddar or Mexican blend)
1 small can sliced ripe olives, drained
1 medium tomato, diced (3/4 cup)
Tortilla chips

In medium bowl, stir refried beans and taco seasoning mix. Spread mixture on large platter.

In another medium bowl, stir together cream cheese and chiles. Carefully spread over bean layer.

Top with layers of salsa, lettuce, cheese, olives and tomato. Refrigerate. Serve with tortilla chips, or, for alternative dippers, sliced jicama, bell pepper or zucchini.

Nutritional Info: Recipe serves about 16 with 1/2 cup servings each. One serving equals 150 calories, 30 mg chol, 750 mg sodium, 9 g carb, 6 g protein, with diabetic exchange 1/2 other carb, .0 vegetable, 1 high fat meat, 1/2 fat.

Yummy things from the garden go into this salad:

CUCUMBER & DILL PASTA SALAD

2 cups pasta (any kind)
2 cups cucumber, peeled, seeded and chopped
1 cup chopped tomatoes
1 cup low fat sour cream
1/2 cup skim milk
1 tablespoon chopped fresh dill weed
1/2 teaspoon coarse ground black pepper
1/2 teaspoon salt
1 tablespoon white vinegar

Cook pasta al dente as directed on package. Drain and rinse in cold water. Place in large bowl.

In separate bowl mix sour cream, milk, dill, vinegar, salt and pepper. Set dressing aside.

Mix cucumbers and tomatoes into the pasta. Pour in dressing and mix well. Cover and refrigerate at least 1 hour, preferably overnight. Stir just before serving.

You can't get much easier than this - serve with fresh vegetables too. It's great with grilled hot dogs or other sausages:

CHILI CHEESE DIP

1 (8 ounce) package cream cheese, softened
1 can chili with beans
1 pinch chili powder
1/2 tablespoon white sugar
1 (16 ounce) package corn chips

Cover cream cheese with chili in 1 1/2 quart micro safe casserole dish. Cover and microwave until chili and cream cheese stir together easily and become hot and bubbly. Add chili powder and sugar and serve hot with chips.

There's nothing like a new potato salad to liven things up. Use fresh garden potatoes, onions and dill for a real treat:

DILLY POTATO SALAD

2 pounds red potatoes, diced
6 hard cooked eggs, chopped
1 cup nonfat plain yogurt
3 tablespoons fat free mayonnaise
1/4 cup chopped green onions
1 teaspoon Dijon mustard
1 teaspoon dried dill weed (or a bit extra if dill is fresh)
1 teaspoon garlic powder

Boil potatoes until tender but still firm, about 15 minutes. Drain and set aside to cool. In large bowl, combine potatoes and eggs.

Mix yogurt, mayonnaise, onions, mustard, dill and garlic powder. Pour dressing over potatoes and eggs and toss lightly. Chill until ready to serve.

What to do with that zucchini? Make this cake for your block party - it should serve everybody. Nobody will guess it has zucchini in it either:

DOUBLE CHOCOLATE ZUCCHINI BUNDT CAKE

3 1/2 cups flour
1/4 to 1/3 cup cocoa
1 teaspoon soda
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
1/2 teaspoon salt
2 cups sugar
1 cup oil
4 eggs
2 teaspoons vanilla
3/4 cup sour cream
2 cups peeled, grated zucchini (about two 6-inches each), squeezed dry

Ganache

1 (12 ounce) package mini chips
1 tablespoon flour
1/3 cup whipping cream

Preheat oven to 350 degrees. Coat Bundt pan with spray.

Peel and grate zucchini and squeeze as dry as possible in sieve.

Combine flour, cocoa, soda, baking powder and salt. Set aside.

Beat sugar and oil on medium for about 1 minute. Beat in eggs and vanilla. On low, alternately beat in flour mixture and sour cream. Beat 2 minutes on medium high.

Stir in zucchini by hand. Mix 1 cup mini chips with flour and fold into mixture. Pour into prepared Bundt pan. Bake 60-65 minutes until cake tests done. Remove from oven and set on rack. Cool 30 minutes, then remove from pan to rack. Cook completely.

Ganache: Melt 3/4 cup chocolate chips. Heat the whipping cream. Combine the two thoroughly with a whisk or by hand. Glaze cake, letting the ganache run down sides. (Can place cooled cake on large jelly roll pan to catch excess frosting and use it to refrost.)

Rural Reflections

Grant Nelson

The comments published in this column are intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. They are written by independent columnists and do not represent the opinion of the staff or management of The Times/Northern Watch.

Dear Dave,

I am going to write this letter using our sister's (sweet, insane Deb) style of conversation. What that means is that I will allow the end of each sentence to remind me of something with which to start the next sentence, which removes all responsibility of sustaining a conversation from your shoulders and transfers it to mine.

I have exciting, surprising news. Lisa and I plan to travel this fall. This trip calls for us to stay away several nights, which for me is like taking a trip to the moon. Lisa, Mother Walseth, our friend Teresa and I, will travel to Teresa's home state of Idaho during which our itinerary will take us through many western states. I will need a mental crotch to ease the anxiety of a week during which I never see my own bed or my pillow. In this case that something will be our close group of friends and my old Winnie the Pooh stuffed animal toy. (I'm kidding – Winnie stays at home)

Kurt Nelson recently brought me a surprise while I was at work, a Charlie Weaver toy doll; you may remember Charlie from "the Tonight Show" or "Hollywood Squares." The doll pretends to mix a martini, then drinks it, which causes steam to billow from its ears; although, without batteries, he's done little so far in our relationship. The toy is quite old and the fact it was originally sold to kids to show how much people have changed in the last 40 years. Kurt knows I like old things, but I really don't understand why I like them. It's not because I'm sentimental for better times, because these are my best times. I think it's more about remembering the person I was at that age, and the things I wanted out of life, at a time when I'd yet to make compromises and anything seemed attainable. If I can make contact with youthful dreams, I can then marry them to the abilities I've gained with maturity and make them happen, or maybe I'll just enjoy my new toy from way back when.

Speaking of old times, I happened upon a 1977 yearbook from the high school, which did make me sentimental for the old times or more specifically other people's old times. I was only 12 in 1977, but I idolized the older kids, so the times seems oddly precious to me. The pictures of men wearing long hair while most of the girls had Dorothy Hamill bobs took me back almost as much as the picture of an actual school nurse with that huge nurse cap they wore back in the day. It was quite coincidental that the Lincoln High School Class of 1977 is staging its reunion this weekend. They are now at an age where they maybe really could use an on-site nurse.

This weekend will also see a reunion of a different type, families reunited. Our National Guard soldiers are returning after they've been at war for a total of 22 months (six stateside) during the war in Iraq. Lisa and I tried to remember what we were doing two years ago and could find few events to mark the incredible distance between now and then. It's been such a long time but the "Red Bulls" will soon be home. I hope we've taken care of their country while they've been taking care of us.

Finally, I wanted to send you a picture of a our own farm's "Red Bull," this one is also at peace now and eating grass in our pasture. He's never seen confinement, steroids, antibiotics or feed that makes his stomach hurt; take a look at him - he obviously needs none of these things. He's also a little camera shy, so I made like a paparazzi shooting Sean Penn after this shot.

Hope all is well your way in Carrington, N.D.

measuring 5 inches by 3 inches by 3 inches deep. It was at the base of Benji's skull, next to his spine and wrapped around his carotid artery.

That day, a Monday, Benji's parents learned surgery wasn't an option for him. Benji underwent a biopsy the next day.

Then the waiting began. "I said it was like we were going on a roller coaster that was out of control and we were blindfolded," recalled Sue.

A diagnosis

Late Thursday, John and Sue learned that Benji had Burkitt's lymphoma. Once they received the diagnosis, Sue recalled saying that the roller coaster was still out of control but at least the blindfolds had been removed.

Burkitt's lymphoma is a form of cancer. "It's very rare," John said.

The disease is aggressive. "They don't know exact dates. They think he had it for a month," Sue said.

In that month, the cancer had spread to his bone marrow and to a lymph gland in his abdomen. Benji had Stage 3 of Burkitt's lymphoma. There are only four stages of the disease.

At the same time that they learned the diagnosis, Benji's parents learned he could fight the disease with chemotherapy.

It would be tough for anyone to handle that diagnosis and that course of treatment, but how does anyone explain it all to a 7½-year-old? Benji's parents were honest with him, and he asked one of the hardest questions that a parent may ever have to answer. "He asked point blank," Sue recalled. Benji asked if he was going to die.

John and Sue laid it on the line. They told him there were special people in heaven, including his aunt Cindy Rath and two family friends, 15-year-old Cole Dahlen and 12-year-old Levi Langaas. They would look after Benji, his parents told him.

Benji's parents knew there was a fight ahead – a fight against cancer. They prepared Benji for it in the way a 7½-year-old sports fan would understand.

"We had told him this would be the biggest game of his life," Sue said.

"The Super Bowl or the biggest game he'd have to do," John said.

Benji took it like a champ. He did whatever he needed to do, Sue said. Benji began chemotherapy on Friday, Jan. 13, 2006. His mom stayed at his side in Minneapolis. His dad, his older brother, John III, and sometimes his younger sister, Hannah, made the trip to Minneapolis on weekends. They stayed at the Ronald McDonald House.

Benji was able to go home to northwest Minnesota that February with the help of Dr. Joanna Perkins and Dr. Bryon VandeWege, his doctors in Minneapolis and Roseau, respectively.

Benji wasn't out of the woods yet. His family traveled many times to and from both Children's Hospital and Roseau Area Hospital. He underwent chemotherapy in Minneapolis. Then he'd return home for four or five days. Usually at some point during his stay at home, Benji would suffer from a fever and mouth sores. Then he would be placed in an isolation chamber at RAH, usually spending about five days there. Then the cycle would continue. The cycle ended in May 2006.

When Benji was at home, his parents tried to coax him into eating anything he wanted. If Benji's weight had dropped below 42 pounds, he would have needed a feeding tube. His lowest weight was 42.7 pounds.

Through it all, Benji continued doing his schoolwork from Goodridge School. Benji's second grade teacher, Lois Anderson, would send Benji's schoolwork home with his dad, who teaches physical education and health at the school.

Benji went back to Goodridge School in May 2006, shortly after the chemotherapy ended. Benji, who was completing the second grade that year, returned to school with a bald head. His classmates wore caps or scarves in support of him.

After the chemotherapy ended, Benji took antibiotics for three months to prevent pneumonia as his immune system was still not back to normal. Ironically, his final day of taking antibiotics happened to be his 8th birthday.

For the first three months after he completed chemotherapy, Benji underwent scans in the Twin Cities and blood work in Roseau. Now, he undergoes scans once every six months. Benji will continue that regimen until he passes the five-year mark.

For the rest of his life, he will have echocardiograms once a year to determine if his heart has been damaged by the chemotherapy, and he will also undergo a CT scan.

The doctors won't say that Benji is cancer-free until he reaches the five-year mark, Sue said.

Even if Benji were considered to be cancer-free, John and Sue will never be worry-free. "He gets a sore throat, so you wonder if it's coming back again," Sue said.

One of Benji's tonsils is still swollen even though it had been symmetrical to the other tonsil in the past, said John, who noted the doctors don't know if it's scar tissue or something else. Benji's parents and doctors are keeping an eye on it.

Community support

Throughout the entire ordeal thus far, Benji and his family have received a considerable amount of support from northwest Minnesota, especially the communities of Goodridge, Grygla and Thief River Falls. John and Sue are thankful for the support their family has received.

Benji's Wish

They are also thankful for the Make-A-Wish Foundation. Benji's aunt Rose Forney of Fargo, N.D., told the Make-A-Wish Foundation about Benji.

Benji was given the opportunity to make three wishes. His wishes were to be the manager of the Twins for one day, to go to the Super Bowl or to go on an African safari. His wish to be the manager of the Twins was granted.

Benji and his family departed from the Thief River Falls Regional Airport on July 16. They flew on two donated planes, and two pilots volunteered their time to fly the family to the Twin Cities. Once in Minneapolis, Benji and his family rode in style to the Metrodome. Police escorted the limo carrying the family. Benji still smiles today while thinking about it.

While at the Metrodome on July 17, Benji met all of the Twins players, including his favorite players, Justin Morneau, Torii Hunter and Joe Mauer. He spent time inside the clubhouse alone with Manager Ron Gardenhire and the team. They taught him some special handshakes. Meanwhile, his family was out on the ball field.

Benji and Gardenhire also spent some time together in the dugout. For safety reasons, Benji wasn't able to sit in the dugout during the game.

As game time approached July 17, Benji and Gardenhire shagged some fly balls with the team. Benji also caught a few grounders while the team practiced.

Benji was a celebrity. He and his family answered the media's questions, and a Fox Sports Network North announcer and camera crew followed him around for a program that will air sometime on Aug. 7 and 8.

Benji also had four small microphones from various media outlets attached to his chest. The microphone boxes were in his pocket, and they would fall out while he was on the ball field. Gardenhire helped him out whenever that happened.

If being miked up wasn't enough, Benji also needed to make sure he liked the lineup. "I wanted to change Justin Morneau and [Michael] Cuddyer in batting order," Benji said. It didn't happen. Coincidence or not, the Twins lost the game against the Detroit Lions, 1-0.

Gardenhire was excited that Benji chose to be the team manager and not a ballplayer. "He was really good to [Benji]," John said.

Benji was the first kid who asked to be the Twins team manager. Usually, kids ask to be a Twins player for a day.

Along with the memories and photos from that day, Benji took home two autographed, wooden baseball bats that were used by Hunter and Twins player Jeff Cirillo. Cuddyer gave him wristbands – since he was still in the lineup.

The whole experience was a dream come true for Benji. Whenever he is able to do so, he watches the Twins on TV. If a Twins game isn't broadcast in northwest Minnesota, he listens to it on the radio. And one can bet that he will be watching if the Twins make it back to the World Series.

Two teens injured in Marshall County crash

Two teens were injured after a one-vehicle accident Monday night in Marshall County.

Joshua C. Guillemette, 16, Karlstad, and Devin L. Lofstrom, 16, Strandquist, both suffered minor injuries in the accident, according to the Minnesota State Patrol report. The report doesn't indicate whether the teens sought medical attention. Another teen, Alex Borowicz, 15, unknown city, apparently wasn't injured.

At the time of the accident, Guillemette was driving a 1995 Oldsmobile Cutlass northbound on Highway 59, near the intersection with Marshall County Road 6. According to the report, he swerved to miss a deer. The car then went into a ditch, and the car's air bags deployed. All three boys were wearing their seat belts.

The car sustained moderate damage. The State Patrol was dispatched to the scene at 9:05 p.m. Monday.

Return to committee structure?

Ad Hoc Labor Committee that met on an as-needed basis.

The council changed the committee structure from individual committees to a Committee of the Whole. The Committee of the Whole has been described as a working session for the eight council members, who still attend council meetings. All city department leaders attend the meetings as well. At Committee of the Whole meetings, the council may take formal action on issues.

When the council had individual committees, about four council members were on each individual committee. Since there wasn't a quorum of council members present at the individual committee meetings, the council was legally unable to take any formal action. If the agenda included items related to a specific city department, the leader of that department also attended the individual committee meeting. The department leader then gave an update or told the council at a council meeting about what was discussed during the individual committee meeting.

Individual committee meetings and Committee of the Whole meetings are open to the public and the media. The Thief River Falls Times/Northern Watch and Thief River Falls Radio cover Committee of the Whole meetings and council meetings. When the city's organizational structure included individual committees, the media periodically covered those meetings unannounced.

During the July 24 council meeting, Schmalz suggested that holding two individual committee meetings per night would be one way to alleviate one of the problems associated with individual committees. If that happened, Schmalz also suggested that those two committees have smaller agendas.

As a new council member, Mayor Steve "Beaver" Nordhagen indicated that city issues can be "very complicated" for him. He said he was "really uncomfortable with a committee recommendation on certain issues." Nordhagen went on to say that there was nothing like hearing something first-hand from a department leader. He added that it was "nice to hear and be a part" of the discussion of the issues.

A Polk County man died Monday afternoon after a large bull charged him in a pasture north of McIntosh.

Ronald John Sogla, 56, was fencing a cattle pasture at the time of the accident, according to the Polk County Sheriff's Office. The bull knocked him down and rolled him around on the ground before returning to its herd. Sogla's brother witnessed the accident and assisted in getting him to the farm yard. Sogla lost consciousness, and his family administered CPR until emergency personnel arrived at the scene in Hill River Township. Sogla was later pronounced dead at the scene.

The sheriff's office was dispatched to the scene at 3:39 p.m. Monday. The Minnesota State Patrol, McIntosh Fire Department and Rescue, and First Care Ambulance of Fosston assisted. The incident remains under investigation.

used to push the D-9 on to the 60-ton Lowboy trailer. Wright said his truck struggled with the heavy load during the trip. "I know I won't strap it to my truck anymore."

He breathed a sigh of relief when he reached the shop. Getting the large dozer off the trailer presented another challenge, as it required two excavators to pull the dozer to the ground.

The 44-ton dozer currently rests on top a man-made hill and is supported by 18 two-ton blocks that were buried in the hill to keep it from settling. Wright says the dozer will remain there for the rest of his lifetime.

"It was kind of hard to get it up there," Wright said. "Now that it's there, it's going to stay there."

At the time of its construction, the 1956 D9 was the largest bulldozer manufactured by Caterpillar. Today Caterpillar manufactures two larger models, the D10 and D11.

We're in the middle of a heat wave

We're smack dab in the middle of another heat wave. I remember the last one because I was camping. My camper does not have air conditioning, and throughout those warm and sweaty nights, I imagined I was one of those turkeys we've baked in plastic bags at Thanksgiving. I plan to stick close by the home or work during these hot days, which is probably good advice for many people.

The heat wave has not drifted far enough east yet to attract national media attention. When it does, I suspect we'll be hearing about fatalities, inadequate housing, and children and pets dying in or being rescued from vehicles. When we do start hearing those reports, they will probably include all kinds of advice on preventing heat-related illness.

The Centers for Disease Control and Prevention offers that the best way to avoid heat-related illness is with prevention: drink more fluids (nonalcoholic or fluids that contain large amounts of sugar); stay indoors, and, if at all possible, in an air-conditioned place; wear lightweight, light-colored, loose-fitting clothing; and never leave anyone in a closed, parked vehicle. Although anyone at anytime can suffer from heat-related illness, some people are at greater risk than others: infants and young children, people age 65 or older, people who have a mental illness, and those who are physically ill, especially with heart disease or high blood pressure.

Working outside? With this heat, it's probably best to limit outdoor activity to morning and evening hours, making sure you get enough fluid, like a sports beverage when you do, and resting frequently.

While we often think of ourselves and our family when it's hot outside, don't forget your pets.

The University of Minnesota Extension service provided the following guidelines to use in caring for pets in hot weather: If kept outdoors, make sure your pet has a shaded place and plenty of fresh water to drink. Never keep your pet in a car in direct sun on a summer day. Even with the windows slightly open, the temperature inside a car can soar to 120 degrees Fahrenheit or more within minutes. These conditions can kill a pet within 10 minutes or less. And on a hot day, limit vigorous exercise – letting it stop – and drink frequently.

On Sunday, Aug. 5 at 2 p.m., Rydell National Wildlife Refuge will have a Learning at the Lakes Program about the hydrology and glacial history of the Lake Agassiz beach ridges.

Marking the ancient eastern lakeshore of Glacial Lake Agassiz, the beach ridge formations located in Polk County and other areas of northwest Minnesota can exhibit unique hydrologic characteristics. Thief River Falls drops two in Legion doubleheader...

Bemidji rally sets up sweep

Bemidji erased an 8-4 deficit with a late-game rally that netted a 9-8 win in the opener, then completed a Monday American Legion baseball sweep over Thief River Falls with a 3-1 victory in the doubleheader nightcap at the Bemidji State University diamond.

A four-run Bemidji sixth inning tied Game 1 at 8-8.

While an opportunity to take the lead disappeared when Bemidji left the bases loaded in the sixth, the winners were quick to break the deadlock in the seventh when John Yates singled, then circled the bases when a sacrifice bunt was fielded but thrown into the right field corner.

The Phantoms were limited to just three base hits in the Game 2 setback when their only run was scored on a fifth inning double by Patrick Barry that was followed by a passed ball and wild pitch.

It was the regular season finale for Bemidji, a 25-8 team that swept all four decisions in the home-and-home series with Thief River Falls.

Same script followed in a second TRF vs. EGF split

Thief River Falls opened the 2007 American Legion baseball schedule June 11 with a doubleheader split against Ninth District rival East Grand Forks at the Multi-Events Center by losing the opener 8-7 and winning the nightcap 2-1.

The same script was followed Wednesday at Stauss Park, where a late-season rematch produced another Game 1 East Grand Forks win and a Game 2 Thief River Falls victory.

The visiting Phantoms bounced back from a 9-2 setback in the opener by taking a 6-4 decision in the nightcap.

East Grand Forks remained a .500 team at 23-23. Thief River Falls went to 19-12 heading into a Thursday regular season finale at Roseau.

Neibauer leaving Gators' post

■ Girls basketball coach has over 500 career wins

by Mike Lundgren
Sports Editor

For 39 years Tom Neibauer coached basketball with a passion. Then one day – June 24, to be exact – the drive was gone. He knew it and he acted quickly by promptly stepping down as the Badger/Greenbush-Middle River girls basketball coach.

There was no planned exit after meeting specific goals, according to Neibauer, whose 2006-07 Gators reached the Class A state tournament for the first time and presented him with his 500th career win at the high school varsity level. It just dawned on him, in the midst of a two-month summer program, that the time had arrived to make an exit.

"I made it three weeks into the season," he said. "I was standing in the garden with my wife (Susan) and I told her for the first time in my life I don't feel like going to practice. I knew right there, it was time to get out."

Just as he had demanded from his players over the years, it was all or nothing for Neibauer.

He has also resigned as a assistant football coach with the Gators, but the 64-year-old Neibauer will remain in the Greenbush-Middle River school system as a classroom instructor.

And he won't give up coaching completely, having agreed to work with the defensive backs on the Northland Community and Technical College football team led by head coach Guy Finstrom, a long-time friend.

It's been an interesting run for Neibauer, a Mentor native who attended the University of North Dakota, then transferred and graduated from Valley City (N.D.) State.

He went into the Navy after college with hopes of becoming a pilot. Problems with his sight in one eye dashed those dreams and sent him into teaching.

There was also grad school. But thoughts of becoming a lawyer disappeared after one year. Teaching/coaching, it appeared, was his calling.

Neibauer's varied coaching resume includes basketball, football, baseball and even wrestling.

Looking for any kind of teaching/coaching position early in his career, Neibauer was at Parker's Prairie for a year, where he worked with the wrestling program.

He coached Eagles and American Legion baseball in Thief River Falls and began coaching basketball at the eighth/ninth grade level before moving up to the junior varsity and eventually becoming a head coach.

Neibauer briefly doubled as head girls basketball coach and head football coach at Badger/Greenbush-Middle River, but the demands of running two programs were too much, prompting him to give up the football job in favor of remaining as head basketball coach.

There is also a career as a high school and college football official that dates back to 1969.

While teaching in Middle River, Neibauer was the women's head basketball coach at Northland Community and Technical College for three years from 1985-86 through the 1987-88 season. However, recruiting and long road trips just weren't compatible with a full classroom assignment and when the opportunity presented itself to coach at the school where he worked, he began what would turn out to be an extended stay at Middle River in 1991-92.

Neibauer remained as head coach when the current Badger/Greenbush-Middle River cooperative was formed the following year.

A consistent winner year in and year out, the Gators finally achieved their ultimate goal when they beat Clearbrook-Gonvick 44-39 in the 2007 Section 8A championship game at the Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls to earn their first-ever trip to the Minnesota state high school basketball tournament.

Badger/Greenbush-Middle River made sure it would be a three-game state tournament and not a one-and-out Twin Cities trip with a 47-39 opening round win over Christ's Household of Faith.

The Gators lost to eventual state champion Fulda 65-31 in the semifinals and fell to Ada-Borup, the No. 1-rated team in the state in the final regular season Class A poll, 70-58 in the third place game.

"Getting to the state tournament was big, obviously," said Neibauer. "Being close so many times and not making it was really frustrating."

Neibauer's stint with the Gators ended with five straight 20-win seasons. They were 22-6 in 2002-03, 25-3 in 2003-04, a school-best 28-2 in 2004-05, 24-4 in 2005-06 and 27-6 in 2006-07.

"The kids really sacrificed to make themselves better," said Neibauer. "It takes a lot of work to be a winner. But I'd rather work hard than lose."

A lot of players have gone through the program during Neibauer's tenure with the Skippers and Gators, but two stand out. Krissi Super, a 2,000-point career scorer, and Kierah Kimbrough, who surpassed the 3,000-point mark. Both signed with UND.

"Anyone who gets to coach both Krissi and Kierah is very fortunate," said Neibauer, who also had great admiration for those who helped Super and Kimbrough reach those point totals. "The kids who played with them worked their butts off and were very unselfish," he added.

There's nothing like leaving on a winning note.

"I'll miss it," admitted Neibauer. "But you really sacrifice a lot to be a head coach today. We go four days a week during the summer, and that's all volunteer work."

At this point in his life, Neibauer found the garden, and the company of his wife, to be more appealing than the gym on a summer night.

Phantoms win first district contest 3-2

Defending champion Thief River Falls opened the 2007 District 9 VFW baseball tournament Thursday with a 3-2 win over Bemidji. The Phantoms entered the seven-team, double-elimination event at Matson Field in Moorhead as the No. 5 seed. Bemidji was seeded No. 4.

In other first-day results, No. 2 Detroit Lakes beat No. 7 Perham 4-1 and No. 6 Moorhead knocked off No. 3 East Grand Forks 7-3. Top-seeded Fergus Falls drew an opening round bye.

Those results set up a Friday slate that included Perham vs. East Grand Forks at 9:30 a.m.; Fergus Falls vs. Thief River Falls at noon; Detroit Lakes vs. Moorhead at 2:30 p.m.; the Fergus Falls-Thief River Falls loser vs. the Perham-East Grand Forks winner at 5 p.m.; and Bemidji vs. the Detroit Lakes-Moorhead loser at 7:30 p.m.

Play continues through Sunday, with the winner advancing to the VFW state tournament Aug. 9-12 in New Ulm.

Bemidji won three of four regular season meetings with Thief River Falls.

"This was a great way to start the tournament," said Shane Zutz, coach of the Thief River Falls 16-year-olds. "It was a team win; everyone contributed."

It was scoreless until the top of the fourth when Briar Verbout walked, stole second and scored when a well-placed sacrifice bunt by Nick Olson was thrown into right field.

Bemidji answered in the bottom of the inning with a hit-batsman and back-to-back two-out singles.

Thief River Falls broke the tie in the fifth when Keaton Joppru doubled to right center with one-out and moved to third on an error off the bat of Cody Conners. A two-out single to center scored Joppru, but the second runner was thrown out at the plate trying to score on the same play.

What proved to be the winning run scored in the top of the sixth as Verbout singled and advanced on a bunt by Olson. Pinch-hitter Ben Thorstad then sent a 1-2 pitch into center field, scoring Verbout on another close play at the plate.

Tom Johnsten singled and scored on a Thief River Falls error as Bemidji made it another one-run game in the bottom of the sixth. But Conners made it through a 1-2-3 seventh inning to pick up the complete-game pitching decision.

If your home is 20 feet or 200 feet in length our seamless gutter is made in one continuous length, eliminating any joints or seams in the middle. Inquire before you purchase "Seamless Gutter" about the thickness of the material used and be certain that it is made in one continuous length.

Seamless gutter is formed, cut and installed on site by a two-man crew... saving on labor cost. Freight charges are eliminated. Waste is almost unheard of due to gutter being measured and cut on site to exact lengths. No need to store left over odds and ends that get damaged before they can be used. Sacred concert at Roseau Church Aug. 5

Jerry Trammell and Gary Timbs will perform a sacred concert beginning at 7 p.m. on Sunday, Aug. 5, at the Roseau Community Church in Roseau. Trammell and Timbs were featured guests last year at a special celebration at the Roseau Community Church. The audience was thrilled with the performance and they were invited to return for this concert.

Trammell is recognized as one of the "all-time-great tenor" voices in gospel music. During his tenure with the Florida Boys, he was voted "favorite tenor" in all of Southern Gospel Music. His career then took him to the famous Blackwood Brothers Quartet and later to sing with J.D. Sumner and the Stamps. He is currently engaged in a solo ministry.

Timbs has had a long career that has included both gospel and secular music. He was lead singer in the 1970s for Hovie Lister and the sensational Statesmen Quartet. He then joined the country music legend, Sonny James, and played piano for him for eight years. He even had the thrill of singing backup for Elvis Presley. Gary also has written hundreds of songs.

There is no admission charge for this concert, however, a freewill offering will be received. Everyone is invited to attend this event.

TRF turns down offer on auditorium

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

The Thief River Falls Committee of the Whole has set aside Pennington County's offer to exchange Oakland Park for City Auditorium and the Old Arena. That decision was made at the committee's July 31 meeting. It is expected that more discussions may occur about that issue, as well as issues related to the Pennington County Law Enforcement Center.

Exchanging two buildings, Oakland Park and $1

"I don't think this should be accepted," said Mayor Steve "Beaver" Nordhagen, who noted that the exchange sounded like a good deal for the county. He added that the city needs to have a "better dialogue" with the county since issues are "continually popping up" between the city and county.

Council member Glen Kajewski said that he agreed with Nordhagen's statement.

The discussion resulted from a letter that City Attorney Paul Ihle received from Pennington County Attorney Al Rogalla. Rogalla wrote that the County Board unanimously approved having him inform the city that it is willing to exchange Oakland Park for City Auditorium and the Old Arena. (If approved, the exchange of the Old Arena would take place after the Thief River Falls Amateur Hockey Association was finished using that building.) In addition, the county would pay the city $1 for the buildings. The exchange would be contingent upon an approval from the county's insurance carrier.

The city currently owns the two buildings and rents them to tenants and to groups that are hosting activities. It also maintains Oakland Park for the county and bills the county for its expenses related to that maintenance.

The exchange would help the county plan for future space and facility needs. Klein McCarthy Architects has presented the County Board with 15 options to cope with those future needs. The board hasn't yet decided how it wishes to proceed. The options range from $5,068,500 to $10,043,775 with a combination of remodeling and new construction. Another option listed the estimated cost of a combined, new justice center, jail and law enforcement center, on a new site at $15,207,000. That option would open up space in existing county buildings.

Even though the city and the county meet on a quarterly basis and on an as-needed basis, several council members referred to a lack of communication between the city and the county. This issue apparently became noticeable after the city of Thief River Falls received the letter from Rogalla.

Rogalla's letter apparently resulted from discussions between a group of Thief River Falls City Council members and a group of Pennington County commissioners. In June, City Council appointed council members Elvera Cullen, Emery Lee and Conrad Holten to negotiate with Pennington County regarding City Auditorium, the Old Arena and the Thief River Falls Regional Airport. That group has met with representatives from the County Board.

At the Committee of the Whole meeting, Lee indicated that the three council representatives gave an offer to the county related to the buildings and Oakland Park in exchange for $10,000, not $1.

City Council talks about housing, campground, audit

Warren - "An update on a proposed housing subdivision, authorization of development loans and management of the city campground were among topics dealt with at the Warren City Council meeting July 24.

"Mayor Bob Kliner gave an update on city discussions with landowner Randy Engelstad, who proposes to develop an 18-lot residential subdivision. One issue in the preliminary process for the development has been the responsibility for paying the $23,000 cost of writing engineering plans and specifications in the event the project doesn't move forward. Kliner said the Warren Economic Development Authority Board has indicated its willingness to pay $10,000 of that cost, and Engelstad indicated he would be willing to pay the remainder. Kliner said there is a feeling of optimism and a good chance the developer will move the project toward advertising for contractor bids on the street and utilities work." - Warren Sheaf, Aug. 1, 2007

County Board hears department reports

Red Lake Falls - A recent Red Lake County Board meeting "began with Sheriff Mitch Bernstein, who reported that he has been working on estimates for improving the storage of the emergency vehicles in the parking lot, and has contacted people to get estimates for the work to be done. He also asked the board if he could explore avenues to deal with the issue of housing Minnesota State Patrol arrests after the 2 a.m. closing.

"The state has cut back on overtime for State Patrol officers. This presents a problem for them when they arrest someone after 2 a.m. or 3 a.m. because if they arrest an offender at that late hour and have to take the offender to Crookston, they end up with overtime. Bernstein asked if he could explore other avenues of incarceration for offenders picked up by State Patrol officers after bar closing hours. He was given permission to research other ideas for this purpose. It would probably be only about 10 to 15 arrests a year that would be affected." - The Oklee Herald, Aug. 2, 2007, by Barb Novak

Local camp cook retires

Lake Bronson - "Sandra Anderson of St. Hilaire is retiring after 18 summers of cooking at the Lake Bronson Baptist Bible Camp.

"Her cooking career started in 1980, when she and a friend cooked at Bluewater Covenant Bible Camp for one week. She ended up loving the job and continued to work there off and on for nine years. ... At the time, her children were 14, 12, 6, 5 and 4 years old, so she had the task of juggling her responsibilities as a mother as well as feeding an abundance of people. In 1984, her youngest was born." Sandy's youngest daughter was 5 months old when Sandy took her to camp for the first time. Her daughter was the hit of the camp.

"Sandy has cooked for many occasions. ... The biggest crew she recalls feeding numbered 300."

She started at Lake Bronson in 1990 and has been there ever since. - North Star News of Karlstad, Aug. 2, 2007, by Emily Grace

A church on the prairie

Former area resident adopts prairie church

by David Hill
Editor

Some of our most cherished landmarks in rural America are our churches. The mostly white buildings, pitched roofs and tall steeples serve as reminders on the prairie of the pioneer spirit and faith required to live in this sometimes, inhospitable land. Times have changed, and sadly, many of the churches have been closed. Many more have been left to collapse under years of disrepair, and their remains remind us not of hope, but of dreams that died.

Not all of these churches have been abandoned. One former resident is making sure that the former Bethlehem Lutheran Church located northeast of Thief River Falls doesn't fall into disrepair.

The former Bethlehem Lutheran Church is being kept in good repair. Although he never attended a regular church service there, Chad Kaushagen said he would walk to the church on those days when they

Youth and supervisors honored

Three youth and three supervisors from this region's Workforce Investment Act youth programs were honored July 17 during a banquet at Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls.

Shawna Goulet, Laura Johnson and Alice Pantzer were named Outstanding Student Participants. Dustin Chambers, Denise Coyer and Albert Hasbargen were named Outstanding Youth Supervisors.

The Northwest Private Industry Council and Inter-County Community Council sponsored the banquet.

The following was read about each recipient at the banquet.

Shawna Goulet

Sometimes, young student workers enroll in the program and actually know ahead of time what they're good at, and that was the case with Shawna Goulet. Shawna had years of experience babysitting, and she knew she enjoyed taking care of young children, so the placement at Washington Elementary School as a teacher's aide was a simple partnership.

Shawna started as a classroom assistant, but it wasn't long before she was also asked to become a school bus attendant, making sure kids got on and off the bus at the right place. That is a great deal of responsibility for someone her age, but she did it amazingly well and was a valuable asset to the elementary school system.

Shawna's ability to excel at many duties and take on more responsibility while helping students and teachers make her this year's Outstanding Student Participant of 2007.

Laura Johnson

I have had the pleasure of knowing Laura Johnson for a few years. Laura is an excellent example of youth that go above and beyond what is expected. She will always ask how I am doing and how kids are doing on jobs. She is a caring, hard working individual that has a very bright future.

Laura has been enrolled in WIA employment programs ... has taken advantage of opportunities ... [illegible] themselves. Some of the activities include Seven Habits for Highly Effective Teens, Academic Enrichment, Work Experience, "Teen Views," field trips to area employers, and various other opportunities.

Laura has worked at a Thief River Falls school on the Thief River Falls crew and Targeted Services. Laura has helped set up tables at leadership workshops before other students arrive and she carried them out after everyone else [illegible] the workshop.

Laura graduated from Thief River Falls and is enrolled [illegible] Community and [illegible] this fall. She is [illegible] occupation.

From inmate to motivational speaker...

Change is possible

by April Schelnoha
Reporter

"Sticks and stones may break my bones, but names will never hurt me."

Ron Glodoski is annoyed by that adage. He suggests changing it because some words destroy a person's spirit and make a person numb.

"We've got to stop the verbal abuse in America. We have to," Glodoski said.

Ron Glodoski

Glodoski spoke at the Youth and Supervisors Awards Banquet on July 17 at Ralph Engelstad Arena in Thief River Falls. The banquet, which was sponsored by the Northwest Private Industry Council and Inter-County Community Council, was held in honor of youth and supervisors in Workforce Investment Act youth programs in Region 1 of northwest Minnesota. About 90 people, including social workers, agency personnel and those affiliated with WIA youth programs, attended the event.

Glodoski, the leading national expert on bullying, substance abuse, and resiliency, is a motivational speaker. He is also the author of "How to be a Successful Criminal: The Real Deal on Crime, Drugs and Easy Money."

Glodoski should know how to be a successful criminal. He was one. Yet, life wasn't always that way nor is it today.

Glodoski grew up in Milwaukee. His parents were drunks, and his father emotionally and physically abused Glodoski and his three brothers.

As he grew up, Glodoski was taunted by classmates who called him stupid. By today's standards, the label of Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder would apply to him.

"I have it, and I'm really proud of it," said Glodoski, who noted that the best salespersons, business owners and artists have it. At the same time, he abhors labels currently used by society. Instead, he suggests labeling kids with the term Brilliance Beyond Normal.

While Glodoski may have had a tough life as a kid, it only got worse. At the age of 12, he joined a gang in Milwaukee. He drank alcohol and used any drug he could get his hands on. At 16 years old, he was a junkie and bought his first ¼ pound of marijuana.

From the ages of 16 to 25, not a day went by that Glodoski wasn't high. At one point in his life, he snorted $2,000 worth of cocaine a week. Glodoski snorted so much cocaine that the whole right side of his nose caved in. He shot drugs into the veins of his arms. When those veins collapsed, he started using the veins in his legs and feet. Glodoski had friends who used their eyeballs in an effort to shoot up cocaine.

While he was in high school, he was in a jail and detention center 35 times in two years. Then he received a final warning from a judge, who told him that he could serve six months in jail or go home. Glodoski knew he would get "a beating of a lifetime" from his father if he went home. He told the judge, "I need to think about it." The judge thought Glodoski was being disrespectful and sentenced him to six months in jail. It ended up being a 15-month stint in jail.

Once he got out of jail, Glodoski stole another car and was sent back to jail. After getting out of jail yet again, he began recruiting kids for the gang. When Glodoski was 17, law enforcement apprehended a gang leader, who ratted out Glodoski and the other gang members. A judge told Glodoski he could go to the Wisconsin State Reformatory in Green Bay or he

Do we forget about breakfasts? If not for every day, it's a good thing to have a few brunch recipes tucked away for Sunday morning. Today's breakfast recipes are from the cookbook, "Cooking With Grace," from the Grace Lutheran Church Women of Grygla. Enjoy.

This is a hearty brunch or breakfast dish that will stick to your ribs - a good way to use left-over wild rice, too. I think it might serve more than one person (unless the person is really a very hungry lumberjack):

LUMBERJACK OMELET
Jackie Kjellberg
1 (.9 ounce) package Hollandaise sauce mix
3 eggs, slightly beaten
1 tablespoon cold water
1/4 teaspoon salt
1/8 teaspoon pepper
1/3 cup shredded Swiss cheese
1/2 cup cooked wild rice, heated through
2 slices bacon, cooked and crumbled

Prepare Hollandaise sauce according to package directions. Keep warm. Beat eggs, water, salt and pepper.

Heat a buttered 8 inch omelet pan over medium heat. Pour in egg mixture and cook until mixture thickens, lifting cooked portions around edges to allow uncooked portion to flow underneath.

Combine cheese, wild rice and bacon and sprinkle over half of omelet. Fold omelet in half and slide onto warmed plate. Pour 1/2 cup of Hollandaise sauce over omelet (refrigerate remainder). Serve immediately. Serves 1 person.

Pastor Bobbie says this is a great lunchron recipe - her own invention. I bet it would make a great brunch dish, too:

MUFFIN-TUNA BROIL
Pastor Bobbie
1 (6 ounce) can tuna (white tuna packed in water)
1 (4 ounce) can mushrooms, chopped fine
1/2 cup mayonnaise
1/2 cup sour cream
1/2 teaspoon onion salt
Parsley
Oregano
1 teaspoon lemon juice
Paprika for garnish
4 English muffins, halved
Swiss cheese slices

Mix all ingredients except muffins. Split muffins and butter lightly. Cover generously with spread. Top with strips of Swiss cheese.

Broil 5-7 minutes about 4 inches from flame or until cheese begins to brown. Serves 4.

Gail says this dish is "very good." It certainly sounds like it is - another stick-to-your-ribs breakfast dish:

BREAKFAST PIZZA
Gail Kotrba
1 (8 ounce) package crescent rolls
1 (8 ounce) package brown and serve sausage (fully cooked)
1 cup shredded Cheddar cheese
1 cup mozzarella cheese, shredded
4 slightly beaten eggs
3/4 cup milk
2 tablespoons chopped green pepper
2 tablespoons chopped onion
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon pepper
1/4 teaspoon oregano

Spread dough in greased 9x13 inch pan. Add chopped sausage, then Cheddar cheese. Pour egg mixture over top, then sprinkle with mozzarella. Bake at 350 degrees for 25 minutes.

Joni says "Mom's hot syrup is best with these":

BUTTERMILK PANCAKES
Joni Anderson (dedicated to Kyle)
1-1/4 cups flour, sifted
1/2 teaspoon soda
2 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons sugar
1/2 teaspoon salt
Dash of cinnamon
2 eggs, well beaten
1-1/4 cup buttermilk
3 tablespoons melted shortening
(Mom's) Hot Syrup:
1 cup boiling water
2 cups sugar
1 teaspoon Mapleine

Sift dry ingredients in bowl. Combine buttermilk and eggs and add to dry mixture. Beat smooth.

To make syrup, pour boiling water over sugar. Add Mapleine and stir. Makes 2-1/4 cups.

What better breakfast then caramel rolls fresh from the oven - and you can have these ready for the breakfast table in about half an hour:

ICE CREAM CARAMEL ROLLS
Linda (Nesland) Anderson
2 loaves frozen bread dough
1 cup sugar
2 tablespoons cinnamon
1/2 cup butter
1/2 cup white sugar
1/2 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup vanilla ice cream

Set dough out to thaw. Combine the 1 cup sugar and cinnamon in bowl. Cut each loaf of dough into 8 pieces and roll each piece in cinnamon-sugar mixture. Place in 9x13 inch buttered pan.

Melt butter, brown and white sugars and ice cream and mix well. Cover and refrigerate overnight or for several hours.

Bake at 350 degrees for about 25 minutes. Invert pan to let caramel drip over rolls.

Funding available for well sealing

Cost share dollars are available through the Marshall County Water and Land Office for the sealing of abandoned wells. The county's 75 percent cost share is provided through the Minnesota Natural Resource Block Grant. The property owner pays 25 percent.

Improperly sealed wells are potential sources of contamination to ground water, and can consequently affect nearby drinking water wells. Abandoned wells can act as channels for surface pollutants to enter ground water. Many abandoned wells also go uncovered, posing a physical threat to humans - mainly small children who could potentially fall into the open wells.

To get an application for the Well Sealing Cost Share Program, contact Jan at Marshall County Water and Land Office, 208 E. Colvin Ave., Suite 3, Warren, MN 56762; call (218) 745-4217; or e-mail jan.kaspari@co.marshall.mn.us

Erskine man enters plea in criminal sexual conduct case

An Erskine man entered an Alford plea Tuesday in Pennington County District Court for a 2006 criminal sexual conduct case in Thief River Falls.

William Edward Duncan, 31, entered an Alford plea to third degree criminal sexual conduct, according to Pennington County Attorney Al Rogalla. In an Alford plea, an individual indicates that he or she can see that there may be a "substantial likelihood" that he or she may be convicted if a jury heard all of the evidence.

During the plea hearing Tuesday, Judge Michael Kraker ordered that a pre-sentence investigation be completed and that Duncan undergoes a sex offender evaluation. Sentencing has been scheduled for Oct. 8, 2007.

According to a criminal complaint filed in the Pennington County Court Administrator's Office, the charge stems from a report of criminal sexual conduct in early September 2006. Duncan, the manager of the C'Mon Inn in Thief River Falls, allegedly made sexual advances to a 19-year-old female employee on Sept. 3, 2006. Duncan was her direct supervisor. After telling her to go to his office, he wrote on her breasts. Duncan then positioned himself so that she couldn't leave the office, including shutting his office door. Against her will, he performed oral sex on her. The woman told police she didn't want this to happen and that she told Duncan that she didn't want to do this.

The criminal complaint indicated that Duncan allegedly admitted to police that he drew on the woman's breasts; however, he denied engaging in oral sex with her. Police took a DNA sample from Duncan. DNA analysis indicated that Duncan couldn't be excluded from being a possible contributor to DNA found on the woman's jeans. The complaint was signed March 7, 2007.

Citizen tip leads to arrest of wanted man on Tuesday

A citizen tip helped local law enforcement apprehend a wanted man Tuesday near Badger.

Kerry W. Lane, 36, has been charged in Polk County District Court for the offense of escape from custody. He was apprehended after he allegedly jumped out of a vehicle, ran into a swamp and hid there. On Tuesday, Lane was taken into custody by the Roseau County Sheriff's Office on outstanding warrants from Marshall and Lake of the Woods counties. Polk County had also placed a hold order on Lane, who is originally from Roseau.

On Tuesday at about 5:08 p.m., the Roseau County Sheriff's Office received a call from a Roseau County citizen that a wanted person, Lane, was in the Greenbush area. The person told the sheriff's office that Lane was wanted for escape from Tri-County Corrections Center in Crookston, according to a press release from the sheriff's office. The person also told law enforcement where Lane could be located.

Roseau County deputies intercepted a vehicle which Lane was riding in near Badger. At that point, Lane allegedly jumped from the vehicle and ran into the swamp, where he hid from authorities. The sheriff's office, Minnesota State Patrol and U.S. Border Patrol searched the swamp and located Lane. He was taken into custody.

Lane was initially being held in Crookston on a charge of furnishing alcohol to minors, according to a Tri-County Corrections Center staff member on Thursday. Lane was allowed to leave the jail on a furlough July 21-27. However, he allegedly didn't return to the jail.

The Roseau County Sheriff's Office thanks all of the people who assisted with the apprehension of Lane. People who are willing to step forward and assist law enforcement with their efforts are appreciated, and the sheriff's office wants to say thanks.

ADDITION

The Wilebski family would also like to thank the communities of Badger, Greenbush, Roseau and Strathcona for the support they provided to the family. A story about the Wilebski family was printed in the last edition of the Northern Watch.

Notice of Pipeline Routing Permit Application Acceptance and Public Information Meetings On the Enbridge Pipeline Projects PUC Docket Number PL9/PPL-07-360 And PUC Docket Number PL9/PPL-07-361

PLEASE TAKE NOTICE that the Minnesota Department of Commerce (DOC) will hold public information meetings at the locations listed below, concerning proposals by Enbridge Energy, Limited Partnership and Enbridge Pipelines (Southern Lights) L.L.C., referred to collectively as "Enbridge," to expand its existing crude oil pipeline system in Minnesota. The three new expansion pipeline projects are referred to as the LSr, Alberta Clipper and Southern Lights Diluent Projects and will cross northern Minnesota in close proximity to Enbridge's existing pipeline rights-of-way.

This notice provides important information about DOC public information meetings, how the public may participate in the Public Utilities Commission (PUC) proceedings, the Enbridge projects, persons to contact for additional information and where project information is available.

PUC CERTIFICATE OF NEED AND PIPELINE ROUTING PERMIT REQUIREMENTS
Enbridge filed two Certificate of Need (CON) and two Pipeline Routing Permit (PRP) applications with the PUC. On July 30, 2007 the PUC accepted the CON and PRP applications as filed by Enbridge. Acceptance of the applications initiates the regulatory review process requirements for the CON and the PRP.

Certificate of Need (CON) Process — determines the size, type and timing of the proposed pipeline and determines whether there is a better alternative for meeting the Applicant's identified need.

Pipeline Routing Permit (PRP) Process — designates the route for the pipeline and associated facilities, conditions for right-of-way preparation, construction, clean-up and restoration. This process examines alternative routes and route segments for the pipeline. Interested persons may propose alternative routes or route segments as described below.

PUBLIC INFORMATION MEETINGS/OPEN HOUSE DATES
The DOC will hold information meetings on the applications for pipeline routing permits. DOC staff will review the state's permitting process for pipelines and how the public may be involved. Other state and federal agencies may be present at and participate in the public information meetings.

In conjunction with the DOC information meetings, Enbridge will hold open houses in the locations listed below, prior to each public information meeting, to answer questions and provide the public with information about the projects.

PROJECT OVERVIEW
Enbridge is seeking authorization to build three different petroleum pipelines as described below and as shown on the accompanying map. The purpose of the proposed projects is to increase crude petroleum transportation services between the oil sands in Western Canada and refineries in the Midwest. These proposed projects are a part of Enbridge's system expansion plans in Canada and the United States.

LSr Project (Docket Number PL9/PPL-07-360): The LSr Project is the subject of the first applications for both a Certificate of Need (Docket Number PL9/CN-07-464) and a Pipeline Routing Permit (Docket Number PL9/PPL-07-360). The LSr Project involves construction of approximately 136 miles of new 20-inch-diameter pipeline and associated facilities from the United States-Canada border near Neche in Pembina County, North Dakota to the existing Enbridge tank farm in Clearbrook, Minnesota for the transportation of petroleum. The Minnesota portion of this project, approximately 108 miles in length, will cross portions of Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk and Clearwater counties as shown on the accompanying map. Enbridge proposes to construct the pipeline generally along its existing pipeline right-of-way. The LSr Project will be capable of transporting approximately 186,000 barrels of oil per day.

Alberta Clipper/Southern Lights Diluent Projects (Docket Number PL9/PPL-07-361): The Alberta Clipper and the Southern Lights Diluent Projects are the subjects of the second set of applications for a Certificate of Need (Docket Number PL9/CN-07-465) and a Pipeline Routing Permit (Docket Number PL9/PPL-07-361)

The Alberta Clipper Project is a 990-mile-long, 36 inch outside diameter crude oil pipeline. It will start in Hardisty, Alberta, Canada and end at an Enbridge terminal facility in Superior, Wisconsin. Enbridge is proposing to construct the United States portion of this pipeline and associated facilities parallel to the LSr pipeline, between the United States-Canada borders near Neche, in Pembina County, North Dakota to Clearbrook, Minnesota, and continue on to Superior, Wisconsin, generally along Enbridge's existing pipeline right-of-way. The Alberta Clipper Project, approximately 285 miles in length in Minnesota will cross 13 counties.

From west to east they are: Kittson, Marshall, Pennington, Red Lake, Polk, Clearwater, Beltrami, Hubbard, Cass, Itasca, Aitkin, St. Louis and Carlton as shown on the accompanying map. This line will transport approximately 450,000 barrels per day of heavy crude oil from the Canadian oil sands to refineries in the Midwest.

The Southern Lights Diluent Project will consist of approximately 175 miles of new 20-inch outside diameter pipeline in Minnesota extending from Enbridge's tank farm in Clearbrook to Superior, Wisconsin. The Southern Lights Diluent Project requiring new pipeline construction in Minnesota, will cross the counties of Clearwater, Beltrami, Hubbard, Cass, Itasca, Aitkin, St. Louis and Carlton as shown on the accompanying map. Enbridge is also proposing to construct the Southern Lights Diluent Project generally along or adjacent to its existing pipeline right-of-way.

When completed, this new pipeline will begin in the Chicago area and end at the Enbridge tank farm in Clearbrook, Minnesota. At Clearbrook, Enbridge will reverse the flow on one of its existing 18-inch liquid petroleum pipelines, designated as Line 13, by reversing the flow for 136 miles between Clearbrook, Minnesota and the Canada border near Neche, North Dakota.

INFORMATION MEETING & OPEN HOUSE SCHEDULE
A DEPARTMENT OF COMMERCE PRESENTATION WILL BEGIN APPROXIMATELY 15 MINUTES AFTER THE START OF EACH OPEN HOUSE

Carlton	Carlton	Black Bear Hotel— Lake Hall Room, 1789 Highway 210	Thursday, August 23, 6:00 p.m. – 9:00 p.m.

The Southern Lights Diluent Project will transport liquids (condensate or diluent) north from refineries in the Chicago area to the oil sands of Alberta, Canada. The oil extracted in Alberta has a tar-like consistency and must be diluted before it can be moved through a pipeline. One of the best substances for that purpose is a light hydrocarbon byproduct of the refining process.

Enbridge plans to construct the Alberta Clipper Project in conjunction with the Southern Lights Diluent Project, so the second route permit application covers both the Alberta Clipper and Southern Lights Diluent Projects.

Land and Right-Of-Way Requirements: These pipelines will be placed alongside of existing easements/right-of-way in most areas. Collectively, these Projects will require approximately 75 feet of additional permanent right-of-way space next to Enbridge's four (south of Clearbrook) or five (north of Clearbrook) existing pipelines.

In addition to new permanent right-of-way, additional temporary work space is required to store excavated soil, store pipe sections as they are added to the line, move equipment and vehicles and to provide a safe work area to install the pipelines. Temporary work space requirements will vary in width, but are expected to be between 90 and 140 feet.

ENBRIDGE'S PROPOSED PIPELINE ROUTE
Minn. Rules, Chapter 4415 require the applicant to identify a preferred route. Minn. Rules 4415.0010 Subp. 32 defines route as having a variable width from the minimum required for the pipeline right-of-way (approximately 50-75 feet) up to 1.25 miles. Subpart. 33 of that rule defines route segment as a portion of a route.

Enbridge has identified a proposed route, approximately 150 feet in width from generally the south side of Enbridge's existing pipelines. In congested areas and around pumping stations Enbridge will deviate from its existing right-of-way where necessary, otherwise it is the intent of Enbridge to use, follow or parallel its existing pipelines and rights-of-way where possible. Enbridge has identified a preliminary location alignment, which is subject to change throughout the permitting process and public hearings. The permitting process will take several months to complete.

OPPORTUNITIES FOR PUBLIC INVOLVEMENT
Opportunities for public involvement in this proceeding include participating in the information meetings, suggesting alternatives route or route segments and commenting at public hearings.

Opportunities to Propose Alternate Routes or Route Segments: Any person may propose an alternate route or route segment. If you would like to make a proposal (new route or route segment) that is different from Enbridge's proposal, you should contact the staff at the DOC identified in this notice for guidance on how to submit a proposal. Please note the deadline for submitting proposals below.

If you are interested in only a minor location change or alignment modification within the route as proposed by Enbridge you are also encouraged to submit them by the deadline noted below. If you cannot submit your proposed recommendations by the deadline they may be presented at the public hearings which will be held later this year.

All new route proposals must be approved of by the PUC for consideration at the public hearings on the Projects. New route or route segment proposals offered at the public hearing will not be accepted because they will not have been authorized by the PUC.

Persons may submit written or faxed (651-297-1950) new route or route segment proposals any time on or before 4:30 p.m. on October 8, 2007. Please include the PUC docket number (PL9/PPL-07-360 or PL9/PPL-07-361) on the submittal. Written submittals should be directed to Sharon Ferguson, Department of Commerce, 85 7th Place East, Suite 500, St. Paul, MN 55101-2198.

Opportunities to Comment and Participate at the Public Hearings: The public is also encouraged to participate in the hearing to be held on the Projects. There will be formal public hearings presided over by an Administrative Law Judge (ALJ). The ALJ will listen to all of the testimony and review all of the evidence that comes into the record. The ALJ will then prepare a report and make recommendations to the PUC about the Certificate of Need Applications and the Pipeline Routing Permit Applications.

You are encouraged to attend the public hearings and present testimony about the Enbridge Projects or ask questions of the witnesses. Persons on the project mailing lists will receive notice of the public hearings and notice will also be published in local newspapers. Other information will be available over the course of the next several months at the places and websites identified in this notice.

Prehearing Conference: A prehearing conference will be held by Administrative Law Judge Eric L. Lipman on Tuesday, August 7, 2007.

The purpose of the prehearing conference is to address procedural matters such as deadlines for intervention, prefiled testimony, contested case and public hearing dates and other administrative issues associated with the public evidentiary hearings for the proposed Enbridge projects, which will be held later this year.

The DOC will provide information about the remainder of the project schedule at the information meetings that are the subject of this notice.

EDITORIAL OPINIONS

Dave Hill, Editor

Editorial opinion published under this heading is intended to stimulate thinking and discussion among our readers. Unless specified otherwise, the editorials are written by Editor Dave Hill and do not represent opinion of other staff members. Opinions in items from other publications may not coincide with the editor's own views but are offered for their general interest.

A historic disaster

Minnesota Governor Tim Pawlenty called the bridge collapse on Wednesday, Aug. 1, a disaster of a historic proportion. "We want to say to the families who are being impacted by this that our hearts and prayers are with you. But we also want to make sure that you know we are doing everything we can to make sure that we respond as quickly as we can to the needs of this emergency."

People who turned on their television sets Wednesday night were probably brought to a standstill by media coverage, which included amazing pictures and testimonials. Their second thought was probably for friends and relatives living in the Twin Cities.

In an interview that night, Pawlenty said the bridge had been inspected in 2005 and 2006. Thursday, the Star Tribune reported that the highway bridge that collapsed into the Mississippi River on Wednesday was rated as "structurally deficient" two years ago and possibly in need of replacement. Investigators told the Star Tribune that they are likely to focus their investigation on vibration and fatigue cracking.

As the media parades expert after expert across our television screens, their comments seem to conclude that the trouble with bridges isn't so uncommon. The American Society of Civil Engineers reports that "As of 2005, 156,335 of the nation's 595,363 bridges, or 26.3 percent, were structurally deficient or functionally obsolete, as compared to 34.6 percent of all bridges in 1992. However, despite this improvement, functionally obsolescent or structurally deficient bridges on the nation's transportation systems continue to constitute significant potential hazards which may jeopardize the safe, reliable and efficient operation of these."

In other words, citizens will likely begin looking a little more closely at their bridges, and maybe that's not such a bad thing.

In the meantime, lets keep our thoughts and prayers with the many people affected by the bridge collapse. If you would like to help, the Red Cross has established a web site for citizens to make donations at http://www.redcrosstc.org.

Roseau Relay teams gather together to fight cancer

On Aug. 10, 2007 the American Cancer Society Roseau County Relay For Life teams are gathering at the Roseau City Park for the 11th annual Relay For Life event. One day - one night - one county: By participating in the Relay For Life event, you honor cancer survivors, pay tribute to the lives lost to the disease, and raise money to help fight it – all right in your county.

This Relay For Life event is in its 11th year. New events are planned each year, the number of teams has increased, and the donations have grown. The efforts of the planning committee each year can be applauded for the success of the Relay. Four women on the first Relay For Life committee are still on that committee – Janet Johnson, Barb Erickson, Shirley Mitterling and Kathy Hagen. The increased number of cancer survivors only surpasses their commitment and dedication to the event.

One of the four original Relay For Life committee members is Barb Erickson, Roseau. Erickson is a RN, who worked her first 10 years at the Roseau Area Hospital as a staff nurse. For the past 16 years, Erickson has been a nursing supervisor/chemotherapy nurse. Her responsibility in this position was to develop a chemotherapy treatment center in Roseau. By doing this, patients are able to receive chemotherapy here in Roseau in conjunction with their oncologist whether from Grand Forks, Fargo, N.D., or Mayo. "The rewards I have gained are far greater than the toll," commented Erickson.

Erickson credits a video on the Relay For Life event that was shown to the nursing staff at the Roseau Clinic by Julie Pahlen for her involvement with the Relay. There was a lot of excitement that grew out of seeing that video. What started with Julie as an idea, quickly grew to include community involvement.

"My position with people going through the experience led to my Relay involvement with the survivors," said Erickson.

The Roseau flood of 2002 was a big surprise for the planning committee. There were no expectations set. The Relay For Life committee was surprised at the outcome of this event from a community that had suffered and lost so much. "It was overwhelming to see the turnout and the support. It only showed that the community valued this event," Erickson said.

"Over the past 11 years, the Relay For Life has grown. There were nine teams the first year. The number of teams grew to 23 in 2006. The participation of cancer survivors is growing, as well. It is great to see the survivors together giving their support hand and hand together. The people you see come back every year is rewarding. The percentages are remarkable in recent years for the long-term survival rate. Credit for this is given to early cancer detection, awareness and the increased advancement due to new drugs available and new treatment regimes. In fact, the number of survivors participating has more than doubled. In 1997 there were 30 survivors participating and that number has grown to 77 in 2006." Erickson said.

There are two touching parts of the Relay For Life event for Erickson. The survival lap, and the lighting of the luminaries. "It brings to mind people that you haven't thought about in a while," Erickson reflects.

"Experiencing the cancer survivors and their wonderful spirit for life is the most rewarding gift I have received from the Relay," said Erickson.

The Relay For Life is a family-oriented event where participants enjoy the camaraderie of a team and also raise funds to support the activities of the American Cancer Society. Participants camp out at the Roseau City Park, and when they are not taking their turn walking, they take part in fun activities and enjoy local entertainment.

Teams from families, companies, churches, organizations, hospitals, and schools collect donations through out the year. Donations made to the Relay For Life fund research to find a cure for cancer, education efforts focused on preventing cancer and detecting it early, and services to help cancer survivors and their families make it through their journey.

"Relay For Life brings the progress against cancer to the forefront," said Natali Anderson, event chair. "Many participants are our family, friends, and neighbors who have dealt with cancer themselves. Their involvement is proof of the progress that has been not only reducing death rates, but also in the quality of life following cancer treatment."

The 2007 Roseau County Relay For Life theme is "Champions for a Cure." All those who participate and make this event a reality are definitely "Champions."

TRF man charged with criminal sexual conduct

A Thief River Falls man has been charged in Pennington County District Court after he allegedly sexually assaulted a 17-year-old Detroit Lakes girl while she was passed out.

Abraham Sigurd Lee, 22, has been charged with third degree criminal sexual conduct for the alleged incident in the 700 block of Tonder St. in Thief River Falls. Neither Lee nor the girl live at that location.

On the morning of July 26, a Thief River Falls Police Department investigator was dispatched to Northwest Medical Center in Thief River Falls to assist two other police officers. (Police received the report of the alleged sexual assault at 5:46 a.m. July 26.) The girl told the investigator that she had been raped at a male friend's house while she was sleeping on the floor of that man's bedroom.

The girl, who indicated she was staying at a friend's home in Thief River Falls, told the investigator that, at about 9 p.m. July 25, she and her boyfriend had drinks at his house. She later left the house in the company of two friends and went to another residence.

According to the complaint, the girl told the investigator that she was feeling "almost sober at that point" but was given a straight shot of alcohol by the resident of the home. She laid on a bed and talked to her boyfriend on the phone. Then she went into the bathroom, and later came out of the bathroom and found that Lee was sitting in a chair in the resident's room. The girl and Lee made small talk, and then another female and the resident came back into the room.

The girl asked Lee if he would get her a glass of water. He handed her the glass, and the girl took a large gulp from it, according to the complaint. She went into the bathroom and instantly became sick. The girl believed the drink was mostly vodka. She started feeling sick because of the "possible vodka" and the resident made a bed for her on the floor with blankets. The girl laid down and fell asleep. She woke up, vomited on a pillow and went back to sleep.

When she woke up again, she felt someone's arm around her and realized that Lee was allegedly having sex with her. When she realized what was happening, she told him to get off of her. After it was over, the girl called her cousin to pick her up. She cried while she waited for her cousin on a porch outside of the home. Lee allegedly asked her why she was crying and asked if she was crying because of him. The girl told the investigator that she didn't respond to Lee but instead ran and got into her cousin's vehicle.

With the consent of the resident, police collected evidence at the home where the alleged assault took place. Police also executed a search warrant at 1518 Hwy. 1 E. #104, where Lee was living. They allegedly collected the clothing Lee was wearing at the time of the assault. They also collected the sexual assault kit collected at NWMC.

Signup continues for Grassland Reserve Program

Signup for the Grassland Reserve Program continues until Aug. 17. GRP is a voluntary program that promotes grazing operations; preserves threatened and endangered species and protects grassland from conversion.

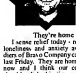
Landowners who have control of the land are eligible to submit an application for a 10-, 15- or 20-year rental agreement. Applications may be filed for a rental agreement with either the Natural Resources Conservation Service or their Farm Service Agency county office personnel prior to Aug. 17.

Eligible land includes grassland or land that contains forbs or shrubs (including improved rangeland and pastureland); and grassland with potential to provide habitat for animal or plant populations of significant ecological value if the land were retained in its current use or restored to a natural condition. Approved participants must agree to manage their grassland according to a prescribed grazing plan.

GRP is authorized by the Food Security Act of 1985, as amended by the Farm Security and Rural Investment Act of 2002. NRCS and FSA administer the program. Funding for the GRP comes from the Commodity Credit Corporation.

If you need more information about GRP, contact your local USDA Service Center, listed in the telephone book under U.S. Department of Agriculture. Information also is available online at www.nrcs.usda.gov/programs/farmbill/2002/.

State Patrol warns of bogus decals



Minnesota-licensed commercial motor vehicle operators should check their inspection decals to ensure they are not counterfeit, according to the State Patrol Commercial Vehicle Enforcement Division. Last month, a Winsted man was charged after an investigation concluded he was allegedly conducting illegal vehicle inspections and providing bogus inspection decals.

The State Patrol believes there are still hundreds of vehicles that have the counterfeit decals. CMV operators who had inspections by uncertified inspector Bert Hertzog after July 2005 would have received a counterfeit decal, and the inspection would not be valid. Henzog illegally printed 1,800 decals and wasn't certified to inspect commercial vehicles. He conducted most of his inspections in McLeod and Wright counties, but counterfeit decals have been found elsewhere across the state.

CMV operators should check their 2006 (blue) or 2007 (red) decals. Legal decals will have the wording "INSPECTED IN MONTH SPECIFIED" underlined, while counterfeit decals will not. Legitimate decals will also have a serial number in a bold font and with a reflective effect; bogus decals will not.

CMV operators who learn their vehicles were inspected by Hertzog and they were issued counterfeit decals should contact Lt. Tom Nelson of the State Patrol Commercial Vehicle Enforcement Division at (320) 202-6430.

Henzog, 53, Winsted, was charged in Wright County on July 6 for theft-by-swindle, aggrovated forgery and inspecting vehicles without certification.

Rural Reflections

They're home

I sense relief today - relief from loneliness and anxiety as the soldiers of Bravo Company came home last Friday. They are home safe for now and I think our community should relish this time as the soldiers do the same with their families. This is a time when we all should stop our daily business and reflect upon the last two years and the sacrifice offered in the name of our country.

The welcome our soldiers received was everything it should have been and more than I'd imagined. This welcome was like the kiss and hug a child receives from a 300-pound aunt at Christmas time: after you wipe off the excess lipstick even a child would realize one thing. You are loved. The waxed squad cars and fire trucks reminded me of how America welcomes family home - we put on our best, drive our best and make noise to show you we noticed what you did and that we're glad you're back. Last Friday, every person along the return route held their hearts out because we had fallen in love with this group of soldiers, who made such sacrifice for us. Contrast this with the shameful way we made our troops come home from Vietnam in their street clothes, and I think we are a better and more mature country today. I hope the Vietnam veterans in attendance felt a little of that love, too.

I will not play politics with this occasion or my column. I realize all citizens have their opinion of the war, but we all land solidly on the side of the soldier. I want to express an opinion based on history as those who know where they've been usually own a clearer idea of their future. In 480 B.C. the Spartans, along with other armies of Greece, faced the army of Persia (Iran, Iraq, Pakistan, etc.) in a desperate battle at Thermopylae. Although the overwhelming Persian Army eventually won this battle, the time they wasted in battle allowed the Greek nation (a loose consortium of city states) time to prepare other more populated areas for war against Persian tyranny. This battle was important to America because Greece was a democratic society in its infancy. Greece had planted the seed of governing a free country that our forefathers would harvest prior to the Revolutionary War and turn into our democratic form of government. The Revolutionary War was a turning point in world government; most countries now claim themselves as democracies of one type or another.

Our soldiers now carry this gift of democracy back to the countries that once tried to destroy it. It's better for the world if countries are ruled by representatives of their residents rather than by dictators. I believe that when history observes our part in the Iraq War, it will turn a kind eye towards it, and there will be no reason for us to avoid eye contact.

So, what do we do now? First off, let's remember that Thief River Falls is a military town. Grand Forks loves the soldiers they've never met at the air base, so let's make sure we give that same love to the people we know so well, who soldier for us on a consistent basis. You were awesome last Friday, but let's keep it up. I think most soldiers want some peace and quiet today, but there will be a time to offer personal thanks. Maybe give the soldier a place at the head of the line when you're both buying a soda or throw him a friendly wave. I've heard interviews with experts and soldiers and they all seem to say that, unless you are a professional counselor, a good listener has the most to offer a person home from war.

Finally, let's breath a sigh of relief, give pause for those who gave all and remember, they're home, they're home they're home!

Bergeron, Keogh are mat rats

It's been a busy spring/summer for Thief River Falls wrestlers Jacoby Bergeron and Steven Keogh. From the first week of May through the last week of July, the sport took the two, who will be freshman at Lincoln High School this fall, from Rochester and Minneapolis to Waterloo, Iowa; Kansas City, Mo.; and Fargo, N.D.

Success followed them during their journey across the midwest.

The odyssey began with the May 3-6 MN/USA state Greco and Freestyle Championships in Rochester, where the pair competed in the Cadet Division for wrestlers ages 15-16. Bergeron, wrestling at 84 pounds, placed second in both events. Keogh, wrestling at 125, was second in Greco.

They headed to Iowa for the June 13-17 Northern Plains Regional National Championships in Waterloo to face wrestlers from Minnesota, Illinois, Iowa, North Dakota, South Dakota and Wisconsin. Bergeron lost to Minnesota's Jordan Kingsley in the Greco championship match, but turned the tables on Kingsley in the freestyle finals. Keogh placed third in Greco and fifth in freestyle.

Bergeron and Keogh were both selected by the MN/USA coaches to wrestle for Team Minnesota during the June 21-25 Cadet Greco and Freestyle National Duals in Kansas City.

Competing for Minnesota II in the Greco duals, Bergeron went 6-0 and was named to the all-tournament team, while Keogh finished 2-2 as Minnesota posted wins over Iowa and Colorado, but lost to Illinois, California, New Jersey and Florida (on a tie-breaker).

Both wrestlers were moved to Minnesota I as the Missouri trip concluded with the Freestyle duals. Keogh posted a 4-0 record and Bergeron was 4-3 as the Gopher State wrestlers beat Georgia, California, Colorado, Missouri and Michigan while losing to Pennsylvania Black and New Jersey for a fourth place showing.

The pair headed to Minneapolis July 15 for the Augsburg College Cadet Camp that must be attended by 15 and 16-year-olds hoping to be selected for the Cadet Greco and Freestyle Nationals in Fargo.

Bergeron and Keogh were both chosen to compete for Team Minnesota during the July 20-25 national event at the Fargodome.

Competing at 84 pounds, Bergeron was one of only four Minnesota wrestlers to earn All-America status in both styles of wrestling by placing fourth in Greco and sixth in Freestyle.

Bergeron posted Greco wins over wrestlers from Michigan, Texas and California before losing to eventual champion and teammate Hayden Zilmer of Crosby. He also fell to Brenan Lyons of Michigan in the third place match.

In Freestyle, Bergeron defeated wrestlers from Michigan, Indiana, New York and California before losing to opponents from Washington, Montana and New Jersey.

At 130 pounds, Keogh beat Greco wrestlers from Illinois and North Carolina before losing to opponents from New Jersey and Iowa in the double-elimination format.

Keogh lost Freestyle matches to wrestlers from Oregon and Illinois.

Joining Bergeron as Minnesota wrestlers named All-America in both styles were Zilmer; Destin McCauley, Apple Valley; and Luke Vaith, Hastings.

Bandits start with a 10-3 win

Thief River Falls started post-season play on the right foot Wednesday by beating Detroit Lakes 10-3 in the opening round of the eight-team, double-elimination Ninth District Division I American Legion baseball tournament at Roseau.

Patrick Barry was 4-for-5 at the plate for the winners, who turned a 3-1 edge into a 7-1 spread in the seventh inning. During the regular season, Legion teams play seven-inning games, usually in a doubleheader format. Post-season match-ups are nine innings.

Spencer Johnson was the winning pitcher for the Bandits, but he gave way to Nick Gagner in the seventh after hitting the 110-pitch mark with an inning-opening walk.

Gagner walked the first batter he faced, putting runners on first and second with nobody out in a two-run game. However, two infield groundouts and a strike-out ended the threat and the Bandits put the game on ice in the bottom of the inning.

Detroit Lakes opened the scoring with a fourth inning run, but Thief River Falls got out of a bases-loaded situation with no additional damage.

"Our defense was good," reported Thief River Falls coach Courtney Skjerven. "Spencer wasn't overpowering, but he battled and we got out of a couple of jams."

The Bandits went 19-14 during the regular season and entered the tournament as the No. 1 seed in the North. The victory gives Thief River Falls just its second 20-win season in the past 15 years and the first since 2001.

Skjerven is in his fourth year as the Bandits' head coach. His first three teams finished 17-19, 16-17 and 19-21 a year ago when they reached the Ninth District tournament finals.

Detroit Lakes fell to 10-20 with the tournament loss.

Returning soldiers can hunt, fish in Minnesota for free after discharge

Minnesota soldiers returning from service outside the United States in the past two years are eligible for free hunting and fishing licenses from the Minnesota Department of Natural Resources.

Returning soldiers, including those who served in the National Guard, may fish and hunt small game without a license for two years from their discharge. They may also obtain one free deer license under regulations passed by the 2007 Legislature.

"Many Minnesota soldiers have put their hunting and fishing trips on hold while they serve abroad," said Mark Holsten, DNR commissioner. "The free license is a small way we can recognize their sacrifice, welcome them home, and extend an opportunity to be with friends and family in Minnesota's great outdoors."

The DNR long has provided free hunting licenses to Minnesota military personnel on leave from stations outside of the state. The new legislation builds on that tradition. Holsten said a number of DNR employees are in Iraq, Afghanistan, and other parts of the world or recently returned. "Their service to state and country is moving," he said. "I extend to them, and all Minnesota soldiers, our agency's respect and appreciation."

The discharged residents must carry proof of residency and official military discharge papers while fishing or hunting small game. All required tags or state stamps must obtained. They are available for free at any of 1,800 businesses that sell hunting and fishing licenses across the state.

Firearms hunters born after Dec. 31, 1979, are required to have a DNR firearms safety certificate, which is available online through a training course on the DNR's Web site www.mndnr.gov. Military personnel who have completed basic training are exempt from the range and shooting exercise portion of the DNR's firearms safety training.

A free deer license will be issued to residents who provide military discharge papers and proof of residency at any of the 1,800 businesses that sell deer licenses in the state.

TRF 12U girls have a 4-2 state tournament

It was a 4-2 top-ten finish for Thief River Falls during the 2007 Minnesota Sports Federation 12U Rec Junior Olympics state fast pitch softball championships. The 26-team, double-elimination event was played July 28-29 in Becker.

Thief River Falls beat host Becker 8-5 then lost to Willmar 7-0. The Matt Okeson-coached squad bounced back with wins over Dassel-Cokato 10-7, Lake Crystal II 15-5 and Lake Crystal I 12-2 before watching a 9-3 lead turn into a tournament-ending 10-9 loss to Buffalo.

"We hit the ball well and we did a good job bunting," said Okeson. "We were very aggressive at the plate. Defensively, we played very well except for one inning in our last game."

State tournament games were six-inning affairs that had a 90-minute time limit and a mercy rule that ended play with a 15-run difference after three innings or an 8-run spread after five innings.

Members of the Thief River Falls squad included Sam Klopp, Morgan Martell, Brooke Anderson, Sabrina Okeson, Rachael Schoenecker, Brandi Malwitz, Laurel Britten, Allie Okeson, Harley Alby, Avery Azure, Kaylee Koop, A.J. Mosbeck and Crystal Amundson.
